Mr. Giles Shaw: Chief officers of police are responsible for appointing constables, and it is for each chief officer to consider what steps should be taken to secure an adequate number of suitable recruits. At present there is no general shortage of good quality recruits.

Racial Incidents (Metropolitan Police District)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to the answer of 23 January and 16 December 1985, Official Report, column 581, he will now provide figures for the whole of 1985 relating to the numbers of racial incidents in the Metropolitan police district.

Mr. Mellor: I presume that the hon. Member is referring to the reply given to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks) on 10 December 1985, at column 583. I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the provisional number of racial incidents recorded in the Metropolitan police district in the whole of 1985 is 1,935.

Prisoners

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give separately the numbers of prisoners giving as their domicile either the Republic of Ireland or Northern Ireland who have been permitted to return home to the Republic of Ireland or Northern Ireland on parole for humanitarian reason in 1985.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not available.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will give separately the numbers of prisoners in British prisons giving as their place of domicile the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland; and, separately, how many of these prisoners are serving sentences for terrorist-type offences;

(2) how many prisoners in British prisons who give as their domicile Northern Ireland have been returned to Northern Ireland to serve the whole or part of their sentences in 1985; and how many of these prisoners were serving sentences for terrorist-type offences.

Mr. Mellor: Statistics are not kept centrally of prisoners' place of domicile prior to reception into prison, and this information could be obtained for the whole prison population only at disproportionate cost. The information which is readily available relates to prisoners' place of birth and to terrorist-type prisoners held in category A. At 30 November 1985 there were in England and Wales 640 prisoners who gave as their place of birth as the Republic of Ireland and 321 who gave Northern Ireland. Of these, 11 born in the Republic of Ireland and 30 born in Northern Ireland had been convicted of terrorist-type offences and were held in category A.

Of the four prisoners who were permanently transferred from England and Wales to Northern Ireland in 1985, two were domiciled there prior to reception into prison. Of these two, one is serving a sentence for acts of terrorism. Transfers between Scotland and Northern Ireland are the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Northern Ireland.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, in the light of improved security co-operation between the Republic of Ireland and Great Britain, he intends to review policy on the repatriation of prisoners giving as their domicile the Republic of Ireland to the Republic of Ireland in order to complete their prison sentences.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. Friend has no present plans to do so.

Deaths (Statistics)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of deaths which have occurred in Great Britain in the latest calendar year connected with present civil unrest in Northern Ireland; and how many of those deaths were caused by action taken by the police and by each of the known paramilitary groups, respectively.

Mr. Mellor: The available information for England and Wales relates to all homicides attributed to acts of terrorism connected with Northern Ireland and is published in table 4.5 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1984 (Cmnd. 9621). Five such deaths were recorded in 1984, and provisional information is that there were no such deaths in 1985. I understand from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland that there were no such deaths in Scotland in 1984 or 1985.

Terrorism

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the average period between remand and trial for prisoners refused bail and charged with terrorist-type offences in Great Britain in 1985 and the current year to date; and how many prisoners were held in this manner.

Mr. Mellor: The information which is readily available concerning prisoners charged with terrorist-type offences relates to prisoners who are currently in prison custody in England and Wales and in category A. It does not cover prisoners who have been released or downgraded.

In 1985, 11 prisoners were first received in custody charged with terrorist-type offences and placed in category A. As at 16 January 1986 none of the trials of these prisoners has been completed.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons detained under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts in each of the police areas of Metropolitan London, Dumfries and Galloway and Merseyside have been charged with offences under the Acts or under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Acts of 1973 and 1978 in 1985.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The available information is shown in the following table. Information on detentions in the three police forces areas specified is published quarterly in Home Office Statistical Bulletins (table 3 of issue 1/86).

Persons detained in 1985 under the Prevention of Terrorism Act 1984 and subsequent charges:

Police force area	Detained	Charged under the Prevention of Terrorism Act	*Charged under other legislation
Metropolitan Police district	61	2	8
Merseyside	23	3	2
Dumfries and Galloway	47	3	—
Other areas	135	7	28
Total	266	15	38

* Persons also charged with offences under the Prevention of Terrorism Act are included in the previous column. No person was charged with offences under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Acts 1973 and 1978.

Female Prisoners

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average period of custodial remand for female custodial prisoners in England and Wales for the years 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Mellor: The available information is published annually in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales" (table 2(g)) of the latest issue for 1984, (Cmnd. 9622). Corresponding figures for 1985 are not yet available.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average length of custodial sentences of female prisoners in England and Wales in 1985.

Mr. Mellor: Information on the distribution of the length of sentence of females received under sentence is published annually in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales" (tables 3.3, 3.13, 5.2, 5.9 and 7.1 of the latest issue for 1984) (Cmnd. 9622). The average length of sentence for females received into prison department establishments in England and Wales in 1984 to serve a determinate sentence, excluding those in default of payment of a fine, was about 18 weeks for young offenders and 23 weeks for adults. Information for 1985 is not yet available.

Crossbows

Miss Fookes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to ban the sale of crossbows to the general public in the light of information being sent to him by the hon. Member for Plymouth, Drake.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We are considering the matter and I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Prisons

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made towards redesignating prisons in Yorkshire and Humberside and in transferring prisoners.

Mr. Mellor: Hull will change from a dispersal prison to a local prison-remand centre on 22 February. Thorp Arch will change from a remand centre to a category C training prison on 3 March. Some transfer of prisoners has already begun.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the current state of industrial relations at her Majesty's prison, Leeds.

Mr. Mellor: There are no particular industrial relations problems at Her Majesty's prison, Leeds, at the present time. Relations between management and the prison service trade union are good.

Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Wiltshire as to the cost of providing protection for Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constable that the local police merely provided increased cover in the vicinity of this family's home for brief periods when there were several people outside the house.

Foreign Diplomats

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the average (a) hourly and (b) daily cost per man of providing protection for foreign diplomats; what was the total cost to public funds in 1985 of providing protection to diplomats based in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The average hourly and daily cost per man of providing protection for foreign diplomats cannot be calculated without disproportionate cost; the total cost to public funds in 1985 of providing protection to diplomats based in London is estimated to be about £14·65 million.

Riot Damage Claims (Birmingham)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many claims have been received under the Riot (Damages) Act in respect of the riot in Birmingham on 9 and 10 September 1985; how many have been met in full or in part; and how much compensation has been paid out.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The West Midlands county council is the relevant compensation authority for claims under the Riot (Damages) Act 1886 arising from the Handsworth disorders. The Home Office is not involved in the processing of claims.

Passports

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Leicester, East of 30 January, Official Report, column 582-3, he will introduce legislation to provide for a refund, proportionate to the amount of time left to the original expiry date, to be paid to the surviving spouse of a holder of a family passport in the event of it having been rendered invalid by the death of the holder; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: No. The basis on which the family passport is available is clearly indicated in the notes which accompany the application form. Exceptionally, passport offices do excercise discretion however, in issuing without charge a replacement passport where the family passport has not been used and not more than six months have elapsed between issue and death of the holder.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Leicester, East of 30 January, Official Report, column 582-83, he intends to introduce the new machine readable passport; what he estimates will be the cost of producing a passport of this type; and what he expects will be the relevant scale of fees.

Mr. Waddington: The aim is to introduce the new machine readable passport in 1987; it should cost no more to print and produce than the existing passport, the present cost of which is about £1·40. I cannot anticipate at this stage what the scale of fees will then be.

Firearms (Heathrow)

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 486, if the Zimbabwean bird scarer is the only foreign national authorised to carry a firearm at Heathrow.

Mr. Hurd: I confirm that he is the only person who holds a firearm certificate in connection with the performance of duties at Heathrow. As a Zimbabwean he is a Commonwealth citizen.

GLC Lorry Ban (Policing)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what priority he attaches within the overall policing requirements of London to the enforcement by the Metropolitan police of the Greater London council's lorry ban in London; what resources are currently being devoted to this task; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: It is for the Commissioner to determine, in the light of other demands on his resources, the amount of attention to be given to the enforcement of a particular aspect of the criminal law at a particular time.

Burglar Alarms

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to seek to provide that keyholders of premises fitted with alarm bells should be obliged to make themselves available at the premises within 20 minutes and that the names of two keyholders to such premises be notified to the police; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I have been asked to reply.

The code of practice on noise from audible intruder alarms, issued under the provisions of part III of the Control of Pollution Act 1974, recommends that keyholders of premises with alarm bells should take measures on the lines described by the hon. Member. The code, though not having the force of law, is widely used by local authorities and magistrates' courts in the exercise of their powers under the Act, and I see no need for any change.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

International Organisations (Co-ordination)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what machinery Her Majesty's Government are involved in to ensure co-ordination of the standardisation work of the European Economic Community, the European Free Trade Association, the Council of Europe and the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe.

Mr. Howard: No formal machinery exists to co-ordinate the standards work of all these bodies, but along with other Government Departments the Department of Trade and Industry fully supports the efforts of the organisations to reduce technical barriers to trade in Europe, and it co-ordinates the Government input to the work.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

Mr. Butcher: All voluntary bodies grant-aided by my Department accept the need to maintain political impartiality.

Biotechnology

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is now able to make a statement arising from the studies commissioned by his Department's biotechnology unit into the possible impact on the process plant industry of the development of biotechnology.

Mr. Pattie: The studies commissioned by the biotechnology unit indicates that biotechnology will have a significant impact on the process plant industry. By the year 2000 it is estimated that equipment to the value of more than £300 million will be installed in the United Kingdom and more than 10 times that value in the rest of the world. The United Kingdom has the potential skills to become a major supplier of equipment and plant installations for biotechnology. This information has been made available to United Kingdom companies and my Department is encouraging process plant manufacturers to tackle these potential markets vigorously. The Department is giving direct assistance in collaborative projects aimed at pre-competitive research and, with some companies, in specific product developments.

Copyright

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to publish the White Paper on copyright.

Mr. Pattie: The White Paper on copyright law is in its final stages of preparation and I hope that publication will not be long delayed.

Tobacco

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much financial assistance was given to tobacco companies under the various industry Acts in England, Scotland and Wales, respectively, in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The following assistance has been provided under the Industrial Development Act 1982 (as amended) to tobacco companies in England, Scotland and Wales in the calendar year to 31 December 1985:

REGIONAL SELECTIVE ASSISTANCE

Section 7

Total payments made £225,000. (Scotland £200,000 and Wales £25,000. No payments were made to tobacco companies in England.)

Section 8

No payments made.

NEW REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT GRANTS

Payments made £99,000.

The assistance was all in grant form. Details of payments of new regional development grants are confidential between the applicants and the Department. The Department does, however, however, publish quarterly in British Business list of companies which have received one or more payments of new RDG, which cumulatively amount to more than £25,000 in the quarter. No such payments have yet been published in respect of the tobacco industry.

Recording Tapes

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will introduce legislation to impose a statutory requirement for the payment of a royalty on the sale of blank tape and at the same time to render lawful recording in the home for non-commercial purposes; and if he will make a statement:

(2) if there has been any change in Government policy towards the imposition of a statutory requirement for the payment of a royalty on the sale of blank tape since the publication of the Green Paper, paragraph 3.2, Cmnd. 9445, "The Recording and Rental of Audio and Video Copyright Material", and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The Government are still considering whether or not to introduce a levy for the benefit of copyright owners on the sale of blank recording tape intended for home use. If a levy were to be introduced, recording of copyright material in the home for private purposes would be licensed at the same time. We will announce our conclusions in the White Paper on copyright law which is now in the final stages of preparation.

Voluntary Export Restraint Agreements

Mr. Fallon Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Darlington of 29 January, the careful scrutiny to which his Department submits voluntary export restraint agreements includes identifiable studies of their effects and costs.

Mr. Howard: The Department's scrutinies of trade restraints cover all relevant factors, including the effects and costs.

Cotton Velvet

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) at what level of imports agreement has been reached for the import of cotton velvet (category 32) from Turkey in the recent voluntary restraint agreement;

(2) on which date a voluntary restraint agreement regarding imports of cotton velvet (category 32) from Turkey was reached.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

CR6 Taxi

Mr. Bendall asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether, in his discussions with London Taxis International about the future of the CR6 taxi, the company has indicated that it may wish to abandon this project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: As my hon. Friend will have seen reported in the press on 29 January, London Taxis International has said that it no longer proposes to produce a CR6 taxi based on the Range Rover design but aims to develop and introduce a new taxi based on the existing FX4. The company states that the new taxi will still have the ability to carry wheelchair-bound passengers. My Department is discussing the implications of this change of plan with LTI.

European Airbus

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about future launching aid for the European Airbus.

Mr. Pattie: On 27 January 1986 the supervisory board of Airbus Industrie approved the first step towards the launch of the new Airbus A330 and A340 programmes. This decision does not, however, constitute a commitment to the development and production of these aircraft.

British Aerospace has indicated that it would expect, in due course, to seek Government launch aid in respect of participation in these programmes.

Gas Appliances

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to introduce safety legislation for gas appliances sold in the United Kingdom; if he plans to introduce separate legislation to cover the sale of gas cookers; how many accidents have occurred in each of the last three years involving uncertified imported gas cookers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

ENERGY

Mersey Barrage

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on future policy towards the proposed Mersey barrage.

Mr. David Hunt: The report on the Mersey barrage has been received by my Department and it is being studied carefully. I will consider seriously any proposals for taking the work forward.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he plans to make public funding available in connection with the proposed Mersey barrage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department has recently received a copy of the Mersey barrage report and is studying it with interest. I understand that further support for the project is being sought in the private and public sector, and I will consider any proposals carefully.

Insulation Work

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he has any plans to develop the role of voluntary sector based projects in the execution of insulation work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) on 27 January. My Department will continue to support the expansion of this programme in collaboration with the Manpower Services Commission's community programme.

Coal Industry

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will list the meetings held by Ministers and his Department with members of the European Economic Community Commission and the European Coal and Steel Community since January 1985 on the proposed new Community rules for state aids to the coal industry;

(2) what powers he has to stop the introduction of the new European Economic Community Commission rules for state aids to the coal industry.

Mr. David Hunt: The European Commission proposal, COM (85) 525, sets out a new regime to permit the payment of state aids to the coal industry without infringing the ECSC treaty. This replaces the existing decision of 1976.

The United Kingdom has no reason to oppose the introduction of a continuing regime of this kind without which all state aids to the coal industry would become illegal.

My right hon. Friend's objective in the negotiations currently under way in the Council of Ministers is to ensure that the new regime give maximum flexibility to individual member states in the challenging task of creating sound and economically viable coal industries which can compete in the world market.

The proposed regime has been discussed at the following meetings of the European Communities: by Ministers at the Energy Council of 11 November 1985 and by officials at the high level energy group of 29 October 1985 and at the following ECSC working groups:

22 October 1985
26 November 1985
9 December 1985
13/14 January 1986
27/28 January 1986

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has made to the European Economic Community Commission and the European Coal and Steel Community in reply to their new Community energy objectives, in particular the elimination of certain existing types of aids to the British coal industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The proposed new Community energy objectives have been discussed twice by the Council of Energy Ministers. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has argued that the new objectives should be seen as markers, not as prescriptive targets. The draft objectives do not propose the elimination of aids to the coal industry.

North Sea Oil

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will now take steps to reduce North sea oil production; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: No, and no.

Oil Production Levels

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Energy what formal representations he has received from the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries or Saudi Arabia about the level of United Kingdom oil production; and what reply has been given.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: None.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Clinical Academic Staff

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the effect on recruitment and retention of university clinical academic staff of the discrepancies in pay between them and National Health Service staff.

Mr. Walden: The present salary differences between National Health Service hospital doctors and university clinical academic staff reflect the fact that the 1985 pay settlement for the former group was concluded last June, whereas the university settlement has yet to be decided. (Until last June the salaries of both groups were broadly in line). Recruitment and retention of the university staff are unlikely to be affected significantly by the different timing of these settlements.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by his Department with grant aid in the last financial year for which figures are available, and the size of the grant so given.

Mr. Dunn: Details of grants made by the Department in 1984-85 under section 17 of the Education (Grant) Regulations 1983 are listed in table 23 of the Department's annual report 1984, a copy of which is in the Library.

In addition, grants were given to the following national associations under section 19 of the regulations:

* These Regulations were superseded by The Education (Grant) Regulations 1983, with effect from 1 April 1983.

† Where the grant included an element of research, as in the case of the bodies marked ‡, the relevant sums are also reported in Appendix I.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations, and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available.

Mr. Dunn: The Department gives no grants to any such agencies.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

Mr. Dunn: The Department makes grants in the light of the relevant statutory provisions for purposes which are specified to the recipients. The recipients are responsible to the Department for ensuring that the funds concerned are not used improperly. If my hon. Friend has any particular grant in mind, perhaps he would let me know.

Teachers (Dispute)

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' strike.

Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the teachers' pay dispute.

Sir Keith Joseph: I refer my hon. Friends to the statement which I gave today.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has about the effect on the education of children of the selective disruptive action targeted on particular constituencies; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: There can be no doubt that disruptive action has adversely affected the education of all the children who have been caught up in it. I deeply regret that. I have no particular evidence on the extent of the damage done to children in targeted areas. I have said many times how much I deplore the attempt by some unions to apply pressure by concentrating disruptive action on areas perceived by them to be politically sensitive.

Examinations (York)

Mr. Gregory asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has regarding the proportion of pupils in York taking GCE A-levels, O-levels and certificate of secondary education in each year since 1978; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The information requested is not available in the Department for areas smaller than local education authorities.

Foreign Languages

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) how many (a) secondary and (b) primary schools in England offer Japanese as a subject;

(2) how many schools in England offer French on the curriculum;

(3) how many schools in England teach Russian.

Mr. Chris Patten: Information is not available centrally on the extent of teaching of Japanese. The 1984 sample survey of secondary school staffing, carried out by this Department, gives information on pupils studying French and Russian in maintained secondary schools in England. Estimates for year groups one to five are as follows. No information on language teaching is available centrally for primary schools.

Percentages of schools with pupils studying named subject

	French	Russian
Year group 1	96	Nil
Year group 2	98	1
Year group 3	99	2
Year group 4	99	2
Year group 5	98	2

Medical Research Council

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the proportion of (a) members and (b) staff of the Medical Research Council who are active medical practitioners; who advises him on the composition of the Medical Research Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: I understand that as at 1 January 1986 seven members of the Medical Research Council (MRC) and 170 members of MRC's staff were medical practitioners engaged in the clinical care of patients. These figures constitute, respectively, 37 per cent. of the council's membership and 16 per cent. of the scientifically qualified staff.

In appointing members to the council, my right hon. Friend consults those ministerial colleagues principally concerned as well as the council itself; and, in the case of members appointed on account of their qualifications in science, the president of the Royal Society. Such consultation is in accordance with the terms of "Framework for Government Research and Development" (Cmnd. 5046) and of the MRC's charter.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what expert advice his Department offers to the Medical Research Council regarding essential areas for new medical research; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: None. It is not the Department's function to offer such advice. It is for the Medical Research Council (MRC) to decide how to apportion the grant-in-aid it receives from the Department's science budget between the various areas of science which it supports, and to take a view on which new areas should be considered essential. However, in advising my right hon. Friend on the allocation of the science budget amongst the research councils and other bodies the Advisory Board for the Research Councils broadly considers, and explores with MRC, the balance of its scientific programmes. There is also continuous liaison at all levels between the MRC and the health departments.

Grants

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report the number of grants given in 1984-85 under the Education Act 1944, section 100(1)(b); to whom these grants were given; and what were the individual sums involved.

Sir Keith Joseph: Details of grants given by the Department in 1984-85 to bodies (other than local education authorities) for educational services, under section 17 of the Education (Grant) Regulations 1983 are listed in table 23 of the Department's annual report 1984, a copy of which is in the Library. The following grants were also given in 1984-85 under regulations made under the Education Act 1944, section 100(1)(b):

	Grants 1984-85 £000

* These Regulations were superseded by The Education (Grant) Regulations 1983, with effect from 1 April 1983.

† Where the grant included an element of research, as in the case of the bodies marked ‡, the relevant sums are also reported in Appendix I.

Teachers (Training)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list all the institutions in England and Wales which are responsible for the pre-service training of teachers, giving in each case their total capacity and current complement of students in full-time equivalents.

Mr. Walden: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Teachers (Liverpool)

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how many teachers the Liverpool education authority is below establishment and as to the distribution between types of schools and individual schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: Levels of teacher staffing are the responsibility of local education authorities, which alone have up-to-date information on posts filled. Pupil-teacher ratios within primary and secondary schools in the Liverpool education authority were 20·6:1 and 15·8:1, respectively, in January 1985. The equivalent figures for England were 22·2:1 and 16·1:1. More detailed information in respect of individual schools could not be provided without disproportionate cost.

Teachers (Pay)

Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assumptions are made in the White Paper "The Government's Expenditure Plans" for the years 1986-87 to 1988-89 for the likely increase in teachers' salaries.

Sir Keith Joseph: The plans are consistent with moderate increases in both 1985-86 and 1986-87. No planning assumptions have been made for later years, since no decisions have yet been taken about the level of total local authority expenditure after 1986-87.

School Buildings

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received regarding funding for repairs and maintenance of school buildings.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has received no recent representations concerned wholly with this subject. However, last October's report by the National Confederation of Parent Teacher Associations surveying "The State of Schools in England and Wales" referred to the state of repair and maintenance of schools included in its survey. In addition, resolutions calling for increased funding for repairs and maintenance are among those passed at the 1985 annual conferences of the Council of Local Education Authorities (CLEA) and the Campaign for the Advancement of State Education (CASE). Both my right hon. Friend and I receive letters on the subject of repairs and maintenance from time to time.

Students (Parental Contributions)

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many parents deemed to be paying parental contributions to student children have nil, one, two or three or more dependent children.

Mr. Walden: My Department does not have information on the number of dependent children of parents liable for a parental contribution.

Teachers (Professional Body)

Mr. Lord asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make it his policy to seek the formation of a professional, self-regulating body of teachers, along the same lines as the General Medical Council for doctors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend has been asked from time to time about his views on the case for a general teaching council, or similar self-regulating body for the profession. He has replied that he would need to be convinced that such proposals commanded wide support and safeguarded the interests of producers and consumers alike, before the Government could consider whether to support the establishment of such a body. That remains the Government's view.

ENVIRONMENT

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if the rate support grant is to be reduced by an amount equal to the 20 per cent. rates contribution proposed to be made by recipients of social security benefits.

Mrs. Rumbold: The proposal that all householders who are recipients of social security benefits should pay a minimum contribution to their rates bill is only one of a number of changes to housing benefits put forward in the White Paper "Reform of Social Security: Programme for Action" (Cmnd. 9691). Under the reformed housing benefit scheme, the majority of local authorities' benefit costs will continue to be met by direct subsidy outside the rate support grant, with a proportion of the remainder being supported by rate support grant. The aggregate of rate support grant will need to be adjusted to take account of the White Paper proposals but at present it is not possible to say by how much.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the order for the transfer of Greater London council staff after abolition will be made.

Mr. Tracey: Very shortly.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by his Department with grant aid in the last financial year for which figures are available, and the size of the grant so given.

Sir George Young: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 3 June 1985, at column 46, to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks).

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations, and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: The agencies to which this Department gives grant aid which provide support for voluntary bodies and organisations, and the amount of the grant-in-aid that they received from the Department in 1984-85, are as follows:

Agency	Grant-in-aid £ million
Countryside Commission	12·967
Development Commission	19·859
Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission	49·323
Nature Conservancy Council	18·127
Sports Council	28·603

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

Sir George Young: This Department and its sponsored bodies have made it clear that grants cannot be given to voluntary bodies and organisations to use for political purposes. Grants are monitored to confirm that expenditure is confined to the purposes for which the grant was given.

Brixton Recreation Centre

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the financing, management and ownership of Brixton recreation centre after 31 March.

Mr. Tracey: It is the intention that the responsibility for sport and recreation facilities such as the Brixton recreation centre should fall to the boroughs in which they are located.

Derelict Land (Bradford)

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much derelict or under-utilised land there is in the Bradford metropolitan district council area; who owns it; and how much has been disposed of under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980.

Sir George Young: Information on the total amount of derelict or under-utilised land in the Bradford metropolitan district council area is not available. Separate figures from the 1982 survey of derelict land in England recorded 326 hectares of such land in the district of which 39 hectares were publicly owned. The figures on land disposed of under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 is not available. Unused or under-utilised land held by the public sector is recorded on the Bradford land register set up under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1985. Currently 379 hectares are so registered. To date 102 hectares have been removed from the registers, of which 87 hectares have been sold or leased.

Parish Town Councils

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many parish town councils there are in England and Wales.

Mrs. Rumbold: There are about 8,500 parish councils in England and about 780 community councils in Wales. These numbers include councils which have adopted town status.

Plaschem Boards

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will institute a survey into the use of Plaschem boards in the construction of council house dwellings.

Sir George Young: No. I am not aware of any need for the Department to institute such a survey.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning the use of Plaschem boards in the building industry; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: A number of representations were received prior to 1977 when the fire research station published a report on its investigations of house fires involving Plaschem ceilings. This concluded that the replacement or underdrawing of plastic ceilings would not lead to greater safety overall. Since that date the Department has received one representation in 1984.

I have seen the hon. Member's letter of 22 January 1986 to the Secretary of State, and I will be replying to the representations shortly.

Anglers (Toxic Lead Shot)

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the implications of the bans imposed by some water authorities and fishery owners on the use by anglers of toxic lead shot for his plans to delay legislation on the use of such shot until 1987 at the earliest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government propose to ban the sale and import of most lead for angling in the United Kingdom from 1 January 1987 if the voluntary approach has not worked by the end of the current course fishing season (15 March). The Nature Conservancy Council is monitoring the situation and will report to the Secretary of State on the effectiveness of these voluntary measures, following which a decision will be made on whether it is necessary to proceed with statutory regulations. This decision is a separate matter from any action water authorities may take.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department is monitoring the introduction of anglers' non-toxic lead shot; what information he has on the availability of cheap alternatives to toxic lead shot; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Yes. A number of satisfactory non-toxic alternatives to lead weights for angling are now available. Although these products are not as cheap as lead, they are all reusable.

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue a national code of conduct within which water authorities and fishery owners can frame their bylaws in order to establish a uniform national framework on the use of non-toxic lead shot in angling.

Mr. Waldegrave: As part of the package of measures to help protect swans from poisoning by anglers' lead announced by the Government last July, my right hon. Friends the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretary of State for Wales issued a draft model byelaw to aid water authorities in considering whether they wish to propose a ban on the use of anglers' lead in their area.

£1 Project

Mr. Mudd asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many individual donations of £1 he has received under the £1 project organised by Friends of the Earth; and to what purpose the donations thus received will be directed.

Mrs. Rumbold: A total of £873 has been received to date. Since most donors have not given their addresses, the money is being sent on to the Friends of the Earth.

Welbeck Land Reclamation Scheme

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received the assurances sought from West Yorkshire county council and Wakefield district council on the Welbeck land reclamation scheme; if he will publish details of the arrangements proposed by the two councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: On 6 August 1985 my hon. Friend the Member for Sutton and Cheam (Mr. Macfarlane) announced the Government's intention to contribute up to £1·5 million to the Welbeck scheme provided that certain assurances were received regarding financial contributions by other parties, the supply of colliery spoil, responsibility for the long term management of the scheme and a commitment to monitor and report on progress. Satisfactory assurances have been received from the National Coal Board, West Yorkshire county council and Wakefield district council and work on the Welbeck project is under way. The scheme is currently being managed by West Yorkshire county council; on 1 April ownership of the land will pass to Wakefield district council. I understand that discussions on the management of the scheme are currently under way between the various successor authorities and between members of the West Yorkshire waste management joint committee.

"Paying for Local Government"

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what criminal sanctions people will face who fail to register in relation to the community charge he is proposing in "Paying for Local Government", Cmnd. 9714; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: This must be a matter for consultation with local government and other interested parties. We had envisaged that the sanction would be similar to that presently applying for electoral registration purposes.

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, under his proposals in, "Paying for Local Government", the community charge precepted by parish and community councils is envisaged to be precepted in addition to sums precepted by the rating authorities for their own purposes; and if it is envisaged that the community charge payable by persons living within the area of a particular parish will reflect, as regards the parish community charge, solely the charge raised by that parish.

Mr. Waldegrave: We envisage that indivudal community charges would be the sum of the amounts levied by all the local authorities, including any parish council precept.

Urban Programme

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how the urban programme for 1986-87 which he announced in the Official Report, column 417, on 27 January, compares with expected expenditure for 1985-86; and if he will express the comparisons on the same cost basis.

Mr. John Patten: I shall answer this question shortly.

Sports Council

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 28 January, Official Report, column 468, what proportion of its total resources the Sports Council devoted to organisations directly concerned with sport for the disabled in each of the last three financial years.

Mr. Tracey: Grants from the Sports Council to the British Sports Association for the Disabled and Riding for the Disabled Association represented 0·3 per cent. of the council's total resources in each of the last three years. These were complemented by considerable support to local authorities and other organisations to assist schemes of benefit to the disabled and the community as a whole.

Avon County Council (Grant)

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of central Government grant Avon county council will receive in 1986-87; what level of grant will be received in 1985-86; and what are the recommended levels of expenditure in those years.

Mrs. Rumbold: The figures for Avon county council are as follows:

1985-86
Expenditure target	316·8
Latest budget	327·1
Latest block grant entitlement	91·5
1986-87
RSG Settlement Expenditure assumption (1985-86 budget plus 3·4 per cent.)	338·9
Block grant at this level	85·3

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current grant-related expenditure allocation for Avon county council; what is the average grant-related expenditure allocation for all shire counties; and what are the reasons for the difference.

Mrs. Rumbold: Avon county council's GRE for 1986-87 is £341·060 million. This is equivalent to £362·91 per head of population. This compares with an average for all shire counties of £381·77 per head. Avon's GRE per head is slightly below the average mainly in respect of education. Avon has fewer children of school age per head of population than shire counties as a whole.

GLC (Grants)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to the Haringey women's training and educational centre for which the Greater London council applied on 20 November 1985;

(2) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to the Newham allotments wasteland project for which the Greater London council applied on 20 November 1985;

(3) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to the Chelsea social club for which the Greater London council applied on 13 November 1985;

(4) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to the Limehouse Amenity Trust Ltd 12for which the Greater London council applied on 11 November 1985;

(5) why he has not yet given his consent to a grant to the London County bus services riverbus service for which the Greater London council applied on 11 November 1985;

(6) why he has not yet given his consent to an additional £2,800 grant to the Irish In Britain representation group in Camden, for which the Greater London council applied on 20 November 1985.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on Tuesday 21 January at column 141.

Green Belt (Birmingham-Coventry)

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to delay any decision on developments in the green belt in the area between Birmingham and Coventry until a local plan has been agreed for the area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: It is not desirable that decisions on planning applications should be delayed simply because a local plan is in preparation. After 1 April it will be for Solihull and Coventry councils to decide how to carry forward development planning in the area of concern to my hon. Friend, subject to the relevant provisions of planning legislation. A great deal of the area is already confirmed green belt.

Government Expenditure

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out in the Official Report tables showing net rates as a percentage of income assuming the operation of rebates as at present, and on a basis comparable with the tables at figure 9, page 20 and figure 11, page 25 of Cmnd. 9714.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall reply to the hon. Member shortly.

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, what assumptions about size of households are made in respect of the information given on page 107 of Cmnd. 9714 as to household incomes.

Mr. Waldegrave: No assumptions have been made about household size. The information on page 107 is based on a sample of actual households derived from the family expenditure survey, with income adjusted to reflect differences in household composition, in the way described in paragraph F14.

Local Government Expenditure

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, whether the information given at figure 9, paragraph 3.10 of Cmnd. 9716 "Paying for Local Government" assumes the prior implementation of the proposals in the social security White Paper Cmnd. 9691.

Mr. Waldegrave: Yes. The detailed assumptions underlying figure 9 are set out in paragraph F.3 (page 103).

Birmingham Airport

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to prevent West Midlands county council from stripping Birmingham airport of its financial reserves immediately prior to abolition.

Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking to allow Birmingham international airport to retain its reserves intact on abolition of the West Midlands county council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend will make a full statement shortly on the treatment of balances after abolition. He intends to accept the case which has been put to him for allowing Birmingham international airport to retain its reserves. I trust that in the circumstances West Midlands county council will not wish to spend the reserves before abolition.

BNFL (Uranium Discharge)

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the circumstances of the discharge of 440 kg of uranium from British Nuclear Fuels Limited, Sellafield into the Irish sea on 23 January; whether any investigation of the circumstances will be undertaken by Government Departments; and if any additional environmental monitoring is planned following this recent discharge.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Solihull (Mr. Taylor) on 31 January at column 652. The information available so far suggests no need to extend the existing comprehensive environmental monitoring programme.

Parish Reviews

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities which have carried out parish reviews in accordance with the provisions of the Local Government Act 1972.

Mrs. Rumbold: I am indebted to the Local Government Boundary Commission for England for the following information. List A is of districts where the council had completed a parish review and made a report to the commission by mid-November. List B is of other districts where the commission understands that a parish review is in progress.

Liverpool City Council

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his recent meeting with representatives of the Liverpool city council.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I met representatives of Liverpool city council on 30 January. I had said I would do so once the council acted legally by making a balanced budget for 1985-86.

I told the councillors that I hoped they were now ready to tackle Liverpool's acknowledged housing and environmental problems in a spirit of partnership. But I warned them not to expect any more cash from the Government. I pointed out that the House had approved the rate support grant report which gives effect to the RSG settlement for 1986-87 for all local authorities. Under the settlement, Liverpool city council could qualify to receive RSG next year approaching £130 million, some £10 million more than in 1985-86.

I made clear to the councillors that they should now use the resources available to them more effectively for the benefit of people in Liverpool.

Housing (Langbaurgh)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 15 January, Official Report, column 574, how many WCs were in the Normanby three-bedroomed and the Ormesby two-bedroomed houses, respectively, at the Spencerbeck estate in Langbaurgh (i) before and (ii) after refurbishment.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1986, c. 298]: I regret that my reply of Wednesday 15 January, Official Report, columns 574-76, was incorrect. This was because of changes to the details of the refurbishment scheme following the approval of urban development grant.

"Ormesby" and "Normanby" are names given by the developer to the refurbished two-bedroomed and three-bedroomed houses. The Ormesby, which has two WCs, is formed either by the conversion of an existing two-bedroomed house or by the conversion of a three-storey, four-bedroomed house to two storeys with two bedrooms. In the case of the former there is a gain of one WC whilst in the latter the number of WCs remains the same. The Normanby house previously had two WCs but, as a result of conversion, will lose one of these in order to provide improved downstairs circulation and more space in the living room.

The details of the internal refurbishment proposed by the developer were not a material factor in the decision to approve urban development grant.

EMPLOYMENT

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Steel asked the Paymaster General what criteria are used to assess the extent of the success of the youth training scheme.

Mr. Trippier: The aims of YTS are to give young people a better start in work and adult life and to provide a better trained young work force which is more versatile, adaptable and productive. The criteria used to evaluate the success of the scheme are related to these aims and involve the assessment of the effectiveness of the training programmes, covering such issues as the quality of the training provided and the meeting of specific requirements.

The latest results of the Manpower Services Commission's monitoring show that by the end of October 1985 91 per cent. of the 1985-86 YTS schemes which had then been assessed were regarded as generally effective. The MSC also carries out a regular follow-up survey of trainees, about three months after they have left YTS, to find out what they are then doing and what they think of the training they received. Between April and July 1985 61 per cent. of those who left YTS obtained employment. Eighty per cent. of trainees who responded to the follow-up inquiry have said they found their time on YTS useful.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by his Department with grant aid in the last financial year for which figures are available, and the size of the grant so given.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My Department does not grant aid to any voluntary bodies or organisations. We do, together with the Manpower Services Commission, make substantial payments to voluntary bodies for running employment and training projects under Government programmes.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations, and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My Department gives a grant in aid to the Manpower Services Commission which in turn provides financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations. In 1984-85 the total grant to the commission was £1,436,467,000. The commission paid approximately £415 million to the voluntary sector through the community programme, the voluntary projects programme and the YTS, although the payment in respect of the community programme came from Department of Employment voted funds. There are other payments in addition which cannot readily be qualified.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Paymaster General if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Neither my Department, nor the agencies for which it is responsible, grant-aid any voluntary bodies or organisations. However, payments are made to them in return for services given as sponsors of employment and training programmes. The agreements under which these payments are made usually require sponsors to ensure that their projects and programmes do not involve political activity, or have political objectives that could bring the programme into public controversy or disrepute. We regularly monitor programmes to ensure compliance with the terms of these agreements.

Tobacco Industry

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Paymaster General how many people were employed in the tobacco industry in the United Kingdom in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lang: The Department's employment statistics are produced on a quarterly basis and cannot be expressed in precisely the manner requested. The latest figures for employees in employment in the tobacco industry (activity heading 4290 of the 1980 Standard Industrial Classification) in Great Britain are to be found in table 1.4 of the labour market data section of the Employment Gazette for January 1986, a copy of which is in the Library.

Figures for the United Kingdom are not available.

Flaschem Boards

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Employment how many accidents or fires have been reported to the Health and Safety Executive in which Flaschem boards were involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: This information is not available.

Tourism

Sir Peter Emery asked the Paymaster General what action he is taking to alter the distribution of Government funds devoted to the promotion of tourism; if he will increase the funds allocated to the south-west; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Discussions are currently taking place with the British Tourist Authority and the English Tourist Board to decide how the substantial increase in the boards' financial provision for next year will be divided between them and section 4 and how it will be spent. It is our intention to ensure that a substantial part of the money will benefit areas of the country which could attract more tourists and where unemployment is high. We have asked the boards to place particular emphasis on improving job opportunities in tourism and on encouraging greater dispersal of visitors. The needs of the regions including the south-west will be taken fully into account in the preparation and consideration of the boards' budget proposals.

Labour Statistics (Leeds)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Paymaster General when regular statistics of unemployment in individual wards of Leeds city council will be available.

Mr. Lang: The information is available and may be obtained from the House of Commons Library.

Jobcentres

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Paymaster General what is the approximate cost of maintaining jobcentres including the payment of their staff, incidental expenses and other running costs, and how many centres there are in England and Wales.

Mr. Lang: The total cost in 1985-86 of running jobcentres is expected to be about £128 million. Of this £113 million relates to England and Wales, where there are at present 890 jobcentres.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Rural Environment

Mr. Key asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to assist farmers and those living in the countryside to improve the rural environment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: In conjunction with my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Employment and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment, I am today launching a farm and countryside initiative linked to, and funded through, the Government's community programme run by the Manpower Services Commission. This has the backing of the Development Commission, the Countryside Commission, the Nature Conservancy Council and the agricultural training board.

The bodies which are our partners in this initiative, together with local authorities and others, are already heavily engaged in rural development and in improving the rural environment, in some cases through the community programme. But much remains to be done. I know that farmers and landowners are particularly concerned about the future of the communities in which they live and I believe that they will be anxious to play a full part in such work.

In addition to providing valuable opportunities for long-term unemployed people, the purpose of this initiative, therefore, is to encourage rural communities to put forward worthwhile projects of benefit to their own areas. If approved, these would be carried out by community programme participants doing work which would not otherwise be undertaken. As with other community programme projects the Government will, within agreed limits, reimburse the project organisers for the wage bill and associated material costs of those employed on projects under this initiative.

The initiative is a co-operative venture. My 19 divisional offices serving country areas throughout England will provide the liaison point for the initiative and will work closely with other rural agencies, in particular with rural community councils and in rural development areas with the rural development programme committees, and with the staff and area manpower boards of the Manpower Services Commission. Those who are interested in putting forward projects under the initiative should get in touch with their local MAFF divisional office.

The National Westminster bank has kindly agreed to offer support for projects under the initiative. Agreement in principle has been reached with the British Trust for Conservation Volunteers to operate some joint ventures with us on a pilot basis. I hope that farmers, local firms and individuals will be ready either to put forward projects under the initiative or to provide assistance in the form of materials, equipment and other facilities.

Beekeepers (Intervention Sugar)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why he will not supply sugar from intervention stores to British beekeepers at the same price he makes it available to the Soviet Union.

Mrs. Fenner: There are no intervention stocks in the United Kingdom, or normally in other Member States, although the European Community does export quota sugar on to the world market with the aid of refunds financed primarily by levies on producers. The decision on whether to introduce a scheme to provide reduced price denatured sugar for feeding bees is primarily a matter for the European Commission. Previous schemes have not proved cost-effective; they have resulted in little increase in sugar consumption, high unit administrative costs and created problems for beekeepers because of the denaturing of the sugar required to prevent abuse.

Libya (Wheat Sales)

Mr. Hicks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, following the United States trade embargo, when and who authorised the sale of wheat to Libya out of intervention stocks, the quantity involved and the price per ton; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The quantity and selling price of wheat released from intervention stocks for export is determined weekly by the Commission in consultation with the cereals management committee. Exporters are free to find their own markets and are not required to provide details of destination except in those cases where a particular destination attracts a special export refund. This is not the case for Libya and therefore it is not possible to identify intervention stocks exported to Libya.

East of Scotland College of Agriculture (ADAS)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Central (Mr. Fletcher) on 28 January, Official Report, col 427, if he will make a further statement on the funding of the proposed Agricultural Development and Advisory Service veterinary presence within the east of Scotland college of agriculture with particular reference to the relationship between the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service and the college, and the overhead costs which may be attributable to the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service presence.

Mr. Jopling: Discussions with the east of Scotland college of agriculture on detailed arrangements have not yet been concluded but annual accommodation and associated overhead costs payable by my Department to the college authorities in respect of the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service veterinary unit to be located there are expected to be in the order of some £34,000.

Agricultural Intervention Board

Mr. Grist asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has for the relocation of the Agricultural Intervention Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: None.

TRANSPORT

Rail Closures

12. Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Transport what length of railway has been approved for closure to passenger traffic during the last five years.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend has given consent to proposals from the British Railways Board to close in all 85 route miles to rail passenger services during the last five years.

Channel Tunnel

13. Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport when next he intends to meet his French counterpart for further discussion on the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Ridley: I have no such plans at the moment.

14. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a further statement on progress on the fixed link project.

Mr. Ridley: A White Paper to be published tomorrow will explain the reasons for the choice of the Channel tunnel group project and chart the way forward to its implementation.

33. Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to safeguard the interests of British Rail Engineering Ltd., in relation to the contracts for new rolling stock arising from the Channel tunnel scheme.

Mr. David Mitchell: The interests of BREL, like those of the remainder of United Kingdom industry, will be best served if it offers equipment that matches the needs of the tunnel operators, or the different national railways. I know that the BRB is already discussing its requirements with industry.

38. Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he proposes to make available additional resources to British Rail to assist with the financing of cross-London links to connect with the lines leading to the Channel tunnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for West Bromwich, East (Mr. Snape) earlier today.

40. Mr. Jessel asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a further statement on progress on the Channel tunnel.

Mr. David Mitchell: A White Paper to be published tomorrow will explain the reasons for the choice of the Channel Tunnel Group project and chart the way forward to its implementation.

43. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Transport, following his decision on a fixed Channel link, whether he is satisfied that British Rail will be able to compete successfully against SNCF; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: British Rail and SNCF propose to work in partnership to provide a joint passenger service.

46. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has made any assessment of the infrastructure improvements needed to the transportation system in the north-west of England for that region to take advantage of the proposed Channel tunnel.

Mr. David Mitchell: The Channel tunnel will provide easier access to continental markets for industry throughout the United Kingdom. In this connection I do not see any particular problems arising from the infrastructure of the north-west which inhibit the region from benefiting from the Channel tunnel. The transportation needs of the region are, and will continue to be, constantly monitored. The current trunk road investment programme for the region is of the order of £500 million.

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Transport if any assessment was carried out by his Department into the public preference for a particular type of fixed link across the Channel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The views of local authorities, other interested bodies and members of the public on the proposals received were invited during the assessment period and were taken fully into account in reaching the decision.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Transport what advice was given to intending developers of the Channel fixed link about the duration of the concession which was being offered; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The "Invitation to Promoters" invited promoters to make proposals as to the duration of the concession and to justify them; this matter is now under negotiation with Channel Tunnel Group-France-Manche.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Transport if agreement has been reached between the French and British Governments about the duration of the concession for the rail tunnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The duration of the concession will be specified in the concession agreement which is being negotiated between the two Governments and the promoters.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Transport what indications were given by the promoters of schemes for a Channel fixed link of the length of concession which would be required to make each of their projects, respectively, profitable; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The "Invitation to Promoters" of a Channel fixed link made clear that the Government would respect considerations of commercial and industrial confidentiality in deciding what material supplied by promoters should be made public; it would not be right therefore for the Government to disclose this information.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Transport what assurances he has secured from the successful candidate from the fixed link promoters about their availability of finance to complete the project; and what cost of building they have assumed.

Mr. David Mitchell: Channel Tunnel Group-France-Manche provided information about its proposed financing as part of its submission, and it will be for investors to decide whether finance will be available. The construction cost estimated by the Channel Tunnel Group at 1985 prices, including rolling stock for shuttle services, was £2·6 billion.

Cycle Lanes

15. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made on the provision of cycle lanes on roads.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Steady progress is being made to encourage safer cycling. My right hon. Friend described the position in his reply on 2 December.

County Bus Timetables

16. Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has received any representations on the provision and availability of county bus timetables following deregulation.

Mr. David Mitchell: This subject has been mentioned on several occasions. County councils will still be able to publish county bus timetables if they wish to do so.

Road Safety Schemes

17. Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Transport to what extent his Department monitors the effects of road safety schemes instituted by local authorities on the advice of the transport and road research laboratory.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: TRRL has joined local authorities in Bradford, Bristol, Nelson, Reading and Sheffield to design schemes to improve urban safety. Responsibility for their implementation lies with the local highway authority. Technical and statistical monitoring is integral to the schemes, and will be carried out by the TRRL as part of the Department's research programme.

South Wales (Road Access)

18. Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will seek a meeting with representatives of county councils in South Wales to discuss the matter of road access into south Wales.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are not aware of a particular reason to seek such a meeting at the present time.

Concessionary Fares (London)

19. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to the arrangements which will be made in 1986-87 for concessionary fares for the elderly and disabled in London.

Mr. Ridley: I understand that the London boroughs have agreed to continue with the existing arrangements for concessionary travel on British Rail and London Regional Transport services in 1986-87 without resort to the statutory reserve scheme. This shows that, despite much publicity to the contrary, the boroughs without the GLC are quite capable of reaching sensible agreements among themselves which we greatly welcome.

M25

20. Mr. Richard Page asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he now expects the M25 to be completed.

27. Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give his latest estimate of when the Swanley-Sevenoaks section of the M25 will be completed.

Mr. Ridley: I hope the contractor, John Laing Construction Ltd, will have the Swanley-Sevenoaks section ready for me to open on 19 February, some five months early.

The final section, between Micklefield Green and South Mimms is due for completion in November this year.

A127 (Crash Barriers)

21. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received over the last 12 months concerning crash barriers along the A127; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There have been a number, including some from hon. Members. The most recent concerned the tragic death of a schoolboy who was struck as he crossed by means of a gap in the central reserve fencing near Basildon, We are looking urgently at what may be done there to improve safety. There have also been calls for greater lengths of this fencing. In the coming year we shall be completing its provision on the trunk road in Essex and providing a length within the London borough of Havering.

M1 (Speed Limit)

22. Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the extent of the observance of the speed limit at the southern end of the M1; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: It is for the police to enforce speed limits. In keeping national speed limits under review, the Department has carried out surveys of vehicle speeds in a number of locations. These have not yet included the southern end of the M1.

Docklands Light Railway

23. Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he has had with the London Docklands Development Corporation covering eastward extension of the docklands light railway.

Mr. David Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 2 December 1985 at column 106.

My Department has had no further discussions with the London Docklands Development Corporation concerning any eastward extension of the docklands light railway. I understand that LDDC is continuing with preliminary work on the project.

Manchester-Preston-Blackpool Railway Electrification

24. Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for Transport on what criteria he has based his decision to refuse approval for the electrification of the railway line from Manchester to Preston and Blackpool; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: As I explained in my letter of 16 January to the chief executive of Lancashire county council, a copy of which I sent the hon. Gentlemen on 17 January, I concluded after studying all the facts that electrification did not in this instance provide the most cost-effective means of obtaining a fast modernised rail service.

Drink-Drive Campaign

25. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the full report on the outcome of his Department's drink-drive campaign over the Christmas period.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Not before the spring.

Rural Bus Routes

8. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received about the viability of rural bus routes after the implementation of the Transport Act 1985.

Mr. David Mitchell: Very few.

A1/M1 Link (Kettering-Brampton)

26. Mr. William Powell asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects construction work to begin on the A1/M1 link between Kettering and Brampton.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The start of construction depends on the outcome of the public inquiries which ended last June after nine months. The Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Transport will announce their joint decision when they have been able to consider the inspector's report. This is not expected before June or July. On present expectations, work could start during 1987.

British Rail Engineering Ltd.

28. Mr. Redmond asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met the managing director of British Rail Engineering Ltd., to discuss future capital investment.

Mr. David Mitchell: We have not discussed this matter with the managing director of BREL.

British Rail Rolling Stock

29. Mr. Harris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the value of investment in British Rail rolling stock which he has approved in the past 12 months.

Mr. David Mitchell: We have approved £170 million worth of new passenger rolling stock in the past 12 months.

St. Pancras-Sheffield Line

30. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, when he next meets the chairman of the British Railways Board, he will raise with him the standards of timekeeping and frequency on trains on the St. Pancras-Sheffield line; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The operation of individual services is a matter for British Rail.

Bus Lanes (Inner London)

31. Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the operation of the bus lanes in inner London.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: That is currently a matter for the GLC. On abolition, individual boroughs will become responsible for bus lanes on roads other than those to be trunked for which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be responsible.

Motorways (Driving Standards)

32. Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for Transport what efforts he is making to seek to improve the standard of driving on motorways.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department of Transport issues extensive publicity and advice to motorists on safe driving practice. The next phase of the rolling publicity campaign will be directed at motorway driving. Measures were recently announced to require the fitting of speed governors to coaches. Ultimately safe motorway driving depends on the behaviour of individual motorists.

Motor Insurance Certificates (Display)

34. Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will seek powers to require motorists to display valid insurance stickers on their vehicles.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No. An insurance sticker would not provide conclusive evidence of insurance, where for example policy conditions were breached, and, because motor insurance generally relates to the driver rather than the vehicle, such a system would be open to widespread abuse.

Stansted Airport

35. Mr. Haselhurst asked the Secretary of State for Transport what communications he has had with Essex county council about road needs in the area of Stansted airport.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The council's chairman wrote on 21 November expressing various concerns arising from the Stansted decision, including the extent and funding of improvements to local roads. My right hon. Friend sent a comprehensive reply on 20 December offering a meeting with the Department.

A46 (Lincoln-Newark)

36. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve the A46 Lincoln to Newark road.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Other than bypasses for Lincoln, opened in December 1985, and Newark, which we hope to start building towards the end of 1987, there are no major plans for the A46.

Predicted traffic volumes do not justify upgrading to dual carriageway. Studies have identified some possible long-term improvements which may include widening to provide greater opportunity for overtaking. Sites with accident records will continue to be given priority in determining immediate improvement proposals.

Motorway Charges

37. Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to seek to secure the abandonment by France, Spain and other member countries of the European Economic Community of motorway charges.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We continue to press for a joint EC approach on motor taxes and motorway tolls, with a view to eliminating distortion of competition and minimising obstacles to the free passage of traffic. We expect the Commission to put forward new proposals shortly.

Pedestrian Crossings

39. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to amend the criteria for numbers of pedestrians and vehicular traffic which justify the provision of a pedestrian crossing.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Departmental advice in this area is currently under review in conjunction with the local highway authority associations.

British Airports Authority (Security)

41. Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his Department's guidelines for security at British Airports Authority establishments.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My Department gives detailed security advice to all United Kingdom airports and to airlines operating in the United Kingdom and directions have been given under the Aviation Security Act 1982 to airports and airlines on the screening of passengers and their baggage and the reconciliation of passengers with their checked-in hold baggage. Special security measures apply to flights subject to a particular threat. United Kingdom security standards comply with the provisions of annex 17 of the Chicago convention and are continuously reviewed in consultation with the aviation industry's representatives on the national aviation security committee.

Public Transport Fares

42. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he last met representatives of passenger transport executives to discuss public transport fares.

Mr. David Mitchell: I meet representatives of passenger transport executives and their parent authorities from time to time to discuss a number of issues, including public transport fares.

London Country Bus Services Ltd.

44. Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the management and employees of London Country Bus Services Ltd. on the opportunities open to them to purchase the company.

Mr. David Mitchell: My hon. Friend the Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Mr. Murphy) forwarded to me a letter from one of his constituents who is an employee of London Country Bus Services Limited seeking an early decision on the future structure of the company to enable the management and staff to consider putting forward purchase proposals.

Coal (Traffic Movements)

45. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total tonnage of coal transported by road in 1983; what volume he anticipates will be so moved in the current year; and if he has assessed the effect of such transportation on local communities and roads.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: An estimated 71 million tonnes of coal and coke were transported by road in Great Britain in 1983. The Department's forecasts of freight movements are not made on the basis of individual years or commodities. Local highway authorities are responsible for assessing the effects of traffic on their roads and taking appropriate action.

South Yorkshire Passenger Transport Executive

47. Mr. Barron asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will consider the transport supplementary grant for the South Yorkshire Passenger Transport Executive joint board.

Mr. David Mitchell: Transport supplementary grant is no longer paid in respect of public transport expenditure. Under the provisions of the Local Government Act 1985 the South Yorkshire passenger transport joint board and other new authorities will receive block grant under the same terms as local authorities generally.

Drivers' Hours (EC Regulations)

48. Mr. Stott asked the Secretary of State for Transport what changes to United Kingdom legislation are planned following the recent amendments to the European Economic Community drivers' hours regulations and tachograph regulations.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: A consultation paper on the implications for United Kingdom legislation will be issued shortly.

Highway Construction

Mr. Conlan asked the Secretary of State for Transport how much will be spent in each of the next three years on new major highway construction.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The allocation of resources between the various elements of the national roads programme has yet to be finalised. For 1986-87, details will be given in the Supply Estimates to be published in March.

Nationalised Industries

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will state, for each industry in public ownership in 1979, the latest annual payment paid to former owners; and, in respect of any such industry which has been privatised, if there is any contribution from public funds for compensation payments to former owners.

Mr. Ridley: No such payments have been made since 1979 in respect of transport industries in public ownership at that time or subsequently privatised.

Motor Cars (Spare Wheels)

Mr. Conlan asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether, in the light of the proposed assessment of wet-grip cornering performance of tyres under the tyre tread depth regulations consultation, he proposes similar tests for skinny non-standard motor car spare wheels;

(2) if he will make a statement on the Council of European Communities' proposed directive relating to tyres for motor vehicles with particular reference to the requirement for the spare wheel contained in the annex to the document;

(3) if he will publish the results of the tests undertaken by the transport and road research laboratory on the use of skinny, non-standard motor car spare wheels.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The European Commission's proposed directive on motor vehicle tyres which was published in 1976 has not been discussed in recent years in the relevant Commission or Council working groups. Any fresh discussion on this proposal would doubtless take account of the recently agreed ECE regulation 64 which specifies safety requirements for the use and fitment of temporary use spare wheels/tyres.

Results of the TRRL tests done in 1980 were not published as they did not form part of a comprehensive test programme. Copies can be made available and I am arranging for the hon. Member to receive them. No further tests of temporary use spare wheels/tyres are planned by the TRRL whose work on wet grip concerning performance has been designed to compare worn tyres with differing amounts of shoulder tread depth.

Child Safety Seats

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Transport what research has been undertaken by or for his Department into the efficacy of rear-facing child safety seats for use in cars; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: A study in 1984 undertaken for the Department by vehicle safety consultants obtained information about accident experience in other countries and injury criteria relating to rear facing infant carriers. This information was drawn upon in the preparation of British standard, BSAU 202.

Restraints approved to the standard, which is recognised in our regulations, provide a safe and convenient method of transporting babies, whether travelling in the back or front of cars.

A1 (Lighting)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of the A1 from its junction with the M18 to the Dishforth roundabout are (a) lit and (b) unlit.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Approximately five miles are lit, and about 46 miles unlit.

A1 (Safety Barrier)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of the A1 from its junction with the M18 to the Dishforth roundabout have a central safety barrier.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are about 18 miles of central safety barrier on the A1 from M18 to Dishforth roundabout, including about nine miles on the A1(M).

A642, Leeds

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Transport if following his rejection of the Kirkhamgate to Dishforth road scheme, he is currently considering any alternative schemes to alleviate traffic congestion on the A642 through Woodlesford, Leeds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The A642 is a local authority road and I have no proposals, at present, to relieve traffic problems there. However, I expect soon to announce the terms of reference of a study which will examine traffic problems in and to the east of Leeds.

I shall write to the hon. Member when the terms of reference are decided.

MV Bridgeness

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has yet received the surveyor's report into the circumstances surrounding the grounding of the MV Bridgeness on 16 June 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: Yes. My Department has prepared a report which has been circulated to interested parties. I shall send a copy to the hon. Member.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to set in hand a public inquiry into the route of the Newbury bypass.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I hope to be able this summer to publish draft statutory orders under the Highways Act based on the preferred western route. On this basis a public inquiry could be held early next year.

Aldermaston—Burghfield (Radiation)

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what reports have been made to him by airline pilots, including those flying Concorde, of increased radiation in the Aldermaston—Burghfield area of Berkshire.

Mr. Michael Spicer: None.

Agricultural Vehicles (Flashing Lights)

Mr. Lord asked the Secretary of State for Transport what regulations exist governing flashing warning lights on slow moving agricultural vehicles; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The road vehicles lighting regulations permit the use of amber flashing warning beacons on vehicles which are incapable of exceeding 25 mph. I shall soon be sending my hon. Friend a full reply to his recent letter.

Taxicard Scheme (London)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many letters his Department has received from residents living in the Greater London council area supporting the present Greater London council taxicard scheme.

Mr. David Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) earlier today.

Motorway Lighting

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the fatal and reported accident rates for lit and unlit sections of the M1 motorway between London and Wakefield from 1979 annually.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to his reply, 24 January 1986, c. 330]: I am now in a position to provide the further information requested.

SCOTLAND

Paramilitary Activities

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many persons have been (a) killed and (b) injured in Scotland in the latest calendar year as a result of paramilitary activity; and if he will break down the figures specifying whether the paramilitaries were (i) from western Europe, (ii) from Northern Ireland, (iii) from the Republic of Ireland, (iv) from other parts of the world and (v) of unknown origin.

Mr. John MacKay: From available information no such deaths or injuries have been identified in Scotland during 1985.

Female Prisoners

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average length of custodial sentencing of female prisoners in Scotland in 1985.

Mr. John MacKay: Information for 1985 is not yet available. The table provides figures on the average length of sentence of female prisoners received into custody under sentence in 1984.

Receptions	Number of days
Adult direct receptions	196
Under 21 direct receptions	117
Fine defaulter receptions	18

* Excluding life and other indeterminate sentences.

Tobacco

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was spent in Scotland in the last calendar year for which figures are available on curing people addicted to tobacco smoking; and if he will give a breakdown of this figure.

Mr. Rifkind: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was spent in Scotland on research into cures for tobacco addiction in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: Although the Scottish Home and Health Department and the Scottish Health Education Group are at present funding several research projects directly related to smoking, they are not currently funding any reseach in Scotland specifically related to cures for tobacco addiction. Information about independent research conducted by universities and other bodies is not held centrally.

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many deaths were recorded in Scotland from diseases normally associated with tobacco smoking in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: In a report published in 1983, the Royal College of Physicians estimated that at least 90 per cent. of deaths from lung cancer, bronchitis and obstructive lung disease are attributable to smoking, and that perhaps 20 per cent. of coronary heart disease deaths are related to smoking.

The table shows the total deaths in Scotland in 1984 from the above causes:

ICD numbers*	Deaths in Scotland, 1984
162	Malignant neoplasm of trachea bronchus and lung (lung cancer)	4,225
490-492	Bronchitis and emphysema (bronchitis)	1,009
496	Chronic airways obstruction, not elsewhere classified (obstructive lung disease)	1,338
410-414	Ischaemic heart disease (coronary heart disease)	18,107

* International Classification of Diseases.

Drugs

Mr. Mackenzie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was spent in Scotland in the last calendar year for which figures are available on curing people addicted to drug taking; and if he will give a breakdown of the figure.

Mr. Rifkind: This information is not available in the form requested. The cost of treatment provided for drug misusers by the primary care services and general, psychiatric and other hospital services is not separately identified. Grants from central funds totalling £764,120 in the financial year 1985-86 have been made available to statutory and voluntary bodies in Scotland to support 23 projects concerned with the treatment and rehabilitation of drug misusers.

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was spent in Scotland on research programmes on drug taking in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: Information covering all research projects in this field is not available centrally. My Department has awarded grants totalling over £200,000 to seven current research projects related to drug misuse of which approximately £60,000 will be spent in the current financial year.

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many deaths were recorded as due to drug taking in Scotland in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: The most relevant figures are as follows:

ICD Code*		1984 deaths
304	Drug dependence	6
305.2—305.9	Non dependent abuse of drugs	—
E850—E858	Accidental poisoning by drugs, medicaments and biologicals	18

Callender Park College of Education

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what action has been taken to dispose of the land and buildings of the former Callender Park college of education; what is the current position; what revenue has accrued to the Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Because of difficulties in selling the property while it was partially occupied by the Forth Valley Health Board college of nursing, Moray House college of education, as the owners, decided not to proceed with disposal of the property until it could be offered with vacant possession. In light of advice from a firm of estate agents appointed in October 1983, an application for planning permission for private housing was made in January of this year to Falkirk district council prelimary to marketing the site. No revenue has so far accrued to the Government.

Scottish Tertiary Education Advisory Council

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the timetable for consultation on the recommendations of the report of the Scottish Tertiary Education Advisory Council; and when he expects to make announcements on the results of the consultations.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Comments on the report have been requested by 27 March 1986, after which decisions on those recommendations which are directed at the Government will be announced as soon as possible.

Colleges of Education

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the current student capacity and complement of each Scottish college of education.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The present data on the capacity of the colleges of education are relatively crude and for that reason work is in hand to develop an improved measure of capacity, reflecting both actual accommodation and the particular requirements of the range of course offered by an individual college. Using present data on net capacity, the position for the 1985-86 academic session is as follows:

Aberdeen	1,150	435
Craigie	400	224
Dundee	1,500	379
Dunfermline	500	284
Jordanhill	2,600	1,608
Moray House	1,850	1,072
St. Andrew's	900	526

* The net capacity makes due allowance for accommodation which is leased out.

† The student numbers are for pre-service students only; the figures are not yet available for college-based in service students.

Central Educational Institutions

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the Scottish central educational institutions, giving in each case their total capacity and current complement of students in full-time equivalents.

Mr. Allan Stewart: A list of the Scottish central institutions, showing the number of full-time equivalent students in each institution in the 1984-85 academic session is as follows. As noted in the report dated 5 June 1985 by the Comptroller and Auditor General on the Scottish Education Department's control of further education establishments, central institutions are generally operating up to the limits of their capacity. An exception is Leith nautical college where student numbers are declining as a result of measures being taken to rationalise nautical education.

Institution	(Full-time equivalent students)
Robert Gordon's Institute of Technology	3,349
Paisley College of Technology	2,996
Dundee College of Technology	2,075
Leith Nautical College	683
Scottish College of Textiles	641
Glasgow School of Art	1,065
Edinburgh College of Art	1,000
Duncan of Jordanstone College of Art	995
Queen Margaret College	1,227
Queen's College, Glasgow	850
Royal Scottish Academy of Music and Drama	394
Glasgow College of Technology	4,268
Napier College of Commerce and Technology	4,733
Total	24,276

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total acreage of land on which each Scottish college of education is situated.

Mr. Alian Stewart: The information requested is as follows:

College of Education	Acreage
Aberdeen	31·4
Craigie	27·1
Dundee	34·0
Dunfermline	33·0
Jordanhill	88·5
St. Andrew's (Bearsden campus)	24·7

Note: The figures relate to all land owned by the colleges, including those playing fields and residential buildings which are located some distance from the main campus.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what residential accommodation for students is provided by each Scottish college of education; and what percentage this represents of the total student complement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The information for the 1985-86 academic session is as follows:

College of Education	Beds Available	*Per cent. of Student Complement
Aberdeen	240	55
Craigie	97	43
Dundee	233	61
Dunfermline	177	62
Jordanhill	170	11
Moray house	311	29
St. Andrew's	252	48

* The student complement reflects pre-service student numbers only; in-service student numbers are not included.

Derelict Land

Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what the total acreage of derelict land in Scotland was in (i) 1975 and (ii) 1985, or the latest year for which figures are available; and what total acreage of derelict land within those figures is attributable to coal mining activities.

Mr. Ancram: Comprehensive information is not held centrally on the amount of derelict land in Scotland. My Department is, however, at present conducting an exercise jointly with local authorities to assess what information is available on vacant, derelict and underused land in urban areas and to consider how the disposal of such land hel by public bodies might be facilitated.

Middleton Hall Conference Centre

Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) in the sale of Middleton hall conference centre, Midlothian, what sum of money from the sale he has decided to retain; what sum of money from the sale he has decided to allocate to the Scottish National Camps Association Limited; and what conditions have been placed on the Scottish National Camps Association Limited by him regarding the future use of this money;

(2) how many formal offers were received for Middleton hall conference centre in Midlothian; who was the purchaser; what was the agreed selling price; and what conditions were imposed on the sale by the purchaser.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I have not imposed any special conditions on the sale of Middleton hall apart from compliance with the rules relating to the sale of property purchased with the with of public funds, amounting in this case to some £220,000. The Government have a right to repayment of this sum and the Scottish National Camps Association has a right to retain the balance without conditions. Detailed questions relating to the sale are the responsibility of the association.

Scottish Examination Board

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will instruct the Scottish Examination Board to desist from destroying any 1985 higher music examination scripts, in order that any remarking will not be frustrated.

Mr. Allan Stewart: This is a matter for the Scottish Examination Board. I understand that the majority of the 1985 examination scripts have been destroyed in accordance with the board's normal procedures. However, those relating to the higher music project option have been retained.

Volunteer Centre, Glasgow

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, following his reply to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill, on the funding problems experienced by the Volunteer Centre, Glasgow, over the YTS, he will be willing to meet representatives of the centre.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Consideration of the many detailed points put to the Manpower Services Commission by the Glasgow Volunteer Centre continues. I understand that a reply will be issued shortly which might lead to the centre reappraising its currently pessimistic view of the new YTS funding arrangements. As this clarification by officials would appear to be the best course of action, I do not propose to meet representatives of the centre.

AIDS

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's estimate of the number of people in (a) Edinburgh, (b) Glasgow and (c) Scotland as a whole who are infected by the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus.

Mr. John MacKay: In the present state of knowledge it is not possible to give a reliable estimate of these numbers.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he is satisfied that post-mortems will be carried out where necessary in sudden death cases in cases where the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus has been detected following a blood test.

Mr. John MacKay: Yes.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what action is being taken by his Department to prevent the further spread of the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus in Scotland amongst those groups who are most at risk.

Mr. John MacKay: Groups known to be at high risk of this disease are being advised of the steps they should take to reduce the risk; and funds amounting to £537,500 have been committed to check the spread of the disease and to support research in this field.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Jury Vetting

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Attorney-General if he has any plans to modify his guidelines on jury checking; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: In July 1980 I issued amended guidelines on jury checks. A copy was placed in the Library. As stated in that document, there are certain exceptional types of cases on public importance for which the provisions as to majority verdicts and the diqualification of jurors may not be sufficient to ensure the proper administration of justice. In such cases it is in the interests both of justice and the public that there should be further safeguards against the possibility of bias and in such cases checks which go beyond the investigation of criminal records may be necessary.

There are two classes of case in which jury checks are now carried out, with my personal authority. Terrorist cases form the first class, and the second comprises cases in which national security is involved and part of the evidence is likely to be heard in camera. In each class of case extra precautions are desirable because of the risk that a juror's political beliefs may be so biased as to reflect the extreme views of a sectarian interest or a pressure group, so as to interfere with his fair assessment of the facts of the case or lead him to exert improper pressure on his fellow jurors.

In national security cases, however, extra precautions may be desirable because of the danger that a juror, either voluntarily or under pressure, may make an improper use of evidence which due to its sensitivity has been given in camera. Where a terrorist offence is being prosecuted the extra checks on records to which I have referred, extending beyond criminal records, are carried out only by police from police special branch records.

In security cases, however, where evidence might have to be given in camera, checks may be made additionally by the security service. In October 1978 guidelines on jury checks were issued by the then Attorney-General, now the right hon. Lord Silkin. While they referred in terms to both the classes of case which I have described, the only procedure which they described was the procedure applicable to cases where there is a risk of bias, that is to say, checking by police special branches. They accordingly might have conveyed the impression that even in Official Secrets Acts cases jury checking was confined to police special branches, whereas it was then additionally done, and was intended to continue to be done, by the security services as well. Having looked into the antecedents of the 1978 guidelines I am quite satisfied that this incomplete impression was given by inadvertence.

In 1980 I decided to narrow the range of cases in which jury checks for bias should be carried out, restricting them to terrorist cases only. (Under the 1978 guidelines they had also embraced certain other cases of serious organised crime.) I issued an amendment of the 1978 guidelines accordingly. The incomplete nature of the description of procedures contained in the original guidelines was, unfortunately, not noticed, and was accordingly re-adopted. From time to time hon. and right hon. Members have since received replies which have reflected it.

When my Department noticed the discrepancy and brought it to my attention, I directed a full examination and I now express to the House my regret that a misleading impression was inadvertently created. I have written to each of the right hon. and hon. Members to whom I have referred correcting the mistake.

As to the future, the procedures which Ministers of successive Administrations since 1974 have agreed to be necessary in the interests of national security must continue. In cases where it may be necessary to disclose in camera information of the highest sensitivity, it is essential that the security service should be able to check that potential jurors are persons who can be trusted with that information.

I therefore propose to review the guidelines at once and to publish a corrected version in the near future.

Duty Solicitor Scheme

Mr. Hayes asked the Attorney-General if he will list those areas not providing cover under the duty solicitor scheme.

The Attorney-General: Detailed returns for the whole country are not yet available. But interim figures show that of the 24 regions only one (London, East) has no 24-hour duty solicitor scheme yet in operation in any area.

Mr. Hayes asked the Attorney-General if he is satisfied with the cover presently provided by the duty solicitor scheme; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The 24-hour duty solicitor scheme has been operating since 1 January and it is too early to make a full assessment. The Law Society reports that a good start has been made, and that there is rapid progress.

European Assembly (Court Action)

53. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Attorney-General what role he and his Department will play in the action being taken by the United Kingdom Government against the European Assembly in the European Court in consequence of the decisions made at the meeting of the European Council on 20 December; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: The Law officers have a supervisory responsibility for the conduct of international legal proceedings to which the United Kingdom is a party. The Attorney-General is therefore taking a close interest in these proceedings and has nominated experienced leading counsel to assist in the preparation of the United Kingdom's case and to appear on behalf of the United Kingdom at the oral hearing.

Northern Ireland Court of Appeal

Mr. McNamara asked the Attorney-General how many cases in 1985 concerning scheduled offences have been referred to the Northern Ireland Court of Appeal; and in how many of these referred cases the original conviction has been quashed and upheld.

The Attorney-General: Records kept by the Department of the Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland of persons who appealed to the Court of Appeal against conviction and/or sentence in respect of convictions of scheduled offences in 1985 show the position to be as follows:

	Appeals against conviction			Appeals against sentence
	With-drawn	Dis-missed	Upheld	With-drawn	Dis-missed	Upheld
1985	Nil	5	1	11	23	29

In one case not enumerated above, on an appeal against conviction, the appeal was upheld in relation to a number of counts and dismissed in relation to the remaining counts.

Legal Aid Review Team

Mr. John Fraser asked the Attorney-General what arrangements the legal aid review team has made to accept evidence and representations from non-Government organisations; and to whom they should be addressed.

The Attorney-General: The team intends to consult a wide range of individuals and organisations involved in the provision of legal services. It will also be pleased to receive written representations, which should be sent to the team at the Lord Chancellor's Department, Room 460, Thames House North, Millbank, London SW1.

Law Officers (Correspondence)

Mr. Dobson asked the Attorney-General what is the practice of the Law Officers when writing to Cabinet Ministers regarding references to other Cabinet Ministers with whom they have already discussed the matter to which the letter relates; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: There is no set practice in this matter. The contents of each letter are determined by the circumstances of the particular case.

Westland plc

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General, pursuant to the answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 357, on what evidence he based his conclusion that there was no possibility that proceedings would be instituted against Ms. Colette Bowe in relation to disclosure of extracts from the letter from the Solicitor-General to the then Secretary of State for Defence; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I was satisfied by what the head of the Civil Service was able to tell me that there was no reason to doubt that Ms. Bowe had acted in complete good faith.

Mr. Dobson asked the Attorney-General on what day, at what time and in what form the Solicitor-General first saw a copy of the then Secretary of State for Defence's letter of Friday 3 January to Lloyds merchant bank.

The Attorney-General: In The Times on 4 January in the evening when it was drawn to his attention by the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Attorney-General for what purpose, and at what time, the Solicitor-General requested the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) to supply the documents referred to in his letter of 7 January as having been supplied on 3 January; and if he will now place those documents in the public domain.

The Attorney-General: The documents referred to in my hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General's letter of 7 January were in fact supplied to him at his request by the then Secretary of State for Defence on 31 December 1985 for the purpose of enabling the Solicitor-General to advise on my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's reply to Sir John Cuckney. The reference in my hon. and learned Friend's letter to the Secretary of State for Defence of 6 January to the fact that specified documents were available to him when he gave advice on 31 December to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister relates to this occasion. The date of 3 January was inserted in error in the letter of 7 January. The documents were disclosed to my hon. and learned Friend for the purposes of giving legal advice. I am therefore not prepared to place them in the public domain.

DEFENCE

Porton Down (Animal Research)

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what research is being carried out at Porton Down on exposure of animals to cyanide and hydrogen gases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: No research is being carried out at the chemical defence establishment, Porton Down, involving the exposure of animals to cyanide and hydrogen as gases. The chemical defence programme is concerned with establishing the toxicity of potential chemical agents which might be used against United Kingdom forces and the efficiency and safety of defensive measures. In this context experiments have been undertaken to improve understanding of the toxicology of cyanide poisoning and with a view to improving treatment.

Ministry Housing

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many houses or flats are owned by his Department in Shoeburyness; and how many of these are required for the housing of Ministry of Defence personnel;

(2) if he will offer for sale, at discounted prices comparable to local authority dwellings, those houses occupied by Ministry of Defence personnel made redundant in consequence of contractorisation who are taking up employment with the new private contractors; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what plans he has for the disposal of surplus residential properties owned by his Department in Shoeburyness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The Ministry of Defence owns 226 dwellings in the Shoeburyness area, 137 of which are occupied by military personnel or civilian employees, 99 of whom are employed at the proof and experimental establishment, Shoeburyness. There are no plans at present to dispose of any of these properties but should any of them become available for sale, tenants would be given the opportunity to buy under a discount scheme comparable to that of a local authority.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many Ministry of Defence personnel employed by the proof and experimental establishment, Shoeburyness, reside in houses owned by his Department; how many of these persons are being made redundant by his Department in consequence of contractorisation; and how many have been issued with notices to quit their homes;

(2) why he will not permit those employees made redundant by his contractorisation proposals for Shoeburyness proof and experimental establishment, who are to be employed by the new contractor, to continue as tenants of his Department; and if he will make a statement;

(3) how many former employees of his Department are being made homeless in consequence of the contracting out of certain services at the Proof and Experimental Establishment at Shoeburyness, Essex; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Ninety-nine military and civilian personnel employed at the proof and experimental establishment presently reside in Ministry of Defence owned houses. Of these, 14 civilian employees will be made redundant when the first phase of the contractorisation of the establishment takes place. Only one of these employees has received a notice to quit. He is occupying an Army married quarter and under normal military procedures would be expected to vacate the house when his MOD employment ended. The notice to quit has been withdrawn whilst his accommodation needs are sympathetically reviewed in the light of his future employment intentions.

Skynet IV Satellites

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence when each of the three Skynet IV satellites now ordered are expected to be launched.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Skynet 4A and 4B were expected to be launched on 24 June 1986 and in January 1987, respectively. No information is available about the extent of any delays that might arise as a result of the accident involving the United States shuttle "Challenger" on 28 January 1986. Skynet 4C is expected to be launched in late 1988 or early 1989.

Mr. McNamara asked Secretary of State for Defence what is the operational requirement for each Skynet IV satellite.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The operational requirement for all Skynet 4 satellites is to provide long range military communications for the armed forces.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any plans to order further Skynet IV or other military satellites.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Long term plans include provision for two further Skynet 4 satellites.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost of the third Skynet satellite ordered from British Aerospace in May 1985.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him on 26 November 1985 at column 564.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the expected launch costs of each Skynet IV satellite.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It would not be appropriate to disclose this information as it could prejudice negotiations for the launch of Skynet 4C.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether it has yet been determined how each Skynet IV satellite will be launched.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Skynet 4A and 4B will be launched via the United States space transportation system, the shuttle. No decision has been made on the launcher for Skynet 4C.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given by his Department to using the European Ariane launcher system for any Skynet IV launch.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Full consideration was given to using the European Ariane launcher system for Skynet 4A and 4B, and is currently being given to its possible use for Skynet 4C.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether a British payload specialist will t accompany all Skynet IV launches by space shuttle.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Current plans are that a British payload specialist will accompany the launch of both Skynet 4A and 4B by the United States space shuttle. No decision has been taken about British payload specialists accompanying any further Skynet IV satellites that may be launched by the shuttle.

Space (Payload Specialists)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what additional costs are associated with the training of and launching into space of each British payload specialist.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The additional cost to the United Kingdom of training each British payload specialist is approximately £100,000. There is no additional cost for launching the payload specialist into space.

Small Arms (Contracts)

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he has any plans to award contracts to British industries for the production of small arms after 1 April; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is his policy towards the awarding of small arms contracts to foreign manufacturers.

Mr. Lee: Our policy towards the awarding of contracts to foreign manufacturers remains as set out in my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's answer of 13 January 1986 at column 517.

Future small arms purchases will be made in accordance with that policy.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the size, number and names of foreign manufacturers which have been awarded small arms contracts in 1978-79, 1980-81 and 1985-86.

Mr. Lee: In the period since 1978-79 no significant purchases of foreign small arms have been made by the MOD. Quantities of 9 mm pistols have been bought from Fabrique Nationale in Belgium. There is currently no United Kingdom manufacturer of this type of automatic pistol. During that period limited quantities of other foreign small arms have been purchased for specialist uses. For security reasons I am not prepared to give details of these other weapons.

HMS Nelson (Wardroom)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated completion cost of the refurbishment of the wardroom at HMS Nelson Portsmouth; and what was the original estimate.

Mr. Lee: The estimated completion cost of the wardroom refurbishment in HMS Nelson is £2·8 million, including VAT. The original 1984 estimate of £2·2 million, exluded VAT and was at the then current price levels.

Naval Houses

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many empty naval houses there are in Fareham; (2) how many empty naval houses there are in Gosport.

Mr. Lee: The Navy currently has approximately 500 vacant quarters in the Gosport/Fareham area.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many naval owned houses in Portsmouth are currently empty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The Navy currently has approximately 150 vacant married quarters in Portsmouth.

Royal Navy (Manpower)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many officers and men have given notice to leave the Royal Navy in the last three years, by rank and year.

Mr. Lee: The numbers of officers and men who have given notice to leave the Royal Navy in the last three financial years, together with the numbers for the current year so far, are as follows:

	Officers	Ratings	Total
1982-83	145	1,861	2,006
1983-84	165	2,459	2,624
1984-85	190	3,016	3,206
April-December 1985	131	2,982	3,113

These figures exclude ratings with less than six months of service who exercise their statutory right to leave.

It is not possible to provide the greater detail requested without disproportionate time and effort.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many people have been recruited into the Royal Navy in each of the last three years.

Mr. Lee: The numbers of recruits into the Royal Navy from civilian life during the last three financial years, together with the numbers for the current year so far, are as follows:

	Officers	Ratings	Total
1982-83	395	2,683	3,078
1983-84	445	3,778	4,223
1984-85	537	3,694	4,241
April-December 1985	422	2,145	2,567

The numbers of officers exclude promotion from the ranks.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many applicants there were to join the Royal Navy in each of the last three years.

Mr. Lee: The numbers of applicants to enlist in the Royal Navy during the last three financial years, together with the numbers for the current financial year so far, are as follows:

	Officers	Ratings	Total
1982-83	1,055	19,668	20,723
1983-84	1,517	18,034	29,551
1984-85	1,514	15,889	17,403
April-December 1985	1,189	9,244	10,433

Helicopters

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has as to military helicopter types being exported by Westland plc when that helicopter was not also part of the inventory of the British services.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1986, c. 336]: I understand that Westland plc has not exported any military helicopters other than types in service with the British armed forces. Of course, there have been variations to the types in United Kingdom service in order to suit particular export customer preferences for equipment fit and specification.

Nimrod

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence what sums have been provided to date from public funds for the Nimrod project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 448]: By 30 November 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, some £882 million at 1985-86 average outturn prices had been spent or committed on the Nimrod Mk3 airborne early warning project.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Disarmament

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what practical steps have been taken recently by Her Majesty's Government to enhance nuclear disarmament and to prevent further proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Renton: We attach the highest priority to a successful outcome to the US/Soviet talks at Geneva. We support the US negotiating positions and continue to play an active part in the Alliance consultations which contribute to their formulation. We now want to see serious negotiations to achieve the agreed objectives for Geneva.

Meanwhile, as a further contribution to preventing the proliferation of nuclear weapons, we have recently undertaken a new round of diplomatic action to persuade states which are not parties to the non-proliferation treaty to adhere to it. This campaign has been co-ordinated with one conducted by the Soviet Union.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisatons assisted by his Department with grant in aid in the last financial year for which figures are available, and the size of the grant so given.

Mr. Eggar: Details of grants made by the two wings of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to voluntary bodies and organisations are listed in Class II, Vote 1, section G, and Class II, Vote 7, section D, of the 1985-86 Supply Estimates.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations, and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available.

Mr. Eggar: The only non-departmental public body in receipt of grant aid from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office which provides financial support for voluntary bodies is the British Council, which in 1985-86 received a grant-in-aid of £83,962,000.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

Mr. Eggar: Grants are given only to voluntary bodies and organisations whose purposes are strictly in accordance with our foreign and overseas aid policies. All such grants are subject to review. Those in receipt of grants are required to provide audited accounts.

Immigration

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether medical officers at embassies and consulates which deal with entry clearance and quota voucher applications are supplied with a list of medical conditions which are regarded as sufficiently serious to delay or vitiate such applications.

Mr. Eggar: Yes. However, medical referees have no authority to refuse or defer an application on medical grounds. That responsibility rests with the entry clearance officer (or his superior) who may take medical evidence into account in arriving at their decision.

Returning residents, spouses and children under 18 of people settled in the United Kingdom may not be refused on medical grounds.

East Timor

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has consulted the Secretary General of the United Nations over United Nations resolution 37/30 concerning East Timor.

Mr. Renton: No. But there is contact at official level and we continue to follow developments on East Timor closely. As my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Pentlands (Mr. Rifkind) told the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 28 October 1985, at column 359, we support the efforts of the UN Secretary General to promote contacts between the Indonesian and Portuguese Governments aimed at achieving a just settlement in East Timor.

Israeli Prime Minister (Meeting)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his meeting with the Prime Minister of Israel.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend's discussions with Mr. Peres were useful and constructive. They focused on efforts to move towards middle east peace negotiations and on conditions in the occupied territories. He reviewed briefly other regional and bilateral issues.

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the reply of 27 January, Official Report, column 368, to the right hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, South, on what date he intends to publish the information in the Official Report.

Mr. Eggar: Pursuant to my reply of 27 January, the information requested by the right hon. Member has now been assembled. Fifty two judgments against signatory nations have so far been given by the European Court of Human Rights. Thirteen cases are pending before the Committee of Ministers. Resolutions have been passed in 34 of the 39 other cases. In view of their length, I am arranging to place the text of these resolutions in the Library of the House. The remaining five cases were all dealt with by the Committee of Ministers before the adoption in 1976 of the rules which provide that their decisions on judgment by the court be embodied in resolutions. In these cases, the committee, after satisfying itself that the Government involved had executed the judgment, "took note" of this action.

EC Foreign Ministers (Meeting)

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who it is intended will meet the Community Foreign Ministers in Lusaka on 2 to 4 February; and if any contacts will be made with members of the African National Congress while they are in Lusaka.

Mrs. Chalker: Ministers of the Twelve European Community countries are currently in Lusaka for discussions with the Foreign Ministers, of the six front-line states. The Dutch Foreign Minister as the president, met representatives of the ANC in Lusaka on 2 February.

Organisations (Funding)

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to alter the existing system of funding through Foreign Office votes of organisations such as the British Council.

Mr. Eggar: We have no such plans.

European Act

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reference is made to European union in the European Act adopted by the intergovernmental conference.

Mrs. Chalker: References to European union are made in the preamble to the single European Act in the context of the Stuttgart solemn declaration, which identified European union as a process of deepening and broadening existing European activities. Neither the title of the Act nor its operative clauses refer to union.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects copies of the English text of the European Act to be available to hon. Members.

Mrs. Chalker: Copies of the text were placed in the Library and Vote Office on 30 January.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why he has withdrawn the reserve on the European Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement I made to the House on 30 January at column 1106.

European Community Budget

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what arguments have been put forward to Her Majesty's Government by the European Commission to justify its adoption of a budget as amended by the European Assembly, against the decision of the Council of Ministers.

Mr. Brooke: I have been asked to reply.

Article 203 of the treaty lays down that the budget is formally adopted by the president of the European Parliament. Article 205 states that the Commision is then responsible for its implementation. The Council of Ministers has decided to challenge the Parliament before the European Court, for adopting the 1986 budget on the grounds that it contains unauthorised increases in expenditure. The United Kingdom and certain other member states are mounting separate national actions against the adoption of the budget.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Commodity Prices

Mr. Best asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will state the fall in commodity prices for the last 12 months for which figures are available; if he will state the level of effect this has had on inflation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: In the middle of January 1986 the Economist (all items) index of commodity prices (which excludes oil) was 9 per cent. lower when measured in SDR's than a year previously but 2 per cent. higher when measured in dollars. Over the same period dollar prices of North sea oil fell by 25 per cent.

Lower inflation in the world economy clearly contributes to the reduction of domestic inflation but it is not possible to isolate the precise contribution.

Betting Duty

Mr. Garrett asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the revenue from (a) the off-course betting duty and (b) the on-course betting duty in the last year for which figures are available; and if he can split the figure between horse and greyhound racing.

Mr. Brooke: The revenue raised from the general betting duty in 1984-85 was as follows:

Off-course	274,596
On-course*	18,451

* Includes totalisators

I regret that it is not possible to identify separately the revenue from horse and greyhound racing.

Mr. Greenway asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current annual revenue from taxes on (a) on-course and (b) off-course betting; what is the cost of collecting these taxes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Details of the revenue raised in 1984-85 were given in my reply earlier today to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Garrett).

Precise figures of costs relating to individual duties are not available but the cost of administering the betting and gaming duties as a whole in 1984-85 amounted to £6·4 million, or approximately 1 per cent. of the revenue raised.

Meetings

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the regular meetings which he expects to attend or be represented in 1986 of the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, the International Development Agency, the International Finance Company and the Commonwealth Finance Ministers of the European Economic Community.

Mr. Lawson: I expect to attend, or be represented at, the following meetings during 1986:

The IMF Interim Committee and Development Committee of the IMF and World Bank 9-11 April
European Investment Bank Board of Governors 16 June
The Commonwealth Finance Ministers' Meeting 23/24 September
The IMF Interim Committee and Development Committee of the IMF and World Bank Late September
The Annual Meetings of the IMF/IBRD/IDA/IFC 30 September—3 October Economic and Finance Council Meetings of the EEC (ECOFIN)
17 February
10 March
28 April
26 May
16 June
7 July
13 October
8 December

Informal ECOFIN Meetings
4/6 April
19/20 September

Tobacco Tax

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue was raised from tobacco taxes in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mr. Brooke: It is estimated that £5,240 million was raised in 1985 from the excise duties and value added tax on tobacco products.

Contracted-out Services

Mr. Canavan asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will state, for services for which each Government Department is responsible, the expenditure on contracted-out services in (a) catering, (b) laundry, (c) security guarding, (d) cleaning, (e) general maintenance and (f) other services; and if he will express that expenditure as a percentage of total expenditure on each service.

Mr. MacGregor: The table shows total expenditure of Government Departments in 1984-85. Comparable information for "other services" cannot be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Estimated costs (1984-85)

	(1) Total £ million	(2) Contracted out £ million	(3) (2) as per cent. of (1)
Service
Catering—Home Office
Prison Dept and MOD	108·0	4·5	4·2
Other depts	6·9	4·5	65·2
Cleaning	69·2	58·4	84·4
Laundry	11·3	8·3	73·5
Maintenance	116·1	94·9	81·7
Security Guarding	66·5	5·0	7·5
Totals	*378·0	*175·7	46·5

* Totals are not the exact sums of component items due to rounding.

Free Zone Steering Committee

Mr. Lambie asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the composition of the free zone steering committee; and how often it has met.

Mr. MacGregor: The committee comprises of officials from Departments concerned with the freeport experiment, under Treasury chairmanship. It has met twice to review the progress of a five-year research study of the six freeport experiments being conducted by Roger Tym and Partners, which was announced in July 1984, at column 448.

Mr. Lambie asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the free zone operators, or their association, have been invited to participate in the free zone steering committee.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government Departments represented on the committee have responded to views put forward by the operators and their representatives on a number of occasions, and are willing to consider any further approaches that are made. It would not be appropriate for the operators or their associations to participate in the deliberations of the committee.

Crown Estate Commissioners

Mr. Body asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the policy of the Crown Estate Commissioners towards the residence of their agricultural tenants on the holdings let to them.

Mr. MacGregor: The policy of the Crown Estate Commissioners is that a tenant should reside on his agricultural holding if a suitable house exists on it.

European Court Budget

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 22 January, Official Report, column 197, if the Government have yet applied to the European Court for suspension of implementation by the Commission of the disputed elements in the budget pending substantive judgment by the court; what estimate he has made of the duration of the legal proceedings at the European Court in making financial provisions for additional payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

North Sea Oil (Revenue)

Mr. Bruce asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the expected total annual revenues to the Exchequer from United Kingdom North sea oil production at the following market prices (a) $18, (b) $15, (c) $12 and (d) $10.

Mr. Moore: The effects on oil revenues—still more on total revenues—of assuming different oil prices are subject to wide margins of error. A sustained change from current levels of about $1 a barrel, on the assumption of no change in the exchange rate, would lead to a change in North sea revenue of about £½ billion in a full year. The effects of a larger change would depend on a wide range of factors difficult to quantify, such as expectations of future oil prices and hence oil companies' exploration and investment decisions.

Lodging Allowances

Mr. Wareing asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the regulations governing exemption from tax on lodging allowances; what has been the nature of such representations; what plans he has to amend the regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Charities (VAT)

Mr. Wareing asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those organisations which have made representations to him since his last budget calling for a value added tax relief for charities; what his response has been; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The list is as follows:
Band Aid Appeal Fund
Bradford Fire Disaster Fund

Charities' VAT Reform Group
Methodist Homes for the Aged
Royal British Legion
Action Aid
Home Farm Trust
Help the Aged
Abbeyfield Society
PDSA
National Children's Home
Council for Christian Care
Licensed Victuallers' National Homes
John Groom's Association for the Disabled
British Heart Foundation
English National Folk Dance Society
Village Halls Forum
Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission
National Trust

The representations of these charities about VAT are being carefully considered, but I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget statement.

WALES

Rural Environment

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to assist farmers and those living in the countryside in Wales to improve the rural environment.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Yes. I am pleased to announce that I am today launching a farm and countryside initiative in Wales. This will be similar to that announced for England by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food today in answer to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key).

The initiative will be linked to, and funded through, the Manpower Services Commission's community programme and has the backing of the Welsh Development Agency, the Development Board for Rural Wales, the Wales Tourist Board, the Countryside Commission, the Nature Conservancy Council and the agricultural training board.

The liaison point will be the five divisional offices of the Welsh Office agriculture department from whom those interested in putting forward projects can seek further information.

PRIME MINISTER

Medical Research Funding

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Prime Minister if she is satisfied with the co-ordination of policies on medical research funding.

The Prime Minister: Yes. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science makes a grant-in-aid to the Medical Research Council on the advice of the Advisory Board of Research Councils on which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services is represented. In deciding how to apportion its funds, the Medical Research Council takes account of the views of the health departments that are represented in the membership of the council.

Israeli Prime Minister (Meeting)

Mr. Parry asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on her recent meeting with the Prime Minister of Israel.

The Prime Minister: My talks with Mr. Peres on 22 January were interesting and constructive. They concentrated on current efforts to move towards middle east peace negotiations.

Westland plc

Mr. McNamara asked the Prime Minister on what dates in 1984 and 1985 she met Lord Aldington to discuss the affairs of Westland plc.

The Prime Minister: There were no such meetings.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Prime Minister (1) whether she authorised the formal declassification of the Solicitor-General's letter of 6 January to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) and if she will make a statement;

(2) when the Solicitor-General's letter of 6 January to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) was formally declassified; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Law Officers authorised the declassification and publication of the letter to which the hon. Member referred on 15 January, and it was accordingly placed that afternoon in the Library of the House by my right hon. Friend the Lord Privy Seal.

Mr. Cohen asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to her statement of 27 January, Official Report, column 657, what action she took or instructions she gave, and to whom, upon discovering the fact of the disclosure of extracts from the Solicitor-General's letter of 6 January some hours after it had occurred; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister (1) on what grounds a non-attributable disclosure to the Press Association was chosen as the means of bringing the Solicitor-General's letter of 6 January to the then Secretary of State for Defence, the right hon. Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine), into the public domain; and if she will make a statement;

(2) when she first knew that a Westland board meeting and press conference were to be held at 4 pm on 6 January;

(3) if she had formed any view as to whether the Solicitor-General's opinion about the material inaccuracy of the then Secretary of State for Defence's letter to the European consortium should be brought into the public damain, before a copy of the Solicitor-General's letter to the then Secretary of State for Defence was received in her office; and if she will make a statement;

(4) if she knew from her discussions with her office on 7 January that the disclosure of the Solicitor-General's letter to the then Secretary of State for Defence had been made by officials of the Department of Trade and Industry; and if she will make a statement;

(5) if she knew from her discussions with her office on 7 January whether the Department of Trade and Industry officials had asked for the disclosure of the letter from the Solicitor-General to the then Secretary of State for Defence to be made from No. 10 Downing street; and if she will make a statement;

(6) if she knew from her discussions with her office on 7 January that the disclosure of the Solicitor-General's letter of 6 January to the then Secretary of State for Defence had been unauthorised; and if she will make a statement;

(7) when she first became aware that the Solicitor-General had agreed to write to the then Secretary of State for Defence alleging material inaccuracies in his letter to the European consortium;

(8) if she had any discussions with her private office between 4 January and 1.30 pm on 6 January either concerning the possibility of bringing into the public domain the Solicitor-General's opinion that the then Secretary of State for Defence's letter to the European consortium contained material inaccuracies, or concerning the way in which the anticipated letter from the Solicitor-General to the then Secretary of State for Defence should be handled; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing to add to what I said in my statement to the House on 23 January and my speech in the debate on 27 January.

EC Budget

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the question of whether the Commission should be empowered to spend the disputed sums in the budget passed by the European Assembly on 18 December, the vires of which were referred to the European Court by the Council meeting of 20 December; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No. But the United Kingdom will shortly be applying to the European Court of Justice for an interim order suspending implementation of the disputed part of the budget until the court gives a decision on the substantive case.

European Act

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if it is her intention to take part in the signing of the European Act in Luxembourg on 17 February.

The Prime Minister: No. My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the hon. Member for Wallasey (Mrs. Chalker), will sign for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will take steps to make the text of the European Act available to hon. Members before it is formally signed on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

The Prime Minister: The text was made available to hon. Members on 30 January.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if it is the intention of Her Majesty's Government to seek the approval of Parliament to the European Act before it is signed on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

The Prime Minister: No. The agreement can enter into force only if ratified in all member states. Legislation will be required to give effect to the agreement in the United Kingdom. In accordance with normal practice, Parliament will have a full opportunity to consider the agreement when legislation is brought before it.

Energy Conservation Scheme

Mr. Speller asked the Prime Minister if she will take steps to extend the provisions of the energy conservation scheme for industry and commerce operated in Northern Ireland by the energy division of the Department of Economic Development throughout the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Northern Ireland scheme is designed specifically to deal with the Province's problems of oil dependency and high energy costs. The Government have no intention of extending the scheme throughout the United Kingdom.

NORTHERN IRELAND

High Technology Firms

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to avoid closures of high technology firms in Northern Ireland like the shutdown of the American Monitor Corporation.

Dr. Boyson: The Industrial Development Board attaches high priority to promoting long-term employment in viable businesses. Where a company in difficulty has a prospect of viability with assistance, the IDB will consider making financial assistance available. The IDB is also prepared to assist companies seeking to secure their business through the introduction of new products or processes. In the case of American Monitor International it is unfortunate that despite the financial assistance provided the company has decided to cease trading; this was precipitated by the major shareholder, American Monitor Corporation of Indianapolis, filing for "Chapter 11" under United States bankruptcy laws.

Teachers

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the number of teachers employed in schools in Northern Ireland in each year since 1979 and the planned level of teaching staff for 1986-87.

Dr. Mawhinney: The available information is as follows (excluding peripatetic and supply teachers):

School year	Number of full-time teachers	Number of part-time teachers
1978-79	19,129	523
1979-80	19,027	565
1980-81	18,907	534
1981-82	18,721	576
1982-83	18,616	558
1984-85	18,392	650

In 1985-86, 18,393 full-time posts have been allocated to schools and current plans for 1986-87 provide for an allocation of some 18,250 full-time posts in schools and some 200 full-time peripatetic and supply teachers. Because all allocated posts are not filled at the date on which statistics are collected, these figures are not comparable with the number of teachers employed. Information on part-time posts in 1985-86 and 1986-87 is not available.

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action has been taken to meet the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Teacher Education to increase the number of teachers in Northern Ireland by 2,500.

Dr. Mawhinney: The recommendations of the advisory committee on teacher education will be taken into consideration by my Department in its ongoing assessment of teacher numbers. Latest expenditure plans, however provide for no departure from the existing policy of determining teacher numbers on the basis of maintaining the existing pupil-teacher ratio.

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many compulsory redundancies of teachers there have been in controlled schools in Northern Ireland in each of the past three years; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 409]: The figures available are as follows:

	Number
1983-84	32

The figure for 1982-83 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The figures indicate the result of falling enrolments in situations where the necessary staff reduction could not be achieved by other means.

Higher Education

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the level of funding for higher education in Northern Ireland for each year since 1979 and the higher education budget for 1986.

Dr. Mawhinney: The figures are as follows:

Financial Years	£
1979-80	56,701,487
1980-81	70,279,486
1981-82	75,653,658
1982-83	81,911,931
1983-84	88,061,320
1984-85	91,346,575
1985-86*	102,878,833

* Estimated

The budget figure for the 1986-87 year is not yet known. The figures for the financial years 1979-80 to 1984-85 exclude costs attributable to fees and awards for students undertaking first level courses at polytechnics.

The figures exclude costs attributable to courses at advanced further education level (normally considered as higher education) in colleges of further education for the financial years 1979-80 to 1985-86.

School Building

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the Government will fund any new school building projects in Northern Ireland after 1 April.

Dr. Mawhinney: There will be a moratorium on all new major building projects in the education sector in the 1986-87 financial year. Expenditure on on-going major works however will be increased and an additional £2 million has been allocated to the schools minor works/ maintenance programmes.

Capital Project

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the amount of funding for new school building and other capital projects relating to education since 1979.

Dr. Mawhinney: The available information is as follows:

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of the security forces convicted of offences in Northern Ireland and sentenced to custodial sentences have been allowed to return to Great Britain on parole for humanitarian reasons in 1985.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many prisoners charged with scheduled offences in the latest calendar year were remanded in custody prior to trial for periods between (a) nought to three months, (b) three to six months, (c) six to nine months, (d) nine to 12 months, (e) 12 to 18 months and (f) over 18 months for scheduled and non-scheduled offences, respectively;

(2) how many prisoners for each year since 1980 were remanded in custody prior to trial for scheduled and non-scheduled offences, respectively;

(3) what percentage of prisoners on custodial remand for scheduled and non-scheduled offences, respectively, were (a) given a non-custodial sentence, (b) given a custodial sentence and (c) found not guilty or not proceeded against for the latest calendar year and the year to date;

(4) what was the average length of time that prisoners spent on custodial remand for scheduled and non-scheduled offences respectively for the latest calendar year and the year to date;

(5) how many prisoners were remanded in custody prior to trial for scheduled and non-scheduled offences, respectively, for the latest calendar year and the year to date;

(6) if he will give the average period between remand and trial for prisoners refused bail and charged with scheduled offences in Northern Ireland in the latest calendar year and to date.

Mr. Scott: Data relating to the last quarter of 1985 became available only last week and I will be replying to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Non-scheduled Offences

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many persons were charged in Northern Ireland with non-scheduled offences; and how many persons were found not guilty of all or some of the offences with which they were charged in the year 1985 and to date;

(2) if he will give separately for magistrates' courts and Crown courts for 1985 the number of cases involving non-scheduled offences in which pleas of not guilty were entered; in how many of these cases verdicts of not guilty were returned; and in how many of these cases trial was by jury.

Mr. Scott: Data relating to the last quarter of 1985 became available only last week and I will be replying to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Prison Population

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the size of the present prison population in Northern Ireland categorised by age and by sex in the following groups: under 18 years, 18 to 25 years, 25 to 30 years, 30 to 40 years, 40 to 50 years, 50 to 60 years and over 60 years old; and if he will give a breakdown of the length of sentence being served by percentage of the total prison population;

(2) if he will give details of the number of prisoners currently in Northern Ireland prisons, of the age structure of convicted prisoners in the prisons of Northern Ireland and of the number of convicted prisoners serving sentences for terrorist-type offences.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Security Statistics

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the security statistics for 1985 are now available, together with details of persons charged with terrorist-type offences and convictions for scheduled offences for the year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the number of prisoners refused bail for each year since 1980; and what is the average period of remand without bail for accused persons charged either wholly or in part on the basis of accomplice evidence in each of the following categories (a) the top decile of prisoners awaiting trial for the longest period, (b) the top quartile of prisoners awaiting trial for the longest period, (c) the second quartile of prisoners awaiting trial for the longest period and (d) the average period of remand for all prisoners charged on the basis of such evidence;

(2) what was the average period of remand without bail in each of the following cases involving accomplice witnesses' evidence of (a) persons convicted, (b) persons acquitted and (c) persons who were released as a result of such evidence being retracted; and how these figures compare with those for persons charged with terrorist-type offences on the basis of evidence other than accomplice evidence;

(3) how many persons accused of terrorist-type offences on the basis of accomplice witness testimony are currently awaiting trial in Northern Ireland; how many persons have been convicted and how many persons have been acquitted of such crimes after having been charged either wholly or partially on the basis of accomplice witness testimony; and how many persons have been released following the retraction of testimony by accomplice witnesses;

(4) what was the portion and number of persons accused of terrorist-type offences on the basis, either wholly or in part, of accomplice witnesses' testimony who were accorded bail; and what was the equivalent proportion of persons accused of terrorist crimes who were not charged on the basis of accomplice testimony who were accorded bail in 1985;

(5) if he will give the number of cases in which persons were convicted of scheduled offences in Northern Ireland in 1985 on the basis of evidence given by accomplices on behalf of the Crown and in which evidence other than that of the accomplice, either forensic, from witnesses other than convicted terrorists or by an admission of guilt from the accused, was also used to obtain the conviction;

(6) how many persons were detained under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1973 and 1978 in 1985;

(7) how many persons were detained in connection with terrorist-type offences under Acts other than the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts and the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Acts in 1985;

(8) what information he has concerning the number of people who were detained in 1985 under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 and who were charged with scheduled offences under the Act, and other Acts, separately;

(9) if he will make a statement concerning the operation of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 in 1985 with regard to the annual total of arrests made under the Act; and how many persons arrested under the Act were detained for the following periods (a) up to 12 hours, (b) 12 to 24 hours, (c) 24 to 36 hours, (d) 36 to 48 hours, (e) 48 to 60 hours nd (f) 60 to 72 hours, indicating those numbers (i) not ultimately charged under the Act and released, (ii) those charged under the Act, (iii) those charged with an offence but not under the Acts, indicating which offences and (iv) those charged under the Act but not initially detained under that Act;

(10) how many people have been convicted in the current year, either on their own admission of guilt or following a plea of not guilty, on the basis of evidence given by accomplices on behalf of the Crown in cases concerning scheduled offences in Northern Ireland; how many suspects arrested on the basis of such evidence have been released as a result of the retraction of evidence given by accomplices; and how many people are presently awaiting trial as a result of evidence obtained from terrorist accomplices.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons detained under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts were charged with (a) offences under the Acts and (b) offences under other Acts in 1985.

Mr. Scott: In 1985, five people detained in Northern Ireland under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1984 were charged with offences under that Act. Two hundred and forty two were charged with offences under other Acts or with common law offences.

Female Prisoners

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average period of custodial remand for female custodial remand prisoners in Northern Ireland for the years 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Scott: Data relating to the last quarter of 1985 became available only last week and I will be replying to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the average length of custodial sentence of female prisoners in Northern Ireland in 1985.

Mr. Scott: The average length of custodial sentence for females sentenced between 1 January 1985 and 24 November was eight months.

Harland and Wolff

Mr. Trotter asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which firms of (a) accountants and (b) consultants have been appointed to report to him since 1979 on the affairs of Harland and Wolff; when they were appointed; when their reports were received; and to what extent the firms concerned had previous knowledge or experience of the affairs of the company.

Dr. Boyson: The following firms have been appointed since 1979 to provide advice on the affairs of Harland and Wolff plc:

i. P.E. Consulting Group Ltd., appointed August 1981 and report provided in September 1981.
This firm had earlier in 1981 provided advice to a Government-appointed independent review team considering diversification opportunities at H and W; and ii. P.A. Management Consultants, appointed June 1983 and providing advisory reports to the Department of Economic Development on an ongoing basis. This firm had been retained by H and W in 1982 to assist a management team in examining overhead costs at the yard.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Her Majesty's Government were aware before signing the Anglo-Irish agreement of the extent to which the Irish Government had engaged in consultation with the Social Democratic and Labour Party in Northern Ireland about the progress of negotiations on the agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects United States and European Economic Community aid anticipated at the time of the Hillsborough agreement to reach Northern Ireland; in what form; and on what conditions.

Mr. Tom King: [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1986, c. 599.] Following the signing of the Anglo-Irish agreement on 15 November last year, the United States President issued a statement of support in which he spoke of finding tangible ways for the United States to lend political support to the agreement. The Speaker of the House of Representatives undertook to endeavour to see that this commitment was honoured by Congress and in December both Houses passed a resolution in support of aid. In mid-January, British, Irish and United States officials met in Washington for exploratory talks on United States financial and economic support. In the Community both the Commission and the European Parliament have expressed support for the Anglo-Irish agreement and for continued economic and social development in Northern Ireland. But no formal proposals have yet been made and it would therefore be premature to speculate about when or how aid might be available from either source.

Anglo-Irish Intergovenmental Conference

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he intends urgently to raise at the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference extradition and extraterritorial jurisdiction in the terms of article 8 of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1986, c. 597-98]: The matter has already been raised.

At the last meeting of the intergovernmental conference on 10 January we emphasised the need for an early review of policy aspects of extradition and related matters. The conference instructed officials to continue their discussions with a view to a meeting, before the next meeting of the conference, of a sub-group comprising, on the British side, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and the Attorney-General and, on the Irish side, the Minister for Justice and the Attorney-General.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the proposals considered in respect of Northern Ireland by the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference which have been found to have application by the Irish Government in terms of article 2 of the Anglo-Irish agreement; and what action followed.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1986, c. 597-98]: Article 2 of the Anglo-Irish agreement makes it clear that proposals which the Irish Government may make in respect of Northern Ireland may also be found to have application by the Irish Government. But it also makes clear that there is no derogation from the sovereignty of either the United Kingdom Government or the Irish Government and that each retains responsibilities for the decisions and administration of government within its own jurisdiction. The joint statements, issued after each of the three meetings of the conference, set out the matters which were raised. The extent to which any proposals made by the Irish Government in respect of Northern Ireland are already provided for in the Republic or may be provided for in future is a matter for the Irish Government.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether it is intended that the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference should sometimes meet in Dublin.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1986, c. 597-98]: There is no limitation under the agreement where meetings of the conference may be held. But there are no plans to hold a meeting in Dublin at present.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many United Kingdom civil servants, and how many Northern Ireland civil servants, are posted in the secretariat of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1986, c. 597-98]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Gow) on 23 January, at columns 313-14. The composition of the secretariat has not been finalised but the six or so staff who are likely to be needed will be drawn from the United Kingdom Civil Service and the Northern Ireland Civil Service. Posts will not be formally apportioned between the two services and the number of staff from each is therefore likely to vary as needs change.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in what proportion the cost of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference will be borne by the two Governments.

Mr. Tom King: [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1986, c. 597-98]: The costs of the intergovernmental conference will be shared by the two Governments. The basis of the apportionment of costs has not yet been determined.

SOCIAL SERVICES

War Pensions

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what representations he has received about the £4 disregard on war pensions;

(2) which Royal British Legion branches have made representations to him about the £4 disregard on war pensions.

Mr. Major: Over the years a number of representations about the £4 disregard on war pensions have been made by ex-service organisations, war pensions committees and others. Several organisations mentioned the disregard in their comments on the Government's Green Paper "Reform of Social Security".

Our records do not readily enable us to identify those branches of the Royal British Legion that have at some time made representations.

Means-tested Benefits

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate the number of low income working families, as defined in Cmnd. 9517, who are not in receipt of means-tested benefits.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Furnished Accommodation

Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the precise criteria required by his Department's local offices for claimants to prove there is no suitable furnished accommodation available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The chief adjudication officer, who provides guidance to local adjudication officers on the interpretation of the law, has recently issued revised guidance on the criteria to be taken into account when considering the suitability and availability of furnished accommodation; the revised guidance is at paragraphs 7176-7183 of the S manual, a copy of which is in the Library.

Nursing Care

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now ensure that all decisions concerned with the nursing of patients are made by nurses, trained and qualified to make such decisions.

Mr. Hayhoe: Decisions concerning professional standards of nursing care will continue to be made by appropriately qualified nurses. Each health authority should continue to have a senior nurse qualified to advise on and monitor these standards and to provide nursing advice on all decisions affecting services to and care of patients.

Patient Appointments

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the waiting time for (a) outpatient appointments and (b) in patient treatment in the ear, nose and throat specialities in (1) the United Kingdom, (2) England and (3) each of the Thames regions; and what has been the change in each over the previous year.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the right hon. Member all the information he seeks. Information on the waiting time in England for outpatient consultation is not held centrally, and statistics for the rest of the United Kingdom are a matter for my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Scotland, for Wales and for Northern Ireland. The estimated median interval between the date a patient was placed on the waiting list and the date of admission to ear, nose and throat departments in National Health Service hospitals is given in the table for the latest two years for which figures are available centrally.

NHS hospitals, ear, nose and throat inpatient departments.

Regional Health Authority	Estimated median waiting time (in weeks) of waiting list cases		Change between 1982 and 1983 (in weeks)*
	1982	1983
North West Thames	9	9	nil
North East Thames	9	11	+2
South East Thames	9	10	+1
South West Thames	11	12	+1
England	11	13	+2

* Waiting times in 1983 were affected by the industrial action in the Health Service in 1982.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his latest estimate of the cost of extending the long-term rate of supplementary benefit to the adult unemployed under 60 years.

Mr. Newton: About £500 million. Our proposals in the Social Security Bill currently before Parliament would replace the present supplementary benefit scheme structure, including the distinction between the ordinary and long-term rates, by income support based on personal allowances and premiums.

Mr. Walters asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the frequency with which supplementary benefit claimants change addresses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I regret that no information is available centrally on the frequency with which supplementary benefit claimants change addresses. Statistics are not kept routinely so that information could only be obtained by a special exercise which would be disproportionately expensive.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the number of families with children with additional requirements included in their supplementary benefit assessment, by type and average amount of additional requirement.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 16 January 1986, c. 702.]: The information at December 1983, the latest date for which information is available, is as follows:

(1) Type of additional requirement (AR)	(2) Number of families with children in receipt of AR (thousands)	(3) Average amount of AR for families at (2)
Extra heating	692	3·09
Special diet	48	2·48
Extra laundry	20	2·47
Heavy wear and tear on clothing	6	1·25
Extra baths	6	1·42
Hire purchase	1	2·59
Hospital visiting fares	1	8·24
Blindness	1	1·41
Domestic assistance	*	10·00
Storage of furniture	*	5·44
Over 80 age addition	*	0·25

* Less than 500

Source: Annual Statistical Enquiry.

About 706,000 families with children were in receipt of one or more additional requirements, averaging £3·31 a week for those families. This amount does not take account of the effect of the available scale margin in relevant cases, so that the average amount of additional benefit actually received would be somewhat lower.

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people claimed supplementary benefit in Greenock and Port Glasgow in each of the years 1979 to 1985; and what percentage this represents.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1986, c. 621.]: The table shows the number of claims to supplementary benefit processed by the Department's offices at Greenock and Port Glasgow in each of the years from April 1979 to April 1985, and the percentage changes they represent.

	Greenock	Percentage change	Port Glasgow	Percentage change

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by his Department with grant aid in the last financial year for which figures are available, and the size of the grant so given.

Mr. Whitney: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my predecessor to my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith) on 25 July 1985 at columns 765-71.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

Mr. Whitney: Grants are made only for purposes which contribute to the achievement of the Department's policy objectives, and include grants towards the central administrative costs of national voluntary organisations who help to achieve those objectives.

Every grant is subject to a condition that the money must be spent for the purposes for which it was given and is monitored accordingly. Grants are not available to support party political activity.

Tobacco

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much money was spent in the last calendar year for which figures are available on curing people addicted to tobacco smoking; and if he will give a breakdown of the figure.

Mr. Whitney: Help and treatment to people wishing to give up smoking are generally offered as an integral part of the service provided by health authorities and general practitioners and are not separately costed. Many smokers stop of their own volition and without medical help. In 1985-86 the Health Education Council spent some £2 million on anti-smoking measures, and in addition the Government have provided £1 million for a pilot media campaign to help persuade young people not to smoke.

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much money was spent on research into cures for tobacco addiction in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: Information on the total research effort in this field is not collected centrally. The Government allocated £73,000 to the Maudsley hospital in 1985-86 for research into the effectiveness of different treatment methods to help people stop smoking, and in addition some £100,000 in researching ways of discouraging young people from smoking. The Health Education Council has allocated about £150,000 to research in this field.

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many deaths were recorded from diseases normally associated with tobacco smoking in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: I refer the right hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Norfolk, North-West (Mr. Bellingham) on 16 December at columns 73-74. The tables show the corresponding figures for England and Wales for 1984, the latest available calendar year.

	England and Wales	Number 1984
ICD* 162	Malignant neoplasm of trechea, bronchus and lung	35,739

Drugs

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much money was spent in the last calendar year for which figures are available on curing people addicted to drug taking; and if he will give a breakdown of that figure.

Mr. Whitney: Information is not available in the form requested. The cost of treatment provided for drug misusers by the family practitioner and general psychiatric and other hospital services is not separately identified. £1,878,650 was made available from central funds in 1984-85 for pump priming services for the treatment and rehabilitation of drug misusers.

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much money was spent on research programmes on drug taking in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: The estimated expenditure on research into drug misuse by the Department during 1985-86 is £160,000.

Research into drug misuse is also funded by the Medical Research Council, the Economic and Social Research Council, the Health Education Council, the Home Office and, under the urban programme, by the Department of the Environment.

Evaluations of services being provided under the Department's drugs initiative are undertaken by the health and local authorities and voluntary organisations concerned, but the cost is not separately identifiable.

Mr. MacKenzie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many deaths were recorded as due to drug taking in the last calendar year for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: The table shows the number of deaths registered in England and Wales in 1984 (the latest available calendar year) where the underlying cause of death was stated as drug dependence or non-depenent abuse of drugs (excluding alcohol and tobacco).

Number of deaths from drug abuse England and Wales 1984

	Number
ICD* 304	Drug Dependence	102
ICD* 305.2-305.9	Non-dependent Abuse of Drugs (excluding alcohol and tobacco)	25

* International Classification of Diseases 9th revision.

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of the £5 million which he has promised to provide for drugs misuse services he has allocated to the Wolverhampton health authority.

Mr. Whitney: It will be for the West Midlands regional health authority to decide on the allocation to Wolverhampton health authority from its share of the additional £5 million which is being made available for the development of services for drug misusers in England. Authorities will shortly be notified of the detailed arrangements.

Heating Additions

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many claimants in Scotland, in each of the years (a) 1983, (b) 1984 and (c) 1985 were awarded (i) extra heating additions at (x) the lower rate and (y) the higher rate, (ii) central heating additions at (x) the lower rate and (y) the higher rate, (iii) age-related heating addition, (iv) disabled person's heating addition, (v) estate rate heating addition and (vi) any other heating addition.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible, giving information for 1983. Information for 1984 and 1985 is not yet available.

Exceptional Weather Payments

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the months in each of the last six years in which additional levels of social benefits have been made available for pensioners during exceptionally cold weather periods.

Mr. Newton: I assume the hon. Member has in mind the provision whereby householders in receipt of supplementary benefit are eligible for a single payment if they have used more fuel than they have budgeted for as a result of a period of exceptionally severe weather.

The weather was not considered to be exceptionally severe during 1981, 1983 and 1984. It was considered to be exceptionally severe over the whole of Great Britain in January 1982, and in certain areas of England and Wales during January and February 1985. No information is available for 1980.

Haemophiliac Counselling Centres

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in which regions of the United Kingdom the six haemophiliac counselling centres to which £270,000 has been devoted by his Department for tackling the spread of the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus will be located; and what factors he took into account when deciding that £270,000 would be a suitable sum of money to allocate for this purpose.

Mr. Hayhoe: The £270,000 has been allocated equally between the regional health authorities responsible for the six existing reference centres which between them treat haemophiliac patients and provide guidance and support to haemophilia treatment centres throughout England.

The regions concerned are Northern, Oxford, Trent, North Western, North-East Thames and South-East Thames.

The allocation is intended to allow extra staff to be employed in the centres on counselling. They will advise on the implications of positive HTLV III antibody tests for haemophiliacs and their families.

Red Alerts

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will instruct district general managers to report directly to him if they have either three red alerts in any period of three months or have any red alert lasting more than 10 days or have two consecutive red alerts with an interval of less than one month between them; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will instruct the West Midlands regional health authority to inquire into the reasons for the North Staffordshire infirmary to be on red alert for the second time in the current winter and for this red alert to have occurred so soon after the previous one; if he will instruct them to assess how typical this hospital is in this respect and to consider what steps should be taken to avoid red alerts occurring in the future barring exceptional circumstances;

(3) if he will instruct regional health authorities to provide him with information regarding the number of occasions on which hospitals in their region were on red alert and the number of days for which the red alert lasted; and if he will instruct them to identify those hospitals which have frequent and long-lasting red alerts and to explore the reasons for this happening;

(4) if he will set up a departmental working party to investigate (a) the most common reasons for hospitals to be on red alert and (b) the consequences for patients on the various waiting lists.

Mr. Hayhoe: I have no plans to instruct regional or district health authorities or their general managers to make inquiries about or report details of red alerts to me. As my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State said in his reply to the right hon. Member on 11 December 1985 at columns 686-87, it is the responsibility of health authorities to manage and supervise hospital and specialist services to meet local need. I have no plans to set up a departmental working party to investigate the specific causes and consequences of red alerts.

Royal Liverpool Teaching Hospital

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the current bed capacity at the Royal Liverpool teaching hospital;

(2) what information he has about partial or total ward closures at the Royal Liverpool teaching hospital;

(3) how many patients have been turned away from the Royal Liverpool teaching hospital through lack of beds or medical staff to deal with potential inpatients in the last six months and 12 months; what is the establishment of doctor, nursing and ancillary posts; if any vacancies are current; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: As this information is not collected centrally the hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Mersey regional health authority.

Mr. Abdessalem Ben Rabha

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Social Services pursuant to the answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 399, from the hon. Member for Leicester, East, if he will seek the permission of Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha to disclose whether he is in receipt of any social security benefits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I believe any such consent should be obtained direct from Mr. Salah Abdessalem Ben Rabha.

Special Claims Control Officers

Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many special claims control officers have been posted to the Manchester, Cheetham office of his Department; what is the anticipated period of these inquiries; what will be the cost of these inquiries; if all claimants being interviewed will be advised of their rights; and if he will issue a statement as to their findings.

Mr. Major: A visit to the Manchester (Cheetham) office by a team of four specialist claims control officers started on 27 January and is due to finish on 11 April: the cost of the exercise is not yet known. The officers are instructed to advise fully all claimants of their rights.

North-Western Regional Health Authority

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the last trade-union nominated member of the North-Western regional health authority ceased to sit; who replaced that member; if there are any unfilled places on the North-Western regional health authority; and if he has received any nominations from trade unions to fill a place on the North-Western regional health authority.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Cervical Cancer Screening

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to the answer of 9 December, Official Report, column 490, he will list those health authorities which had in full operation a computerised call and recall scheme for cervical cancer screening at the latest date for which such information is available.

Mr. Hayhoe: At June 1985 the following 13 health authorities were operating computerised call and recall systems for cervical cancer screening:

Barnsley
Bristol and Western Chichester
Exeter
Isle of Wight
North Bedfordshire
North Devon
Rochdale
Rotherham
Salford
South Bedfordshire
Stockport
Torbay

A further 24 health authorities had as at June 1985 firm plans to implement computerised call and recall systems by the end of 1985.

In my reply to the hon. Member on 19 December 1985 at columns 324-25, I listed the health authorities in both the above categories. Health authorities will next be asked to report progress towards implementing such systems in June 1986, as part of the normal planning and accountability process.

Leukaemia and Lymphatic Cancer

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys is including the royal ordnance factory, Burghfield and stomic weapons research establishment, Aldermaston and the reported high incidences of leukaemia and lymphatic cancer among young people living close to those establishments, in its comparative studies of malignancies in areas around nuclear bases and in control areas.

Mr. Hayhoe: The study includes the following localities:

Basingstoke Municipal Borough
Basingstoke Rural District
Bradfield Rural District (includes Aldermaston and Burghfield)
Kingsclere and Whitchurch Rural District
Newbury Municipal Borough
Newbury Rural District
Reading County Borough

Meningitis

Sir Anthony Kershaw asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether, in view of the repeated outbreaks lasting over a number of years of meningitis in the Stroud area of Gloucestershire, he will now take further steps to increase the medical resources being devoted to discovering the cause and the prevention of this disease; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Everything possible is being done to discover the cause of the incidence of acute meningitis in Stroud. The district health authority, with assistance and advice from the public health laboratory service and the communicable disease surveillance centre, are investigating meticulously all patients reported to have meningitis, their contacts and their environment. The Manchester public health laboratory and the Medical Research Council's clinical research centre at Northwick park hospital are both conducting research into meningococcal meningitis, and further work is being done by the research laboratories of the Wellcome Foundation.

Hospital Complaints Procedure Act 1985

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to implement the Hospital Complaints Procedure Act 1985.

Mr. Whitney: We intend to issue a consultation paper in the spring with a view to issuing the directions to health authorities required under the Act early in 1987, to take effect from 1 April 1987.

NHS (Matrons)

Mr. Lord asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will consider reintroducing the post of matron combining nursing and administration in the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Under Nursing and Midwidery Staffs Negotiating Council agreements, health authorities have a wide range of grades available to them to cover senior nurse managerial posts. No benefit would be obtained by re-introducing an imprecise umbrella grading title such as matron, although health authorities are free to use that title if and where they wish.

Supplementary Benefits Handbook

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects that the new supplementary benefits handbook taking account of changes in benefit rates in November 1985 will be published.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Human Tissue

Rev. Martin Smyth asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will place in the Library all documents and correspondence relating to the investigation in 1983 by officials of his Department into an alleged trade in dead human foetal material.

Mr. Hayhoe: [pursuant to his reply, 25 November 1985, c. 510.]: I now have the agreement of the individuals concerned and am arranging for the correspondence to be placed in the Library.

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the age breakdown and recorded cause of incapacity for work of (a) people who have been awarded severe disablement allowance and (b) people refused severe disablement allowance; and if he will give this information using the same classification of awards and refusals as in his answer of 29 November 1985, Official Report, columns 657-58.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 13 January 1986, c. 499.]: The available information as at 19 November is set out in the following tables. I regret that an analysis by reference to the reasons for award or disallowance, as in my reply to the hon. Member on 28 November 1985, at columns*657-58*, could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

The tables derive from a special computer analysis of statistical returns, and their totals of awards and disallowances correct those given in my reply on 28 November 1985, at columns 657-58, which were based on a clerical count. Tables 4 to 6 do not include those disallowed solely because they were over pension age.

SCOTLAND

Compulsory Purchase (Conveyancing Fees)

Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what will be the basis of compensation for conveyancing charges incurred in compulsory purchase transactions now that scale fees have been dropped.

Mr. Ancram: Although the Law Society of Scotland withdrew its scale of fees for general conveyancing as from 1 January 1985, the Scottish Law Directory still contains a recommended scale of fees for transactions with acquiring authorities. This scale provides the basis of compensation for conveyancing charges in compulsory purchase transactions, and I understand that the society has no intention of withdrawing the guidance on charges in this respect. Where the acquisition of an equivalent interest in another property is involved, compensation will be payable for reasonable legal expenses in respect of that acquisition. There is no recommended scale of fees for such transactions, but if the authority exercising compulsory purchase powers considers that an account of expenses in this connection is unreasonable, it may apply for the account to be taxed by the Auditor of Court.

Russian Language Teaching

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Scotland in how many schools in Scotland Russian is taught.

Mr. Allan Stewart: In 1983, the last year for which figures are available, Russian was taught in 30 schools in Scotland.

Cost of Living

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has about the cost of living in Aberdeen compared with the cost of living in London.

Mr. Allan Stewart: No information is available from official sources: the retail prices index compiled by the Department of Employment does not provide local figures.

Tourism

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he now expects to respond to the recommendations of the Scottish Affairs Committee made in March 1985 that the tourism function operated by the Highlands and Islands Development Board should be transferred to the Scottish Tourist Board.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend intends to announce his response to the recommendation made by the Committee on Scottish Affairs very shortly.

Liquor Licensing Laws

Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has received the final results of the survey into the liquor licensing laws in Scotland carried out on his behalf by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: The full report entitled "Drinking and Attitudes of Licensing in Scotland" has been published today and copies are in the Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Children's Homes and Hostels (Report)

Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has received the report of the committee of inquiry into children's homes and hostels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: The committee of inquiry chaired by Judge William Hughes has now reported and the report is being published today. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library. The committee of inquiry was appointed in March 1984 by the Department of Health and Social Services for Northern Ireland following an announcement on 18 January 1984 by the then Secretary of State.

The inquiry was held in public for the most part and witnesses had a right to be legally represented with all reasonable legal costs being met from public funds. 66 individuals gave oral evidence and written evidence was received from 26 individuals and organisations. On 10 days the committee took evidence in private in order to protect the identity and privacy of former residents of childrens homes.

I am grateful to Judge Hughes and the members of the committee for the thoroughness of their examination of the facts and of the underlying issues, for the deep concern shown in the report for the wellbeing of children and young people in residential homes and for the care and balance displayed in the analysis made by the committee of all that occurred.

The Government welcome the report as a full and objective analysis of events and I can give an assurance that its recommendations will now be pursued urgently with the interests concerned.

Judge Hughes' inquiry acknowledges the action which has already been taken to improve residential child care since the evidence of homosexuality came to light in 1980. The report endorses the action taken in introducing a new programme of inspection of children's homes under which each home will be inspected annually, in devising a complaints procedure for children in residential care and their parents, in improving the procedures for recruiting staff, in developing monitoring systems and in providing improved training for residential care staff.

There are many references in the report to the difficulties of preventing any detecting homosexual offences unless complaints are made by the children and young people concerned. The committee commented that the formal complaints procedure introduced in May 1985 to deal with this problem had not been fully put into effect because of difficulties in reaching agreement on the question of safeguards for residential care staff. I am glad to say that a set of guiding principles has now been developed which I am confident will fully protect the legitimate interests of children and staff. However, the recommendations now made in the report about preliminary investigations will be carefully examined with a view to considering whether these guiding principles can be further improved. The exhaustive investigation undertaken by the inquiry did not bring to light any evidence of an official cover-up of homosexual affairs involving children and young people in residential care. However, the report draws attention to errors and weaknesses which the committee discovered in the operation of the child care system and while acknowledging the progress which has been made goes on to make a series of recommendations for further improvement.

I am confident that close study of the report will reassure the public that the various complaints and allegations which circulated regarding abuse in the child care system have been meticulously investigated and that a door has been closed on the past. I am also pleased to endorse the comments made in the report about the valuable work done by social workers in Northern Ireland and I concur with the inquiry in hoping that its outcome will help restore their personal and professional confidence in the way they do their demanding work.

Firearms Certificates

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the number of private firearms certificates currently issued in Northern Ireland together with such informatiom as he has regarding the distribution of such certificates between nationalist and loyalist communities; and if he will state the number of certificates held by members of the Ulster Defence Regiment, and its Reserve, and the Royal Ulster Constabulary, and its Reserve.

Mr. Scott: On 31 December 1985, 88,340 firearms certificates were on issue to persons in Northern Ireland. Information on the political affiliation of holders of firearms certificates is not kept. Information about the total number of private firearms certificates held by members of the Ulster Defence Regiment and the Royal Ulster Constabulary reserve is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

District Rates

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provisions have been made for setting a district rate in the 18 local councils currently adjourned in protest over the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Needham: Northern Ireland district councils have a statutory duty to make a district rate for 1986-87 not later than 15 February 1986. It is a matter for each individual council to make arrangements to meet this requirement. If any council fails to make a rate by this date, the Government will take whatever action is necessary to secure the exercise of this function, either by the use of default powers in existing legislation or, if necessary, by taking additional powers.

Victoria Barracks Flats

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why security staff have been withdrawn from the Victoria barracks flats complex.

Mr. Needham: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive but I understand from the chairman that the executive's employment of specialist security staff at Victoria barracks was discontinued in January 1986 when it became clear that the service, which had been provided for some 18 months, was ineffective in preventing both vandalism to the communal areas and the illegal occupation of some flats.

Prison Population

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the size of the present prison population in Northern Ireland categorised by age and by sex in the following groups: under 18 years, 18 to 25 years, 25 to 30 years, 30 to 40 years, 40 to 50 years, 50 to 60 years and over 60 years old; and if he will give a breakdown of the length of sentence being served by percentage of the total prison population;

(2) if he will give details of the number of prisoners currently in Northern Ireland prisons, of the age structure of convicted prisoners in the prisons of Northern Ireland and of the number of convicted prisoners serving sentences for terrorist-type offences.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986]: At 24 November 1985 (the latest date for which figures in this detail are available) there was a total of 1,713 sentenced prisoners in Northern Ireland prison establishments. This figure includes inmates at the young offenders centre. The age distribution of the sentenced prison population is as follows:

	Male	Female
Under 18 years	35	—
18 years up to 25 years	521	5
25 years up to 30 years	508	8
30 years up to 40 years	506	6
40 years up to 50 years	101	2
50 years up to 60 years	16	—
60 years and over	5	—

The percentage distribution of sentenced population by length of sentence is as follows:

Length of sentences	Per cent.
Under 6 months	11·15
6 months to 1 year	3·04
1 year to 18 months	10·16
18 months to 2 years	0·29
2 years to 4 years	11·03
4 years to 10 years	17·16
10 years and over	21·37
Life	22·42

Young persons detained during the pleasure of the Secretary of State—3·39.

Of the 1,713 sentenced prisoners in custody on 24 November 1985, 1,211 were serving sentences for scheduled offences.

Terrorism

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give the number of cases in which persons were convicted of scheduled offences in Northern Ireland in 1985 on the basis of evidence given by accomplices on behalf of the Crown and in which evidence other than that of the accomplice, either forensic, from witnesses other than convicted terrorists or by an admission of guilt from the accused, was also used to obtain the conviction.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986]: As I explained in my answer of 7 February 1985, courts make their decisions having regard to all of the admissible evidence which is placed before them. It is not possible to identify cases in which the eventual decision depended only on accomplice evidence.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons were detained in connection with terrorist-type offences under Acts other than the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Acts and the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Acts in 1985.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986]: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

PRIME MINISTER

Students (Benefits)

Q22. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Prime Minister how many students she expects to be worse off in 1986-87 as a result of the changes in students' rights to draw supplementary benefit and housing benefit.

The Prime Minister: It is estimated that some 415,000 students — about three quarters of the total — will be affected by the proposed social security changes and associated grant increase of £36 a year for those living away from home. some 140,000 of these, who currently claim no benefits except perhaps supplementary benefit or unemployment benefit in the long vacation, will gain the full value of the £36 grant increase. The net effect for the remaining 275,000 will vary according to their circumstances, but with the majority likely to have some reduction in their combined grant and social security entitlement compared to what it would be under the current arrangements.

Arms Control

Q30. Mr. Latham asked the Prime Minister whether she will make a statement on the consultations which she has had with the American Administration about arms control since the meeting in Geneva between Mr. Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev.

The Prime Minister: Arms control has naturally been one of the subjects discussed in my meetings with members of the American Administration since the Geneva summit, for example, when I saw Mr. Shultz and Mr. Weinberger on separate occasions in December.

Scottish Teachers (Pay)

Q103. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Prime Minister if she will meet representatives of the relevant unions to discuss the current Scottish teachers claim for an independent pay review.

The Prime Minister: No. The teachers' case would best be served by direct negotiation with the employers on pay and conditions on the basis of the resources available.

Engagements

Mr. Parry asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 4 February.

Mr. Yeo asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 4 February.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 4 February.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 4 February.

Mr. Flannery asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 4 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Telephone Calls (Tape Recording)

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Prime Minister if any of the conversations on telephone calls to Downing street are tape recorded.

The Prime Minister: No, save that as under previous Governments important international telephone conversations have, on occasion, been recorded.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Licensing Laws

Mr. Nicholas Lyell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future of licensing laws in the light of the published report of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys on drinking in Scotland.

Mr. Hurd: The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys report, which was published today, compares levels of alcohol consumption and patterns of drinking in Scotland before and after the passing of the Licensing (Scotland) Act 1976, which introduced a closing time of 11.00 pm on weekdays for all licensed premises in Scotland and allowed licensed premises to apply for weekday extensions enabling them to open outside the permitted hours. The report also examines public attitudes to the 1976 Act and the use which licensees have made of the opportunity to open for longer hours.

The study concludes that there is no evidence that the 1976 Act has caused an increase in alcohol consumption, and there are signs that it has led to more leisurely and responsible drinking. The main use made of extensions has been to allow afternoon opening on weekdays. The change in the law is generally popular, but public opinion is less favourable towards late evening extensions than towards afternoon opening.

The report provides a detailed picture of experience in Scotland. I shall want to consider it, and public reaction to it, carefully — bearing in mind continuing public concern about the misuse of alcohol—before reaching a decision on whether the law in England and Wales might be changed on similar lines so as to allow more flexibility in opening hours.

Criminal Records

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he intends to take on the recommendations of the working party he set up to devise a system whereby information about the unsuitability by reason of criminal background of people seeking positions with access to children can be communicated to those who may employ them.

Mr. Mellor: A draft circular to give effect to the recommendations relating to paid and voluntary workers in local authority education and social services, and the probation service, has been circulated widely for comments. A draft circular covering National Health Service workers will be circulated shortly. Final circulars will be issued as soon as comments received on these drafts have been considered.

The review team is at present considering what arrangements can be made to cover those working with children in the voluntary and private sectors.

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria he used in deciding to exclude the Police Federation and the Superintendents Association from the working party he set up to review arrangements for the disclosure of information about the criminal records of persons seeking employment where they would have substantial access to children.

Mr. Mellor: The steering group supervising this review was kept small to enable the review to proceed quickly. The police interest is represented by a chief constable and the officer in charge of the national identification bureau. Both the Superintendents Association and Police Federation were consulted on the first report of the review and will continue to be consulted at each stage.

Thames Valley Police

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 23 January, Official Report, column 269, when he will take the second step towards approving the balance of 150 additional officers requested by Thames Valley police authority.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend will consider in the autumn the possibility of approving a further increase in the authorised establishment of the Thames Valley police.

Broadwater Farm, Tottenham

Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Metropolitan police officers have been sent to Jamaica in connection with allegations about grants to Broadwater farm, Tottenham, during recent months; and if he will state the cost and the purpose of the visits.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Two Metropolitan police officers went to Jamaica to investigate allegations about the diversion of funds from the Broadwater Farm Youth Association. The cost was £6,368 in addition to the officers' salaries.

Preliminary and interim reports on the investigation have been passed to the Director of Public Prosecutions, but the final report will take some time to complete.

Electoral Statistics

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the number of people whose names are on the electoral register in more than one parliamentary constituency; and what are the principal categories of people who are so registered.

Mr. Mellor: The information needed to make the estimate requested is not available and could be obtained only at very considerable cost. However, my hon. Friend may be interested in the results of a sample survey of about 10,500 persons eligible to vote conducted by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys and published in "Electoral Registration in 1981", a copy of which is in the Library. 0·4 per cent. of those in the sample were legitimately registered at more than one address, although not necessarily in more than one constituency. In addition, there were instances of names being included on the register twice by mistake, usually because they had been retained on the register at a previous address in addition to being registered at a new qualifying address.

Population Statistics

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the number of foreign nationals resident in the United Kingdom; and what is his estimate of the number of citizens of the Irish Republic resident in the United Kingdom who are registered to vote in the United Kingdom parliamentary and local elections.

Mr. Mellor: It is estimated from the most recent labour force survey that about 1·1 million foreign nationals, of whom nearly half a million claimed to be citizens of the Irish Republic, and about 0·5 million Commonwealth citizens were usually resident in the United Kingdom in mid-1984. It is not known how many of these Commonwealth citizens and citizens of the Irish Republic were on the electoral register as there is no requirement for applicants for electoral registration to state their citizenship-nationality. Other foreign nationals are not entitled to register.

Community Radio

Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, of the 180 applications for the five experimental community radio licences in London, how many were from (a) Greek-speaking and (b) Afro-Caribbean groups.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Of the applications for the five experimental community radio licences in London, 18 are from groups wishing to provide a service primarily for the Greek-speaking community, and 16 for the Afro-Caribbean community. However, there are other applications from groups with a range of ethnic or language backgrounds, including those mentioned, wishing to provide a diversified service.

Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now announce the successful applicants for the five experimental community radio licences in London.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) on 17 January, at columns 715-16.

Prison Disciplinary System

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the timetable for introducing the new prison disciplinary system.

Mr. Mellor: In announcing the publication of the report of the committee on the prison disciplinary system on 30 October 1985, my right hon. Friend accepted that new adjudication arrangements are needed. Consideration is still being given to what those arrangements should be.

Police Posts (Civilianisation)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of police posts civilianised in each of the past three years for (a) the Metropolitan police area and (b) all other force areas where such information is available without incurring such disproportionate cost; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1986, c. 275]: The Commissioner estimates that 91 Metropolitan police officers were freed for operational duties by civilianisation of the posts they held in the financial year 1983-84; and a further 119 in 1984-85. Estimates for other police forces in England and Wales are that some 460 officers were freed for operational duties by the recruitment of additional civilians in each of the financial years 1983-84 and 1984-85.

Comparable information for 1982-83 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Building

11. Mr. Loyden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the number of new build schools, primary-infants, in the 1985-86 programme.

Mr. Dunn: The allocations of prescribed capital expenditure by local education authorities which are determined annually by my right hon. Friend are not announced in terms of individual school building projects. The need to build new schools to cope with local population growth is taken into account but local education authorities are free to use their allocations as they wish. The allocations made for capital expenditure by governors of aided and special agreement schools are project-based and in 1985-86 included five new primary schools.

The Department's records show that to date in the current financial year particulars in respect of major building projects for the provision of 51 new primary schools have been approved by my right hon. Friend.

Primary School Pupils

19. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much was spent per pupil at primary schools in England in real terms in 1978 and in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what are the comparable figures for primary schools in Staffordshire.

Mr. Dunn: Local education authorities in England spent an average of £625 per primary pupil in 1978-79 and £730 in 1983-84. The comparable figures for Staffordshire are £630 and £760. All figures are at 1983-84 prices.

Schools (Midday Supervision)

21. Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement regarding his policy towards the responsibility of teachers for the supervision of midday school meals.

Mr. Chris Patten: My right hon. Friend believes that the supervision of pupils at midday lies outside teachers' standard duties. Teachers who choose to take part in the alternative arrangements now being introduced will do so on separate contracts.

Burnham Committee

22. Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when next he expects to meet the Burnham Committee.

Sir Keith Joseph: Like my predecessors, I do not meet the full Burnham committee. I frequently hold meetings with the organisations which make up the committee.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

23. Mr. Penhaligon asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he is satisfied with the prospects to date of the plans to introduce the general certificate of secondary education examination system.

41. Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether preparations for the introduction of the new general certificate of secondary education are still on schedule; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The preparations for the introduction of the GCSE are proceeding according to the timetable set by my right hon. Friend. The GCSE examining groups and the LEAs are well advanced in their preparations for the national programme of in-service training. In readiness for these training seminars, teachers' guides and videos have been made available to schools and colleges. Teachers are already in a position separately to begin their own preparations for the new examination courses.

62. Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangements have been made to assist teachers in the introduction of the new general certificate of secondary education examinations.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Secondary Examinations Council has completed its work on teachers' guides an videos which have been distributed to schools and colleges. These form the common materials for seminars for all teachers of the GCSE, under a special programme of in-service support, which starts this month and which is designed to introduce teachers to the special GCSE requirements for their subject. A further programme of training, devoted to specific syllabuses and provided by the GCSE examining groups will follow later this year. The Government are contributing substantially towards the cost of all this activity.

Head teachers (Expenditure Control)

24. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to give head teachers more control over decisions of expenditure relating to their schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: The forthcoming Education Bill will, as part of new arrangements for school government, include a proposal for schools to have a measure of responsibility for their own expenditure. Subject to appropriate rules, the governing body will have at its disposal a sum for capitation allocated by the LEA. It will need at least to involve the head teacher in spending this, and may delegate actual expenditure to him.

Teachers (Dispute)

25. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress has been made towards a resolution of the teachers' dispute.

34. Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' pay dispute.

38. Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the latest position on the teachers' dispute; and if he will make a statement.

39. Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' pay dispute.

43. Mr. Malins asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' dispute.

45. Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on the teachers' pay dispute.

46. Mr. Lewis Stevens asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on the teachers' dispute.

52. Mr. Andy Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' dispute.

55. Mr. Lilley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the latest position on the teachers' dispute; and if he will make a statement.

60. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about recent developments in the teachers' dispute.

63. Sir William van Straubenzee asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the current teachers' dispute.

66. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the latest situation in the teachers' pay dispute.

67. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the current teachers' pay dispute.

68. Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the current position in the teachers' pay dispute.

78. Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the current state of the teachers' dispute.

79. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a further statement on the teachers' dispute.

80. Mr. James Lamond asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on the latest situation in the teachers' pay dispute.

81. Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on the latest situation in the teachers' pay dispute.

83. Mr. Freud asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on the teachers' pay dispute.

84. Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' dispute.

85. Sir Reginald Eyre asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' dispute.

86. Sir Edward Gardner asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' pay dispute.

93. Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on the teachers' dispute.

94. Mr. Normanton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a further statement on the teachers' pay dispute.

95. Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a further statement on the teachers' pay dispute.

97. Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on the present situation in the teachers' pay dispute.

98. Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress is being made in the teachers' dispute.

99. Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the teachers' pay dispute.

Sir Keith Joseph: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway), the hon. Members for St. Helens, North (Mr. Evans) and for Easington (Mr. Dormand) and my hon. Friends the Members for Leicester, South (Mr. Spencer) and for Teignbridge (Mr. Nicholls).

29. Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has received about the effect of the teachers' dispute on examination candidates.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Department has received information from many sources including letters from parents, schools and local education authorities. The effect of the dispute so far is inevitably difficult to quantify and will have varied from school to school. I share the deep concern felt by pupils and their parents, and I deplore any action by teachers which might harm children's education and their performance in public examinations.

36. Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received in the last month from the teaching trade unions on the teachers' pay dispute.

44. Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received in the last month from the teaching trade unions on the teachers' pay dispute.

82. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received recently from the teaching trade unions on the teachers' pay dispute.

Sir Keith Joseph: I have received a letter dated 20 January from the general secretary of the National Association of Schoolmasters/Union of Women Teachers.

48. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what extra money is available to education authorities to finance that part of the teaching employers' offer which is attributable to restructuring.

Sir Keith Joseph: The provisional agreement reached at ACAS on 24 January incorporates an increase of 6·9 per cent. from 1 April last and of a further 1·6 per cent. from 31 March 1986. These increases are not conditional upon any reform of the pay structure but are tied to an end to disruption and a joint commitment to negotiate across pay, pay structure, duties and other conditions of service for 1986. The Government hold to the conditional offer which they made last August to release additional resources if sufficient progress is made towards the Government's objectives for an improved pay structure and a clarification of teachers' duties.

57. Mr. Litherland asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps Her Majesty's Government intend to take to help resolve the teachers' pay dispute.

64. Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will provide any additional sums of money to resolve the teachers' pay dispute.

65. Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps Her Majesty's Government intend to take to resolve the teachers' pay dispute.

75. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will provide additional sums of money to resolve the teachers' pay dispute.

77. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will now allocate more new money to the education authorities to help bring the teachers' dispute to an end; and if he will make a statement.

92. Ms. Clare Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps Her Majesty's Government intend to take to seek to resolve the teachers pay dispute.

Sir Keith Joseph: I refer the hon. Members to the answer which I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Wrexham (Dr. Marek).

70. Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will set up an independent inquiry into the teachers' pay dispute.

Sir Keith Joseph: No.

73. Mr. Conway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what indications he has received from the National Union of Teachers as to the terms under which they would be prepared to halt the current disruption of children's education.

Sir Keith Joseph: Such indications as I have come from the motion carried at a National Union of Teachers conference last month and the reports which I have read of statements by the union's general secretary. These indicate that the NUT will persist with certain forms of disruptive action if the management and teachers' panels conclude a formal 1985 pay settlement which is unacceptable to the NUT. It has long been clear that the NUT's terms for a settlement far outstrip the local authorities' ability to pay and it is most sad that the NUT should announce its willingness to continue to damage children's education in the event of it being outvoted by its fellow union members on the teachers' panel.

76. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what meetings he has had since Christmas with the teaching trade unions to discuss the teachers' pay dispute.

89. Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has had any meetings in the current year with the teaching trade unions to discuss the teachers' pay dispute.

90. Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has had any meetings in the current year with the teaching trade unions to discuss the teachers' pay dispute.

91. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what meetings he has had since Christmas with the teaching trade unions to discuss the teachers' pay dispute.

96. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has had any meetings in the current year with the teaching trade unions to discuss the teachers' pay dispute.

Sir Keith Joseph: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours).

87. Mr. Fisher asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last met the teaching trade unions to discuss the teachers' pay dispute.

Sir Keith Joseph: I met all the unions represented on the Burnham primary and secondary committee during the second half of 1985—some of them more than once.

Student Grants

26. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the current level of student grants.

100. Mr. Beaumont-Dark asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received about the level of student grants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett).

30. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last met the National Union of Students to discuss student financial support.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend last met NUS representatives to discuss student financial support on 3 December 1984. My predecessor, my hon. Friend the Member for the City of London Westminster, South (Mr. Brooke), last met NUS representatives on 12 November 1985.

31. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science on what basis the additional grant for students studying in London is calculated.

Mr. Walden: The London rate of grant reflects the higher costs associated with living in London.

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what calculation he intends to make, when determining the level of student grants, to take account of community charges; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: Decisions have not yet been taken on whether and how students should be compensated for any community charge payable by them.

Science Funding

27. Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the current and proposed level of funding for science; and how the money will be distributed.

Mr. Walden: The science budget, from which the research councils receive their grant-in-aid, will be £615 million in 1986-87 and is planned to be £629 million and £645 million in 1987-88 and 1988-89, respectively. My right hon. Friend is advised on the distribution on this budget by the Advisory Board for the Research Councils and the board's advice, which he has accepted, is available in the Library of the House. Scientific research is also supported through block grants to universities through the University Grants Committee, the distribution of which within universities is a matter for individual universities. The total amount spent on scientific research through the UGC is difficult to determine accurately, because it depends on an estimate of the distribution of universities' resources among different functions, but it is estimated that it amounts to approximately £600 million per annum.

Higher Education

28. Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to publish a White Paper on higher education.

Mr. Walden: The Government will be reviewing their policies in the light of responses to our Green Paper "The Development of Higher Education into the 1990s", and hope to be able to make a further statement of intentions in 1986.

40. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research has been carried out by his Department into the effect of changes in student income on the take up and retention of places in higher education.

Mr. Walden: The Department has carried out research at various times into the range of factors, including economic factors, which affect the demand for higher education. An account of the Department's research was included in "Technical Report to DES Report on Education Number 100", published in July 1984, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Medical Degrees (Cost)

32. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the full estimated cost, including maintenance, for undertaking a medical degree at a London teaching hospital.

Mr. Walden: At current prices the full estimated cost, including maintenance, of producing a medical graduate in Great Britain is estimated to be of the order of £130,000. This includes the cost of a service increment for teaching (estimated to be £74,000 per student) made available to teaching hospitals by the DHSS. It is not possible to provide a specific figure for London teaching hospitals.

School Buildings (Maintenance)

33. Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the estimated cost of conducting essential repairs on existing school buildings.

Mr. Dunn: This information is not held by the Department.

Science Budget

35. Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has received on the size of the science budget.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend has received 74 representations during the last two months.

Student Incomes

37. Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information is available to his Department in respect of the expected change in the average income of full-time students between 1978 and the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Walden: The Department does not collect information on student incomes. For those full-time students in receipt of full value awards, the average maintenance award rose from £1,007 in the academic year 1977-78 to £1,748 in 1983-84 including assessed contributions from parents and spouses, and from £727 to £1,311 over the same period excluding such contributions.

Research and Development

42. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make it his policy to increase Government resources devoted to civilian research and development.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend announced details of the Government's expenditure plans for education and science in the House on 12 November 1985. These plans included additional funds for science compared to previous plans. They will be further reviewed in the annual cycle of public expenditure surveys in the usual way.

School Places (Appeals)

47. Mr. Fallon asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many parents appealed against their local authority's allocation of school places in 1985; and how many were successful.

Mr. Dunn: From inquiries made of local education authorities by the Department, it would appear that there were about 9,000 parental appeals against school admission decisions in 1985, of which some 4,000 were decided in parents' favour.

Corporal Punishment

49. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will announce Government policy on corporal punishment in schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: In the Government's view, schools should be free to decide for themselves on the availability and use of corporal punishment. However, a ruling of the European Court of Human Rights requires us to secure respect for the philosophical convictions of parents who do not wish their children to be subject to this sanction and, following our decision last Session not to proceed with the Education (Corporal Punishment) Bill, we are considering the appropriate course of action to take.

School Governing Bodies

50. Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to seek to modify the role and powers of boards of governors of state schools; and if he will make a statement.

51. Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to extend parental advice and accountability in education.

Mr. Dunn: As announced in the Gracious Speech, a Bill will be introduced this Session to reform the composition of school governing bodies and to clarify their functions. The Government's policies in these matters are set out in chapter 9 of the White Paper "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469). In particular, the proposals provide for parents to be more involved in the running of their children's schools: the parental voice will be strengthened on the governing body; and that body will be required to account annually to all parents with a report and meeting.

Remuneration of Teachers Act

53. Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will commission a review of the working of the Remuneration of Teachers Act with a view to introducing legislation to amend or replace the Act with a better method of establishing teachers' pay and conditions of service.

Sir Keith Joseph: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Saffron Walden (Mr. Haselhurst).

CERN

54. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to announce a decision on the future level of British participation in CERN.

Mr. Walden: When Sir John Kendrew, at the request of the Advisory Board for the Research Councils and the Science and Engineering Research Council, undertook his review my right hon. Friend assured the Ministers responsible for CERN in the other member states that if we were to embark on any change in our relationship with CERN that would be done by due process and in consultation with them. In December I visited CERN, and subsequently consulted widely with other member states, on a United Kingdom proposal for a radical joint independent review of CERN and its future development. No member state has opposed a review in principle. Consultations continue; and the president, Professor W. Kummer, will convene an extraordinary session of the CERN council on 20 February to discuss the United Kingdom proposal. If the review goes ahead, my right hon. Friend's decision on the future level of British participation will be taken in the light of its report.

Teacher Training

56. Mr. Rowe asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress has been made towards his stated intention of improving initial teacher training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education which my right hon. Friends set up in 1984 is carrying out a detailed review of all courses of initial teacher training in England and Wales against the criteria set out in the DES circular 3/84 (Welsh Office 21/84). Teacher training institutions are making considerable efforts to develop and adapt their courses in order to meet those criteria. At my right hon. Friend's request, the national advisory body conducted a detailed review of the distribution of teacher training intakes in the public sector of higher education following which my right hon. Friend has allocated intakes for 1986; similar action has been taken in Wales. The DES is now considering the allocation of public sector intakes in England for 1987-89 with a view to securing as high quality and cost-effective a system of initial teacher training as possible. In Wales, the Wales advisory body is undertaking a review of provision in the public sector before offering advice on the allocation of intakes for the period 1987-89. Initial teacher training in the universities for 1986 has been announced and university intakes for 1987-89 are now being considered by the University Grants Committee.

58. Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the current level of provision for the training of teachers working in special schools.

Mr. Chris Patten: Information is not yet available about the number of those undergoing in-service training in the current academic year. In the academic year 1984-85, 1,326 students took one year full-time (or part-time equivalent) courses concerned with special educational needs. Of these, 1,135 were teachers employed in maintained schools and in establishments of further education. One hundred and sixteen students were admitted to courses of initial teacher training for special educational needs in Autumn 1985 and target intakes to such courses in 1986 have been set at 123. In addition, a number of initial training courses for primary teachers contain substantial special education components.

Dyslexic Children

59. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy towards the provision of resources for the education of dyslexic children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Under section 8 of the Education Act 1944, as amended by the Education Act 1981, local education authorities have a duty to secure the availability for their area of sufficient schools for all pupils, and to have regard to the need for securing that special educational provision is made for pupils who have special educational needs.

Inner London Education Authority

61. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what new building projects for the Inner London education authority area have been approved by his Department.

Mr. Dunn: It is for local education authorities to decide on the use of their prescribed capital expenditure allocations in the light of their individual circumstances. My right hon. Friend has made a prescribed capital expenditure allocation of £14·261 million for expenditure by the Inner London education authority on education projects in 1986-87. In making that allocation, he took account of £7·243 million of new capital works in the authority.

Association of University Teachers

69. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last met representatives of the Association of University Teachers to discuss the state of higher education.

88. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last met representatives of the Association of University Teachers to discuss Government spending on the universities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend last met representatives of the Association of University Teachers on 18 April 1985 when he discussed with them the funding of research, the Jarratt report on efficiency studies in universities, the forthcoming Green Paper on higher education, national insurance contributions and the pay of universities' academic staff. I subsequently met AUT representatives on 27 November 1985 and discussed university funding and academic pay.

Research Projects

71. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the current level of research council's funding of alpha-rated research projects in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Walden: Details of funded and unfunded alpha grants in 1980-81 to 1984-85 were given in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Strathkelvin and Bearsden (Mr. Hirst) on 20 January at columns 79-80. My right hon. Friend announced increases to the science budget in 1985-86 and 1986-87 in the relevant public expenditure statements, and indicated that he hoped that a proportion of the additional funds would enable the councils to fund further high quality proposals from the universities.

School Governing Bodies

72. Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will introduce legislation to provide for the representation of commerce and industry on school governing bodies.

Mr. Dunn: The Government accept that representatives of industry and commerce can make a valuable contribution to the work of school governing bodies. The forthcoming legislation on school government will not, however, make explicit provision for such representation. This may often be provided indirectly through the ordinary election and appointment of governors. Additionally, governing bodies will be urged to use their proposed new duty to co-opt additional governors to secure such wider representation as they consider appropriate.

Expenditure

74. Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the current level of education spending per pupil in England, and as to how this compares with the per pupil spending of the Inner London education authority.

Mr. Chris Patten: The net institutional expenditure per pupil in maintained primary and secondary schools in England in 1983-84, the latest year for which actual figures are available, was £875; the corresponding figure for the Inner London education authority was, at £1,475, 69 per cent. higher.

Criminal Records

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he has taken to ensure that his list 99 provides an adequate listing of the criminal records of persons employed by his Department and other agencies for which he is responsible who by virtue of their work have substantial access to children.

Mr. Chris Patten: List 99 does not list criminal records but only basic details of persons barred by the Secretary of State for Education and Science from teaching and other work involving regular contact with children or young people. The continuation of the list in its present form was recommended in the first report of the joint review of the disclosure of criminal convictions of those with access to children, a copy of which is in the Library. The report describes how list 99 is maintained, including police reporting of relevant convictions of persons in the education sector.

Examinations Performance (Research)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals are presently being considered by his Department for research comparing examination performances in different secondary schools.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has received a number of proposals for research work in this area: these are under consideration.

Pupil Unit Costs

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing for each local authority area in England, and for England as a whole, the pupil unit costs at (a) maintained primary and (b) maintained secondary schools, respectively, for 1983-84.

Mr. Dunn: The information is given in the following table:

Schools (Privatisation)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to encourage local education authorities to privatise schools.

Mr. Dunn: No.

Politically Sensitive Subjects (Teaching)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to consult his education partners regarding the form and content of the teaching of politically sensitive subjects.

Sir Keith Joseph: I, together with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, have decided, in view of the concern which has been expressed, to invite the education service to endorse a statement of the principles which should inform teaching in relation to politically controversial matters in schools and colleges. I am issuing today, for consultation, the draft of such a statement together with a draft circular.

The texts of these and of my covering letter are as follows:

Draft statement of principles

THE TREATMENT OF POLITICALLY CONTROVERSIAL ISSUES IN SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

1. One of the principal functions of education is to prepare pupils and students for the active discharge of the responsibilities of citizenship. It has long been recognised that this means, among other things, that issues of a politically controversial character will inevitably figure in some parts of the curriculum and can arise spontaneously in many. In treating such issues the education service in this country applies the principles appropriate to a free and open society.

2. Their application has a positive aspect. It is part of the task of schools and colleges to promote the attitudes, knowledge and skills which are necessary for the preservation of our society's fundamental values, notably its commitment to parliamentary democracy, the freedom of the individual within the law, and the equality of all citizens under the law. Among the attitudes to be promoted are a rational approach to evidence and argument, both in forming opinions and in resolving differences; awareness of the duties and rights of citizenship; respect for the law; and respect for the rights of others, including the right to hold their own opinions and to express them within the law. Pupils and students need to be equipped with the intellectual skills which are necessary if our society's fundamental values are to be understood, critically appraised, developed and defended.

3. It follows that, within the limits set out above, schools and colleges should be ready, in the interests of good education, to tackle issues which are politically controversial. In doing this teaching staff should at all times seek to distinguish between fact and opinion, be ready to acknowledge personal bias, make clear that on matters of opinion views other than their own may be legitimately held, and encourage pupils and students to form their own conclusions on the basis of evidence and reflection and of discussion with others. How this is best done for pupils and students of varying maturity and understanding is a matter of professional judgment and calls for the exercise of professional responsibility.

DRAFT CIRCULAR

The education service in this country has a long and honourable tradition of upholding the principles of a free and open society. The Secretary of State is concerned that this tradition should be upheld in al circumstances and at all times. Consultation has shown that his concern is widely shared.

The statement attached to this Circular has been the subject of consultation with the bodies concerned within the education service; it sets out the principles in accordance with which the Secretary of State intends to continue to exercise his statutory functions. He asks local education authorities and the governing bodies of schools and further education establishments to have regard likewise to the statement when they discharge their own responsibilities and in any guidance which they give to the teaching staff.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION AND SCIENCE
ELIZABETH HOUSE, YORK ROAD, LONDON SE1 7PH
TELEPHONE 01-934 900
FROM THE SECRETARY OF STATE

THE TREATMENT OF POLITICALLY CONTROVERSIAL ISSUES IN SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

The Government shares the widely held view that preparation for the responsibilities of citizenship is one of education's principal functions; and that pupils and students under the age of majority therefore need to be introduced, as indeed they are, to those issues of a political character which they will come across in the course of their adult lives.

I am, however, aware of disquiet that certain politically controversial issues may sometimes be tackled in schools and colleges in a manner which amounts to the teaching, openly or covertly, of a particular partisan political view. The education service has a long and honourable tradition of upholding the principles of a free and open society. I am sure that all the partners in the service agree that this tradition must be upheld.

In my view the public have a right to be reassured on this score. I therefore propose to issue a circular containing a statement of principles on the lines of the attached drafts. The statement sets out afresh the principles which the partners in the education service have long adopted in discharging their functions. I believe therefore that your association would wish to endorse such a statement and to commend it to your members.

I should be glad to know whether you and the organisation you represent have comments on a circular on these lines and whether you are willing to commend the statement in it to your members. As in the case of all circulars issued in draft on my behalf, I would be willing to consider any suggestions you have for amending the text of the draft circular and the draft statement. Nicholas Edwards is consulting education partners in Wales in the same terms.

Keith Joseph.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Falklands Fishery

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the United Kingdom fishing industry about the implications for it of the future development of the Falklands fishery.

Mr. Gummer: Fisheries at the Falklands are principally a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs. I have, however, received representations from a small number of companies in the United Kingdom fishing industry on the desirability of securing greater regulation of the level of fishing in the waters around the Falkland Islands with a view to protecting the barter deals involving squid caught by east European vessels and delivered to Japan, to which I referred in my answer to the hon. Member for Kingston Upon Hull, West (Mr. Randall) on 10 December 1985, at column 587, as well as to improving the potential viability of a limited United Kingdom participation in the fisheries.

The Government are actively seeking international regulation of the south-west Atlantic fishery and a study to this end is under way in the Food and Agriculture Organisation, as my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs explained in a written answer to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 20 January, at column 34.

Surplus Food and Drink

Mr. Canavan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the most up-to-date amount and value of surplus food and drink stored (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in the entire European Economic Community; and what is the cost of storage.

Mr. Gummer: A note setting out the volume of United Kingdom and Community intervention stocks, including those of foodstuffs, on the latest available dates is deposited in the Library of the House and is updated monthly.

The estimated value of United Kingdom intervention stocks of foodstuffs (excluding feedwheat and barley) at 31 December 1985 calculated on the basis of the buying-in prices valid at that date was £678 million.

The estimated value of Community intervention stocks at the end of November 1985, converted from agricultural ecu into sterling at the United Kingdom's agricultural conversion rate, was £5,755 million.

The latest estimate of storage and related costs in respect of United Kingdom intervention stocks (including feed grains) is £102 million as given in the 1985-86 Winter Supplementary Estimate for class III, vote 1. We have no figures for storage costs incurred by other member states.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by his Department with grant-aid in the last financial year for which figures are available and the size of the grant so given.

Mr. Jopling: Details of grants paid to voluntary bodies and organisations by my Department in 1984-85 are as follows:

National Federation of Young Farmers Clubs	16,000
National Proficiency Tests Council	85,600
Farming and Wildlife Advisory Group	1,500

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant-aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available.

Mr. Jopling: Information is not maintained centrally as to whether any of my Department's numerous sponsored bodies provide secondary support of this kind, and it could not be obtained without disproportionate cost.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant-aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

Mr. Jopling: All payments to sponsored and voluntary bodies are voted by Parliament through annual Estimates for purposes which further my Department's objectives. In addition to the close operational contacts maintained by my officials, formal controls are exercised over each body to ensure that such payments are used only for approved purposes. Where appropriate, such controls include cyclical reviews on lines prescribed centrally by Cabinet Office and Treasury.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Robert Banks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his latest estimate of the current acreage of (a) grade I, (b) grade II and (c) grade III agricultural land.

Mrs. Fenner: I regret that precise figures are not available. Information derived in early 1983 from the provisional 1:63360 scale agricultural land classification maps shows that in England about 3 per cent. of agricultural land was in grade 1, 17 per cent. in grade 2 and 54 per cent. in grade 3.

DEFENCE

Fylingdales

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence who owns the present radars at Fylingdales, who provided the funds for them; and who will (a) own and (b) provide the funds for the proposed new radars at Fylingdales.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The United States Government funded and own the radar equipment which is at present in use at RAF Fylingdales. As regards the proposed update of the facilities at Fylingdales, I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 30 October last, at column 504.

FH70 Ammunition

Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the 1985 FH70 ammunition order to Rhine Metall GmbH has been manufactured by that company and delivered to him to date.

Mr. Norman Lamont: A pre-production lot of L15 shells has been produced and is awaiting completion of assessment before production starts. Deliveries to the United Kingdom should commence shortly.

RIMPAC Naval Exercise

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what United Kingdom naval vessels will be participating in the RIMPAC naval exercise; what is the scope, nature and purpose of the exercise; what other countries will be participating; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: The United Kingdom surface ships taking part in Exercise RIMPAC are planned to be Her Majesty's Ships Illustrious, Beaver, Manchester and Amazon, and the RFAs Olmeda, Bayleaf an Fort Grange. This exercise is sponsored by the United States Navy and the release of public information about it is a matter for the USN.

RN Stores Depot, Llangennech

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when it is now envisaged that the test workshops and facilities will be moved from the Royal Navy stores depot, Llangennech;

(2) what is the estimated cost of moving the naval weapons engineer test facilities from the Royal Navy stores depot at Llangennech and re-establishing them at other locations.

Mr. Lee: My noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Support will write to the right hon. Gentleman.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

South Africa

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why the six months period agreed at the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting to review the situation in South Africa has been put back to 30 June.

Mrs. Chalker: The Commonwealth accord clearly placed the proposed review of the situation in South Africa in the context of the work of the group of eminent persons. The members of the group met for the first time on 12 December and agreed with the Commonwealth Secretary-General that the review of their work should take place six months from the beginning of January 1986.

United Nations

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what complaints have been made about wasteful expenditure at the United Nations by the United Kingdom permanent representative; and if he will consider the withdrawal of the United Kingdom delegation from the United Nations General Assembly.

Mr. Eggar: The permanent representative of the United Kingdom plays an active role in efforts to secure improvements in the efficiency of the United Nations and draws frequent attention to areas where wasteful expenditure could be avoided. He did so during the discussions of the organisation's budget for 1986-87. He continues to take appropriate opportunities to do so, for example, by commenting on United Nations plans to hold three separate conferences on Southern Africa costing more than £2 million which would duplicate proceedings at the United Nations itself. We have no intention of withdrawing the United Kingdom delegation from the United Nations General Assembly: not least since to do so would deprive us of influence over the United Nations' financial affairs.

Mr. Simon Garoeb

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Mr. Simon Garoeb, of Honey hill road, Bedford, a student at the national college of agricultural engineering, Silsoe, is in receipt of funds from the British Council.

Mr. Eggar: No.

United Nations Commission on Human Settlements

Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if it is his intention to rejoin the United Nations commission on human settlements.

Mr. Eggar: No decision has yet been taken on this matter.

THE ARTS

Welsh National Opera

Mr. Wigley asked the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received about the production of operas by the Welsh National Opera at Llandudno; and what account he has taken of these in setting the funding of the Welsh Arts Council.

Mr. Luce: I have received no such representations. The needs of Welsh National Opera were considered along with all other claims for funds when the grant-in-aid for the Arts Council was calculated. The allocation to the Welsh Arts Council is a matter for the Arts Council.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Pattern Examination (Fees)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the percentage increase in fees charged for pattern examination under the Weights and Measures Act in each of the years 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984, respectively.

Mr. Howard: Since 1982 fees have been based on hourly charges, and these are shown in the table. Prior to 1982 fees were fixed according to pattern type and are not therefore directly comparable.

Date	Hourly charge	Increase on earlier rate
	£	per cent.
1.1.82	22	—
1.1.83	30.25	37·5
1.1.84	32	5·8

Balance of Trade

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the balance of trade in manufactures for 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: In 1985 trade in manufactures on a balance of payments basis is provisionally estimated to have been in deficit by £3·1 billion: an improvement of £0·7 billion compared with 1984.

Compact Discs

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he plans to support the record industry in increasing the capacity within the United Kingdom to manufacture compact discs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: My Department stands ready to support the expansion plans of this industry, like other industrial sectors, through the range of measures available.

Companies (Accounts)

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many prosecutions were undertaken in 1985 of companies which had failed to file company accounts.

Mr. Howard: There is no statutory offence by a company itself for failure to file accounts. It is the directors who are responsible, and therefore subject to prosecution for failure. Four thousand four hundred and nine directors of companies incorporated in England and Wales were prosecuted for this offence in 1985.

Foundry Industries

Mr. Lewis Stevens asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what information he has as to subsidies to the foundry industries of Spain, other European Economic Community countries and Brazil; and what effect he assesses such subsidies to have on the United Kingdom foundry industry both at home and abroad;

(2) what assessment he has made of the compatibility of the direct and indirect subsidies to the foundry industries in Spain and other countries with existing trade agreements;

(3) what action Her Majesty's Government take to seek to ensure that United Kingdom foundries do not face unfair competition from overseas; and if any further action is proposed.

Mr. Alan Clark: My Department is at present reviewing complaints by the United Kingdom foundry industries, which allege unfair competition from subsidised imports. In the light of the evidence presented, my Department will consider taking up the complaints with the Commission of the European Communities, which is responsible for taking action in respect of such imports whether they come from other member states of the Community or from third countries.

Castings (Imports)

Mr. Lewis Stevens asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the value and volumes of casting imports to the United Kingdom from Spain, West Germany and Brazil for the years 1978 to 1984, inclusive.

Mr. Alan Clark: Only castings of iron and steel can be identified in the UK Overseas Trade Statistics. The information is as follows:

Gas Appliances

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to introduce safety legislation for gas appliances sold in the United Kingdom; if he plans to introduce separate legislation to cover the sale of gas cookers; how many accidents have occurred in each of the last three years involving uncertified imported gas cookers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986, c. 10]: I am considering whether regulations are necessary for gas appliances. I am dealing with cookers first, because this is the area in which most consumer complaints have arisen. I announced on 13 December that new regulations were to be introduced soon to ensure that traders selling both new and secondhand gas cookers must be sure that they meet proper safety standards.

Figures on accidents involving uncertified imported gas cookers are not available.

The cost of collecting such information would be prohibitive. I do, however, have figures for accidents involving all gas cookers in 1983 and 1984, collected by the accident surveillance system, and I shall send these to the hon. Member.

Cotton Velvet

Mr. Peter Pike asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) at what level of imports agreement has been reached for the import of cotton velvet (category 32) from Turkey in the recent voluntary restraint agreement;

(2) on which date a voluntary restraint agreement regarding imports of cotton velvet (category 32) from Turkey was reached.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, February 1986, c. 9]: Turkey agreed on 13 December 1985 to restrain for a two-year period from 1 January 1986 the export to the markets of the Community of a number of textile products including restraint on cotton velvet products in the United Kingdom. The agreement is an informal one, the details of which are not published.

ENERGY

Nuclear Fuel

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much nuclear fuel, in tonnes per year, has been processed annually in each of the last 20 years at Dounreay.

Mr. Goodlad: I am advised by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority that the amount of nuclear fuel in tonnes processed in the Dounreay reprocessing facilities in each of the last 20 years is:

Year	Tonnes
1967	0·446

TRANSPORT

Aircraft Air Misses (RAF Upper Heyford)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many near misses have been reported to the Civil Aviation Authority between (a) civil powered aircraft, (b) gliders, (c) British military aircraft and (d) United States Air Force or United States Navy aircraft within the proposed special rules zone around Royal Air Force Upper Heyford within (i) the last 12 months and (ii) the last five years.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The statistics for air misses in the Upper Heyford area are:

	Existing radar advisory service zone	Proposed mandatory radio area (included in Column 1)
Last 12 months
USAF v Gliders	2	2
Last 5 years (including the above)
USAF v Gliders	6	5
USAF v Civil powered	5	4
RAF v Civil powered	2	—
Civil powered v Civil powered	1	—
Civil powered v Glider	1	—

Note: All figures relate to category A, B and C air misses.

Marylebone Station

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Transport why he does not intend to issue observations on the petition presented on 25 January 1985 by the hon. Member for Brent, South relating to Marylebone station.

Mr. David Mitchell: Because, as the hon. Member knows, the period for submitting objections to the London Regional Passengers' Committee had already been extended; and in any closure proposal where there are objections, my right hon. Friend is under a statutory duty to consider all relevant factors before reaching a decision. Meanwhile, it would of course be wrong for him to take any view of the merits of the case.

DVLC (Records)

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, upon disqualification, a driver's record of conviction is expunged at the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No, but when a licence is issued after a period of disqualification, endorsements which led to disqualification under the penalty points scheme are not shown on the licence or retained in the computer record. Details of disqualification itself and certain other endorsements for more serious offences remain (for four or 11 years).

Heilink (Heathrow-Gatwick)

Mr. Wolfson asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has received the decision of the Civil Aviation Authority on the application by British Caledonian to continue the helilink between Heathrow and Gatwick airports; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Civil Aviation Authority has today announced its decision to grant British Caledonian's application. The authority has referred the matter to my right hon. Friend under section 17(1)(d) of the Civil Aviation Act 1982, which requires it to give notice to him of any matter of special interest to him by reason of the fact that it involves noise, vibration, pollution and other disturbance.

My right hon. Friend will now consider the authority's decision and the reasons for it, together with all the evidence submitted to the hearing and the transcript of proceedings. If any interested parties wish to make further representations in the light of the authority's decision, he would be prepared to consider these, provided they are submitted to him by 28 February.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

International Fund for Agricultural Development

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who represented Her Majesty's Government at the international fund for agricultural development's governing body meeting in Rome last week; what policy objectives were pursued; and if he will make a statement on the outcome.

Mr. Raison: The United Kingdom was represented by its alternate governor, Mr. K. G. W. Frost, who is head of international financial institutions department in the Overseas Development administration.

The delegation was instructed to work for the completion of IFAD's second replenishment negotiations; to approve the arrangements bringing into effect the new special programme for African countries suffering from drought and desertification; and to approve IFAD's programme of work and budget for 1986.

All these aims were achieved. We welcome in particular the conclusion of the replenishment, which provides some measure of certainty for the future of the fund although at a relatively modest level.

The provisional total of category I (US$274 million) and category II (US$186 million) contributions to the second replenishment in US$460 million. This figure could be increased slightly during the coming two weeks if the category II countries were able to provide more money. In this case category I's contribution would rise in the same proportion. As in the first replenishment, the British share of the category I total is 4·79 per cent. The cost to the aid programme, if the category's total does not rise, is likely to be £9·23 million, spread over several years.

International Development Association

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the eighth replenishment of the International Development Association.

Mr. Raison: We want to see a substantial replenishment, and we hope that the International Development Association will thereby be able to continue its important support for longer-term investment and economic reform in the poorest countries.

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of the meeting of the International Development Association in Paris on January 27 and 28; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: Discussion at the meeting covered the possible size of the eighth replenishment, the allocation of resources to different purposes and groups of recipients, and the terms to be applied to credits. Discussions will resume in Washington in April.

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who represented the United Kingdom at the International Development Association deputies' meeting in Paris on 27 and 28 January.

Mr. Raison: The United Kingdom was represented by Mr. J. L. F. Buist, the under secretary in the Overseas Development Association responsible for multilateral aid.

Afghan War (Refugees)

Mr. Merchant asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what humanitarian aid is being given to refugees from the Afghan war.

Mr. Raison: In 1985 we contributed some £5·3 million to assist refugees from the Afghan war in response to special appeals from international and British voluntary agencies. In addition, the European Community agreed to provide food aid worth about £7 million from the 1985 programme for delivery in 1986; Britain's share of the Community action was some £1·4 million.

The level of assistance to be provided in 1986 is still under consideration although we have already contributed £4,000 through the Save the Children Fund.

Nicaragua (Loan)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what voting instructions he has given the United Kingdom representative at the Inter American Development Bank for the meeting on 5 March to discuss a loan to Nicaragua; what discussions he has held with the United States Administration concerning the loan; if he will place in the Library a copy of the report prepared by the Inter American Development Bank for the meeting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Raison: In due course instructions will be sent to the executive director of the constituency containing the United Kingdom. As I said in answer to the right hon. Member for Clydesdale (Dame J. Hart) on 20 January 1986, at col. 20, it is not our policy to disclose such instructions.

I have had no discussions with the US Administration about the Nicaraguan loan application.

The document already circulated to the board is among those classed by the bank as not for public use. I cannot therefore place a copy in the Library.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Telephone Faults

Mr. Harrison asked the Lord Privy Seal how many telephone complaints have been registered in the Palace of Westminster; and how many faults have been reported in each year since 1969.

Mr. Biffen [pursuant to his reply, 31 January 1986, c. 631]: Details with regard to complaints and faults for every year since 1969 could be produced only at disproportionate cost. During the financial year 1984-85 (April 1984-March 1985) 23 telephone complaints were received. During the same period the number of faults reported on the Palace of Westminster telephone exchange were as follows:

	Number
Faults on telephones and associated items	2,194
Faults reported but no faults found	648
Faults reported and found to be user error	111
Total	2,953

EMPLOYMENT

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Richard Holt asked the Paymaster General what training, experience, commercial or industrial knowledge is required before a panellist is appointed to an industrial tribunal.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Lay members of industrial tribunals are chosen for their knowledge and practical experience of industrial relations. Industrial tribunal chairmen in England and Wales are appointed by my noble Friend the Lord Chancellor and in Scotland by the Lord President of the Court of Session. They must be barristers, advocates or solicitors of at least seven years' standing.

Training Costs

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General what is the net Exchequer cost per person covered by training in industry and YTS.

Mr. Trippier: The net Exchequer cost of YTS per filled place in 1985-86 is likely to be in the range £1,400 to £1,600 per annum. The size of this range indicates the considerable uncertainty that attaches to estimates of net Exchequer costs, because of the number of assumptions that are involved.

Training in industry comprises a collection of separate small schemes. Due to the different functions of these schemes, and their small scale, no estimate of aggregate net Exchequer cost is available.

Pay (Statistics)

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Paymaster General (1) what information he has as to the percentage of the adult employed labour force earning below (i) £72·53, (ii) £77 and (iii) £102·40 per week;

(2) what information he has as to the percentage of the adult male employed labour force earning below (i) £72·53, (ii) £77 and (iii) £102·40 per week.

Mr. Lang: Information is not available relating to the precise values requested. However, details of the percentage of full-time adult employees and of full-time adult male employees with gross weekly earnings below stated amounts at regular £5 and £10 intervals, including £70, £75, £80, £110, are published in respect of April 1985 in table 38 of "New Earnings Survey 1985", part B, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Paymaster General what level of average gross weekly earnings is exceeded by 90 per cent. of (a) employed adults and (b) employed adult males.

Mr. Lang: Information on the level of gross weekly earnings exceeded by 90 per cent. of full-time adult employees and of full-time adult male employees in April 1985 is published in table 1 of the report, "New Earnings Survey 1985," part A, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Low Pay

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Paymaster General if he will now introduce a formal definition of low pay.

Mr. Lang: No. I do not believe that any single definition of low pay would be generally supported. Nor do I believe that the introduction of a definition by the Government would serve any useful purpose.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General if he will publish a table showing the rate of unemployment among the following standard groups of people as recorded in the latest available general household survey together with any other available information on the rate of unemployment by social or employment class: professional, employers and managers, intermediate non-manual, skilled manual, own account non-professional, semi-skilled manual, personal service and unskilled manual.

Mr. Lang: Information from the general household survey on unemployment by socio-economic group has been published in tables 7.28 and 7.29 "General Household Survey 1983" which is available in the Library. The following table gives figures for the groups requested from the 1984 labour force survey.

Unemployment by previous occupation
Great Britain: Spring 1984

Occupation	Number Unemployed (Thousands)*	Unemployed as a percentage of total economically active in occupational group
Professional	26	2
Employers and managers	126	4
Intermediate and junior non-manual	433	6
Skilled manual	435	9
Own account non-professional	93	6
Semi-skilled manual	356	12
Personal service	138	9
Unskilled manual	206	13
Inadequately described/armed forces	28	12

The figures exclude 1,064,000 unemployed people who either had never had a job, or who had left their last job more than three years ago and were not asked about their previous occupation.

* People without a paid job and seeking work during the reference week of the survey.

Trade Unions (Membership)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Paymaster General what information he has concerning the total membership of recognised trade unions in the different regions of the United Kingdom in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The latest available information on the membership of trade unions is published in the January issue of Employment Gazette. Trade unions are asked to provide only national figures and regional analyses of the data are not therefore possible.

Strikes

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Paymaster General what information he has concerning the total number of working days lost to strike action in each region of the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The available information requested is as follows. A regional breakdown of the figure for 1985 is not yet available.

Working days lost through stoppages of work due to industrial disputes: 1975-1984

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Paymaster General what information he has concerning the total cost in lost production due to strike action in each region of the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We do not have the information requested.

Careers Services

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Paymaster General whether reports on the careers services provided by individual local education authorities in England, produced by his Department's careers service inspectorate, can be made available to hon. Members.

Mr. Trippier: A copy of each inspection report is sent to the chairman of the education committee of the local authority concerned and discussed with me six months later. A copy of each report produced since October 1985 is now available in the Library.

Cash Limits

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Paymaster General whether any change will be made to the cash limits for the Department of Employment group.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the cash limit for Class IV, Vote 15, (Manpower Services Commission) will be increased by £19 million from £1,344908,000 to £1,363,908,000 to cover extra requirements for YTS and for new pilot schemes for the long-term unemployed; and the cash limit for Class IV, Vote 16 (Department of Employment administration) will be increased by £2,052,000 from £248,960,000 to £251,012,000 to cover extra costs of £6 million for administration of the unemployment benefit service, partly offset by extra receipts totalling £3,948,000 from the national insurance fund (although this offset will not reduce public expenditure). These cash limit increases are more than fully offset by a reduction of £28 million in the cash limit for Class IV, Vote 12, (Labour market services) from £865,950,000 to £837,950,000 reflecting expected savings on the community programme, so no net increase in public expenditure is involved.

ENVIRONMENT

Town and Parish Councils

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount raised by precepting parish or town councils in 1985-86.

Mrs. Rumbold: From information provided by local authorities it is estimated that total revenue raised by parish precepts amounted to £49 million in 1985-86.

Office Blocks (Cleveland)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to how many projects involving the building of new office blocks are currently in progress in Cleveland.

Sir George Young: I am advised that there are no significant projects currently in progress involving office development.

Local Authorities (Lost Revenue)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much revenue was lost by local authorities in 1984-85 by defaulting ratepayers.

Mrs. Rumbold: Information on revenue lost by local authorities by defaulting ratepayers in 1984-85 is not available centrally. Total gross arrears at 31 March 1985, including arrears in respect of previous years for local authorities in England, is published by CIPFA as £361 million in "Rate collection Statistics 1984-85".

Agricultural Land (Rating)

Mr. Robert Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he gave to the feasibility of levying rates on agricultural land before the publication of "Paying for Local Government", Cmnd. 9714; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Agricultural land and buildings have been fully derated since 1929 and we do not propose to change that position.

GLC (Grant)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has received an application from the Greater London council for his approval of a grant to the Thamesmead Multi-cultural Funfield Association's sports centre.

Mr. Tracey: No.

Acid Rain

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to examine the effects of acid rain in urban areas.

Mrs. Rumbold: Research is in progress by the Building Research Establishment and by external contractors on the effects of acid deposition on buildings and building materials. The Building Effects Review Group, which my Department set up to provide an up-to-date review of the subject, is expected to present an initial report by the end of the year.

Community Charges

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what appeal rights citizens will have in respect of the proposed community charges; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if those who live in more than one household during the course of any year will be required to register in each place for community charge; if guidance will be issued to those householders required to register homes; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if those required to register for community charge purposes will have to meet some residence qualifications similar to requirements for those seeking to register for electoral purposes;

(4) if those registered for community charge purposes move from the household where they are registered in the course of any year, what facility there will be for names to be removed from one register and added to another register;

(5) when a person reaches the age of 18 years and is required to register for community charge purposes, what action such a person will be required to take;

(6) if students, required to register in connection with his proposals to establish a community charge, will have a choice of registering at home or in the locality of their place of study; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Our proposals on how the community charge would operate are outlined in annex G of the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" (Cmnd. 9714). Final decisions will be taken in the light of consultation.

Urban Programme

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how the urban programme for 1986-87, which he announced in the Official Report, column 417, on 27 January, compares with expected expenditure for 1985-86; and if he will express the comparisons on the same cost basis.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986, c. 24]: Outturn figures for 1985-86 are not yet available. The table sets out initial allocations for 1985-86 and initial allocations for 1986-87. The former are increased by the GDP deflator of 4½ per cent. to give a comparable cost basis. In the course of 1985-86 initial allocations have been supplemented by £8·25 million which became available for redistribution within the urban block.

Outturn figures often differ from allocations. Local authorities receive additional allocations to support approved urban development grant schemes.

£ million	1985-86 (1986-87 prices) initial allocations	1986-87 initial allocations
Birmingham	25·6	24·5
Hackney	12·5	11·6

SOCIAL SERVICES

Rent and Rates

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state the average rent and average rates paid irrespective of income; and if he will also state the average rent and rates paid (a) by persons with an income of less than £100 per week and (b) by persons with an income of less than £150 per week.

Mr. Major: The figures given in the table are estimates derived from the 1983 family expenditure survey. As they are derived from a sample survey, they are subject to a margin of error.

Great Britain

Gross household income	Average rent £	*Average rates £
All income levels	14·00	5·30
Income less than £100	13·20	4·40
Income less than £150	13·50	4·55

* Includes owner-occupiers.

Low Income Families

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table showing families and persons, as in table 6 of "Low Income Families 1981", but including Northern Ireland in the figures and updating them to 1983.

Mr. Major: I regret that this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Postgraduate Hospitals

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give figures for the London postgraduate hospitals that had their own boards of governors before reorganisation showing the total revenue and capital that each received, after allowing for loans made to the district health authority and for efficiency savings, in the three years following reorganisation; and if he will express the average annual figure for the three-year period as a percentage of the revenue and capital received by the hospitals in the last year prior to reorganisation.

Mr. Hayhoe: The 1982 reorganisation of the National Health Service resulted in a major restructuring of the boards of governors for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals. Bloomsbury health authority now manages the Royal National throat, nose and ear hospitals, the Royal National orthopaedic hospitals and St. Peter's hospitals. West Lambeth health authority now manages St. John's hospital for diseases of the skin. The remaining London postgraduates teaching hospitals are now managed by special health authorities. In addition, Hammersmith hospital, formerly part of Ealing, Hammersmith and Hounslow area health authority (teaching), was given SHA status.

The table shows revenue and capital allocations made to SHAs and boards of governors for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals together with the sums contained within the allocations made to North East Thames and South East Thames regional health authorities in respect of the former boards of governors in the years 1982-83 to 1984-85. It also shows the average annual figures over this period as a percentage of the corresponding 1981-82 allocations.

I regret that the information available centrally does not include similar details for individual hospitals within the special health authorities and the groups of hospitals transferred to the regional health authorities. The right hon. Member may care to approach the health authority chairmen concerned for further details.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the reduction in total expenditure on housing benefit, and the number of claimants affected by the adjustments in (a) the rent taper and (b) the rate taper in November 1985.

Mr. Major: It was estimated that 2·06 million households were affected by the increase in the housing benefit rate rebate taper above the needs allowance from 9 per cent. to 13 per cent. in November 1985. Some households gained, however, from the 95p real improvement to the dependent child addition to the needs allowance. The estimated net saving from these changes was £45 million for a full year (1986-87)—£57 million for the rate rebate taper change alone.

The rent rebate tapers were not adjusted in 1985.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of local authorities in which more than 50 per cent. of ratepayers are receiving housing benefit which meets 100 per cent. of their rates liability; and if he will name these authorities.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 27 January 1986, c. 392]: I am not aware of any such authorities although there are a number, including Knowsley, Manchester, Liverpool, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Sunderland, Birmingham and Sandwell, where more than 50 per cent. of domestic ratepayers receive a full or partial rate rebate. This information, which is readily available only for England, is derived from comparing the number of domestic hereditaments in April 1984 with the rate rebate caseload for 1984-85 as indicated on local authorities' subsidy returns.

Social Security Reform

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if any persons in receipt of social security benefits and currently having mortgage interest paid by his Department, in whole or in part, will lose any part of such payment under his proposed social security changes.

Mr. Newton: As paragraph 3.41 of the White Paper "Reform of Social Security, Programme for Action" (Cmnd. 9691) makes clear, the Government are continuing to discuss with the building societies and other major lenders what changes might be appropriate, including the possibility of a limit on the proportion of mortgage interest which would be met during an initial period in receipt of benefit. Any firm proposals will be announced in due course.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: The Health Education Council is the only non-departmental public body funded by the Department which makes grants to voluntary organisations. The Health Education Council received £8·9 million in 1984-85 from the DHSS.

Lead (Cosmetics and Medicines)

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information his chief medical officer has received as to the prevalence of conditions caused by lead contained in privately-imported cosmetics and medicines used by members of the Asian community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The general issue of eye cosmetics and medicines from the Indian subcontinent was discussed in chapter 5 of the report of a DHSS working party on lead in the environment—"Lead and Health" (1980). This includes references to the few known studies of any health problems linked to the use of these substances.

Registered Homes

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) which local health authorities have so far failed to appoint a registration officer under the Registered Homes Act 1984; and whether any reasons have been given for this delay;

(2) if it has been decided whether the implementation of the Registered Homes Act 1984 and the responsibility for registered homes should be a matter for the housing department or the social services department of local authorities.

(3) if he is satisfied with the operation by local health authorities of the Registered Homes Act 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Under the terms of the Registered Homes Act 1984, residential care homes are registered by local social services authorities and nursing homes by district health authorities.

I refer the hon. Member to my replies to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 30 October 1985, at column 578, and to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Bruinvels) on 28 January, at column 487.

Drug Control

Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report, all applications received by his Department for drug control and assistance projects, local authority by local authority; and what has been granted.

Mr. Whitney: Tables listing all applications received under the drugs initiative and those applications which have been approved have been placed in the Library.

"Violence Against Women"

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to be able to announce his response to the document entitled "Violence Against Women", which has been submitted to him by the National Women's Commission.

Mr. Whitney: The report "Violence Against Women" was recently sent to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services, by the co-chairman of the Women's National Commission, my hon. Friend the Member for Medway (Mrs. Fenner). The report's recommendations concerning women's aid refuges are being carefully studied and inquiries made of the Department of the Environment concerning urban programme funding. I expect to be able to respond shortly to the commission's co-chairman. I shall write to the hon. Lady at the same time.

Kidney Transplants

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services pursuant to the answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 346, about the numbers awaiting kidney transplants in the west midlands, what proposals he has to improve facilities in the region to enable more patients to receive treatment.

Mr. Whitney: The provision of facilities for the treatment of kidney patients is a health authority responsibility. I am advised that the West Midlands regional health authority has made financial provision for an additional 10 kidney transplant operations to be performed in 1986-87. In 1987-88 a new transplant unit is scheduled to open in Coventry with a planned eventual work load of some 20 kidney transplant operations a year. As the hon. Lady will be aware, a renal unit will also open at the New Cross hospital, Wolverhampton, in 1986-87 for the treatment of dialysis patients.

Hospitals (Hygiene)

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many health authorities have supplied information regarding food hygiene following the letter of 3 October 1985 from Mr. Victor Page to regional general managers; and, of those who have replied, how many (a) have satisfactory procedures to ensure that statutory procedures are observed, (b) have invited environmental health officers to inspect all their hospitals and given them open access, (c) have had senior management consider the reports of environmental health officers immediately and (d) have referred to cost as being a reason for delaying or not carrying out the recommendations of the environmental health officers.

Mr. Hayhoe: The responses from all regional health authorities give assurances that the requirements in circular HC(77) 24 on procedures, open access and consideration of environmental health officers' recommendations are observed. Eleven regions referred to the need for major kitchen refurbishments and modernisation schemes to be scheduled within the overall capital programme as a reason why it is not always possible to take immediate action on all aspects of the recommendations of environmental health officers.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will request all health authorities to ensure that any report by environmental health officers on the condition of its hospitals should be seen and discussed by members of the authority, that expenditure on hospital hygiene and pest control should be separately identified in the hospitals' financial returns and that health authorities should at least once a year consider the question of health, safety and hygiene in the hospitals for which they are responsible;

(2) if he will request all health authorities to inform his Department when they decide to take no immediate action when advised by the environmental health officer to carry out kitchen improvements and to convey their reasons for such decisions.

Mr. Hayhoe: These matters are being considered as part of the urgent revision of the Department's guidance on food hygiene in the health service which is being carried out in the light of the recommendations of the Stanley Royd hospital report.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what advice he has issued to hospitals regarding the advice to be given to patients and their relatives when there is a serious outbreak of food poisoning in a hospital.

Mr. Hayhoe: The hospital infection working group has been asked to advise on fresh guidance to health authorities on the management of infection control to give high priority to contingency plans for dealing with serious outbreaks, including those arising from food poisoning.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services on how many occasions hospitals in which there have been outbreaks of food poisoning have refused specialist help from (a) environmental health officers, (b) the public health laboratory service or (c) the communicable diseases surveillance centre.

Mr. Hayhoe: I am not aware of any occasion on which such specialist help has been refused other than that referred to in the report of the Stanley Royd inquiry.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if his Department is estimating the cost to health authorities of the abolition of Crown immunity.

Mr. Hayhoe: We are urgently reviewing the Crown immunity of the National Health Service under the Food Act but the resource implications of removal would depend on a variety of factors which cannot immediately be assessed.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list the bodies and institutions which have urged the lifting of Crown immunity from hospitals;

(2) from which people or institutions he has sought views on Crown immunity; and what was their advice.

Mr. Hayhoe: I refer the right hon. Member to my reply to him on 28 January at column 495.

Students (Benefits)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assessments he has made of the extent to which students' incomes could be reduced resulting from the new restrictions which he has introduced on the payment of housing, unemployment and supplementary benefit to students.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish today.

Hospital and Community Health Service

Dr. Owen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the most recent estimates for changes in hospital and community health service pay and prices and input volume for 1984-85.

Mr. Hayhoe: Hospital and community health service revenue spending increased by 5·7 per cent. in 1984-85. Pay and price increases averaged 5·8 per cent. This in itself is not a useful measure of spending or services. It does not reflect the cost to the taxpayer of financing the service—which rose by 1·4 per cent.—nor does it take account of improved efficiency, which has now become a major contributor to growth in services. Health authorities achieved a 1 per cent. (£100 million) cost improvement programme in that year. Overall clinical activity rose by 2·9 per cent.

Dr. Owen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the most recent estimates for components of the hospital and community health service programme budget for 1984-85.

Mr. Hayhoe: The 1984-85 programme budget for the hospital and community health service is not yet available.

Gillick Case (Deputation)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the recent deputation to him from prominent Roman Catholics regarding the implications of the House of Lords decision in the Gillick case and on his response to the deputation.

Mr. Hayhoe: I met a deputation from the Catholic Bishops Conference of England and Wales on 5 December last year, and am taking account of the points they raised in connection with the proposed revision of our guidance on family planning services for young people.

Gas Cookers

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he proposes to take in the proposed legislation governing the safety of such appliances to ensure that the level of special payments in respect of gas cookers takes account of any implications for their costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The guidance already issued by the Chief Adjudication Officer in circular S36/85 is consistent with the proposals concerning the safety of gas cookers, including any cost implications. A copy of the circular is in the Library.

Nurses

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services for how many patients on average a nurse, working for the National Health Service, is responsible during an average working shift.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that this information is not available centrally.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average number of hours worked per week by a nurse employed by the National Health Service.

Mr. Hayhoe: The "New Earnings Survey" contains information on hours worked by a sample of "full-time" National Health Service nursing and midwifery staff.

Including overtime, the April 1985 survey shows female staff working 37·6 hours per week on average and male staff 38·6 hours.

It should be noted that the "New Earnings Survey" definition of full-time is normal basic hours above 30 per week. The standard contracted week, exclusive of meal breaks, for National Health Service nursing and midwifery staff is 37½ hours.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the planning assumption for the purpose of his Department's estimates of the likely percentage increase in salaries for nurses in the National Health Service in the coming year; and how this compares with his Department's assumptions for the increases in National Health Service costs in general;

(2) what assumption was made, when health authority budgets were prepared for 1985-86, about the percentage increase in nurses' salaries in the current year.

Mr. Hayhoe: The cash allocations to health authorities in 1985-86 and 1986-87 have taken account of forecast increases in general inflation, but have not reflected any specific assumption about increases in the salaries of nurses or other staff. Health authorities know that they will be expected to respond to demographic change, introduce service developments, meet the costs of pay and price increases and of medical advance, from within the funds allocated to them and the additional resources generated from their cost improvement programmes.

Supplementary Benefit (Statistics)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number and rate per thousand of each category of single payments in the years 1978-1985 inclusive.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985, c. 321-22]: Information about the number of single payments by category is available from the "Annual Statistical Enquiry" and the details in the table relate to the years 1978 to 1983, the latest date for which information is available. The figures in the table relate to single payments made during the 12 months preceding the date of the inquiry to those in receipt of supplementary benefit at the time of the inquiry, and do not therefore record all of the single payments made during the year. Because of this the figures are indicators of changes over time rather than absolute values.

North Western Regional Health Authority

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the last trade-union nominated member of the North Western regional health authority ceased to sit; who replaced that member; if there are any unfilled places on the North Western regional health authority; and if he has received any nominations from trade unions to fill a place on the North Western regional health authority.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986]: There are currently two membership vacancies on North Western regional health authority. One of these relates to the place that my right hon. Friend would normally seek to fill with a member with a background in the wider trade union movement. As a result of difficulties in securing suitable nominations, this vacancy has existed since October 1984. New nominations have, however, been received recently and are being considered.

Written Answers to Questions

HOME DEPARTMENT

Naturalisation

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current delay in granting applications for naturalisation.

Mr. Waddington: The average time which it took to deal with applications for naturalisation granted in December 1985 was just under 20 months.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will indicate for each closed prison the average number of hours a prisoner spent in his or her cell for the most recent week for which the data can be conveniently assembled.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not available and could be assembled only at disproportionate cost.

Asylum

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the countries of origin of those applying for refugee status, or asylum, with the number of those applying from each country and the number of those granted refugee status or asylum from each country for the years 1981 and 1984.

* In July 1984 the category of "asylum without refugee status" was abolished. Since then all persons granted asylum have been recognised as refugees. Those granted refugee status or asylum in a particular year may have made their application in an earlier year.

Mr. Simon Garoeb

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any conditions as to his conduct have been attached to the permission for Mr. Simon Garoeb, of Honey hill road, Bedford, a student at the National College of Agricultural Engineering, Silsoe, to reside in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waddington: No.

Police (Injuries)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many man days were lost by policemen as a result of injuries sustained whilst on duty in each of the past five years.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This information is not collected centrally.

Motoring Convictions

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what records of previous motoring convictions are available to the courts.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Details of more serious offences are supplied to the National Identification Bureau, which will make information available to the courts through the prosecution. In addition, local police forces maintain their own records of offences which are not recorded by the NIB. The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre will supply prosecutors with the information available to it about convictions which carry penalty points or disqualification.

Immigration

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many clearance certificates were (a) granted and (b) taken out in 1985; and how these figures compared with each of the previous five years.

Mr. Waddington: The number of entry clearances to the United Kingdom (including those for temporary purposes) issued worldwide was 641,000 in 1980, 605,000 in 1981, 545,000 in 1982, 577,000 in 1983, and 602,000 in 1984. Information for 1985 is not yet available. Information on the number of entry clearances used is not available.

Police (Entry Requirements)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report the details, in metric and non-metric figures, of the minimum height and eyesight requirements of police forces referred to in his answer to the hon. Member for Leicester, East of 29 January.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The present minimum height requirements for police forces in England and Wales are as follows:

The normal standard of vision is defined as an unaided distant vision of not less than 6/18 in each eye (Snellens' test), correctable with approved vision aids to a standard 6/6 in one eye, 6/12 in the other and 6/6 binocularly. The forces marked with an asterisk in the table accept candidates whose vision is correctable by glasses or by contact lenses to the normal standard of vision. The other forces require a higher standard.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the category entitled animal experiments to select, develop or study the use of medicinal, dental and veterinary products and appliances contained in Cmnd. 9574, are related to cosmetic preparations for medicinal purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the categories of cosmetic experiments that will be considered by the animal procedures committee.

Mr. Mellor: The Animal Procedures Committee will be asked to examine all applications for project licences to test cosmetics products of any kind, including toiletry products such as soap, toothpaste and deodorants as well as decorative products.

Drug Addicts

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many registered drug addicts there are; what were the equivalent figures in 1975 and 1979; and what are the equivalent figures for Hampshire for the same periods.

Mr. Mellor: Information on narcotic drug addicts notified to the Home Office by police force area is published for the years 1978 to 1984 in tables 3.11 to 3.13 of "Statistics of the Misuse of Drugs, United Kingdom, Supplementary Tables, 1984." The corresponding information requested for 1975 is given in the following table. Corresponding information for 1985 is not yet available.

Holloway Prison

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in implementing improvements in the C1 unit at Holloway prison.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply, 24 January 1986, c. 324]: A design brief for improvements to the present C1 unit has been agreed and the necessary design work is in hand. It is hoped that work will start at the end of February.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers

Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report a table, for each of the most recent years for which figures are available, showing the number of applicants for teaching posts with overseas teaching qualifications, the countries in which the qualifications were obtained, the number of these teachers who were granted eligibility for qualified teacher status and the number whose applications were unsuccessful.

Mr. Chris Patten: Applications for teaching posts are a matter for local authorities. The information requested is not collected by my Department. The following is the number of teachers trained overseas who have applied to my right hon. Friend for qualified teacher status in 1983, 1984 and 1985, the number of those applications which have been accepted and the number rejected.

Nursery Education

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to encourage the expansion of nursery accommodation for the under fives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Chapter 4 of the White Paper "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469) sets out the Government's policy on the education of the under-fives, including resources. While our plans for expenditure on education allow for provision attributable to the under-fives to continue within broadly the same totals as today, it is for the local education authorities to determine the scale and nature of such provision in particular areas, in the light of their assessment of local needs and priorities.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report (a) the total amount of local authority capital spending on the under-fives and (b) the proportion of that spending allocated to the urban programme since 1981-82, both at outturn and at 1984-85 prices.

Mr. Dunn: Urban programme data are not available in the form requested. Local authority capital expenditure on the under-fives, and education expenditure under the urban programme, in the financial years 1981-82 to 1984-85 in cash and in real terms were as follows:

*a. Local Authority Capital Expenditure on Under-Fives

Education Expenditure

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report a breakdown of local authority education spending, expressed in cash terms, 1984-85 prices, and as a percentage of total budgets, according to the following categories; nursery education, primary education, teachers' salaries, secondary education, special education, community education, further and higher education, school meals and milk, careers and health services, together with the total number of children covered in each local authority.

Mr. Chris Patten: Some of the information requested is given in "Education Statistics 1983-84 Actuals" published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy, which is available in the Library; some elements could be provided only at disproportionate cost; and some are unavailable.

WALES

Land Reclamation

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Wales how much money was spent by the Government, local authorities and the National Coal Board on land reclamation in Wales in (i) 1975 and (ii) 1985, or the last year for which figures are available; and what acreage of land was reclaimed by each body.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Land reclamation schemes often incur expenditure in more than one year. The following information is therefore provided on the basis of schemes approved to start in the years in question.

In 1975 the Welsh Office provided 85 per cent. grant-aid to local authorities for approved expenditure on land reclamation. In that year schemes were approved involving the reclamation of 1,322 acres of derelict land by local authorities at a total cost of some £8·8 million, for which the Welsh Office provided grant-aid of £7·5 million.

The Welsh Development Agency now provides 100 per cent. grant-aid to local authorities for approved expenditure on land reclamation. In 1985 the agency approved grant-aid for schemes to reclaim 622 acres of derelict land by local authorities, at a cost of £10·6 million.

No grant-aided reclamation has been undertaken by the NCB, which normally releases its redundant sites to local authorities for reclamation.

Health Visitors

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to seek to assist health visitors in Wales to tackle their jobs in areas of social distress; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: My right hon. Friend has appointed an expert review of community nursing services in Wales, which will include the role of health visitors. I look forward to receiving its recommendations on how the full range of community nursing services may be deployed more effectively with improved care to patients and clients.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Reform

Mr. Maples asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his intentions for the transfer at abolition of property owned by the GLC and MCCs.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 5 December 1985, c. 292-93]: My right hon. Friend has today laid before Parliament the general order transferring property owned by the GLC and metropolitan county councils.

I announced in my reply to my hon. Friend on 5 December that we intended to make a general order applicable in all seven areas concerned and based on the principles set out in my Department's second and third property memoranda. The views of the local authority associations and successor authorities were subsequently sought on a draft of such an order. The order laid by my right hon. Friend today reflects the comments we received on that draft while adhering to the general principles that I had outlined. Property needed for the continuing provision of inherited services will pass immediately at abolition to the appropriate successor authority. Other property, including that for which the appropriate successor has not been identified, will pass initially to the residuary bodies.

The general order does not make a provision for some property of the GLC and MCCs. Such property will be dealt with by means of supplementary orders. In sending copies of the order to successor authorities and local authority associations we have also sent details of all the supplementary orders we intend to make, together with an explanatory note of the order. I have placed copies of these in the Library.

As I made clear in my reply of 5 December, the making of the general order does not rule out the bringing forward of further orders to meet more closely the wishes of successor authorities in some areas that virtually all property should pass directly to them at abolition. Proposals for such orders will now have to be put forward very quickly, however, if they are to be made before abolition. I repeat the assurance I gave on 5 December that if orders cannot be made before abolition, my right hon. Friend will give early consideration to proposals by the appropriate residuary body under section 67 of the Act so that orders can, where appropriate, be made under that section of the early transfer of property to functional successor authorities.

South Africa

93. Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking to seek to discourage sporting links between Britain and South Africa.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Rhondda (Mr. Rogers) on Tuesday 28 January, at column 469.

Housing Co-operatives

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the future funding of housing co-operatives.

Sir George Young: The Government fully support the housing co-operative movement, which, by the involvement of residents in the provision and management of their own homes, can play an important role, particularly in inner urban areas, but the funding of individual co-operative schemes is a matter for the Housing Corporation, or local authorities, out of the resources available to them. As for all housing association schemes, the Housing Corporation assesses schemes put forward by co-operatives on the basis of housing need.

The Housing Corporation also makes grants to co-operatives and other associations for training and advice under section 121 of the Housing Act 1980. A decision on the total level of such funds available for 1986-87 will be made shortly. In April 1985 we introduced the co-operative promotion allowance, a special allowance paid to co-operatives to meet the extra costs which their developments normally incur. This is to be continued in 1986-87.

The Department's urban housing renewal unit will continue to promote the growth of tenant management co-operatives, which will be among the bodies eligible for start-up, training, and education grants under a provision included in the Housing and Planning Bill.

Town and Parish Councils

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount of Government grant given to town and parish councils in 1985-86.

Mrs. Rumbold: Parishes do not directly receive grants within aggregate Exchequer grant (block grant, specific and supplementary grants and domestic rate relief grant). These are paid to the higher tier authorities such as districts, boroughs and counties. Information on other grants is not available centrally.

Dog Licences

Miss Fookes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the Government's policy towards the dog licence.

Mrs. Rumbold: Future arrangements for dog licensing remain under consideration following consultation on possible changes to the present system. We will announce our conclusions as soon as possible.

County of Cleveland (Abolition)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to abolish the county of Cleveland.

Mrs. Rumbold: No.

Contracts (Non-commercial Clauses)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what evidence he has of the prevalence of the insertion of non-commercial clauses in contracts for goods and services by local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Mr. Murphy) on 24 January, at column 338.

Town and Country Planning (Minerals) Act 1981

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will indicate when he intends to introduce a commencement order to bring section 1 of the Town and Country Planning (Minerals) Act 1981 into force.

Mr. Tracey: During the passage of what is now the 1981 Act an undertaking was given that section 1 would not be implemented until the General Development Order 1977 had been amended to permit the removal of material from bona fide stockpiles and small or temporary mineral-working deposits. That amendment was tabled on 20 December 1985, as class XXVII of the Town and Country Planning General Development (Amendment) (No. 2) Order 1985. Subject to parliamentary approval, it will come into operation on 1 March 1986, and an order to commence section 1 will be made as soon as possible thereafter.

Direct Labour Organisations

Mr. Franks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authority direct labour organisations made an operating loss; how much was the loss; what was the turnover of each relevant organisation; and what was the loss as a percentage of turnover for each of the last three years.

Mrs. Rumbold: Information for the years 1982-83 and 1983-84 is available in the Chartered Institute for Public Finance and Accountancy's annual publication "Direct Labour Organisations Statistics". I shall write to my hon. Friend with such information as is available for 1984-85 from those DLO annual reports which have been forwarded to my Department.

Dennis-Wild Houses

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received proposing the designation of Dennis-Wild steel-framed houses under the Housing Defects Act; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I have received no such representations.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Potato Marketing Board

Mr. Henderson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many members of the Potato Marketing Board appointed by him are specially conversant with the interests of consumers of potatoes.

Mr. Gummer: Four members of the Potato Marketing Board are appointed jointly by Agriculture Ministers. Two of the current appointees have experience in the merchanting and processing of potatoes, one has a background in banking and one in administration. None have been selected specifically because of their consumer interests; this is only one of several criteria which Ministers take into account in making such appointments. Ministers also appoint consumers committees to consider and report to them on the effects of marketing schemes on consumers.

EC Measures

Mr. Harris asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has recently agreed to the adoption of any EC measure by the Council before the European Legislation Committee has considered the proposals.

Mr. Jopling: Yes. On 20 December the Fisheries Council adopted a large number of measures, presented at short notice by the Commission, which provided for adjustments to the common agricultural and fisheries policies required by the accession on 1 January of Spain and Portugal. That Council also adopted three other urgent fisheries measures and a measure changing the French green rate for sheepmeat with effect from the start of the new marketing year on 6 January. I have explained to the Chairman of the European Legislation Committee the reasons for my having agreed to adoption of these measures before scrutiny was completed.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Law Charges

Mr. Hirst asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland what changes he proposes to make to the 1985-86 cash limit for "Class IX, Vote 10, Law Charges, Scotland".

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class IX, vote 10 will be increased by £365,000 from £13,666,000 to £14,031,000. The increase is required to take account of additional costs, including those incurred in running the Crown Office fraud and internal audit units. The increase will be a charge to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planning total of public expenditure.

PRIME MINISTER

Courts (Servicing Costs)

Mr. Soley asked the Prime Minister whether she has any plans to transfer costs incurred by the prison department in servicing the courts to the Lord Chancellor's Department; what is the estimate of those costs; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans at present to alter the arrangements for meeting the cost of servicing the courts.

In England and Wales and in Northern Ireland the responsibility for this work is shared by the prison service and the police. In Scotland it is undertaken mainly by the police.

It is estimated that the costs incurred by the prison department in England and Wales for the financial year 1984-85 were about £34 million. Figures for Northern Ireland are expected to be about £3 million this year.

An examination of the arrangements for meeting the prison service's commitments to the courts in England and Wales is now under way. The scrutiny is being undertaken by the Cabinet Office's efficiency unit with the assistance of the Home Office and the Lord Chancellor's Department. It will make recommendations for the more efficient, effective and economical performance of this work.

Telephone Calls (Tape Recording)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on tape recording of conversations between officials and Ministers; and how this operated in the case of Westland plc as between 10 Downing street, the Department of Trade and Industry and the Ministry of Defence.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave yesterday to the hon. Member for Knowsley, North (Mr. Kilroy-Silk).

Urban Renewal (Bradford)

Mr. Madden asked the Prime Minister if Her Majesty's Government have any plans to provide extra financial assistance to Bradford city council to assist urban renewal in the metropolitan district; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: My hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction announced on 27 January that the resources allocated for Bradford's urban programme in 1986-87 would be £4·58 million that is the same in cash terms as for the current financial year. In addition, my hon. Friend is considering a request from the council for limited extra capital resources for the current year, and I understand that the council has bid for some of the resources available through the urban housing renewal unit, including for a community refurbishment scheme.

Ministerial Responsibility

Mr. Williams asked the Prime Minister if she will define ministerial responsibility as currently practised in respect of a Minister's responsibility for the actions of his or her officials; and if she has made any changes to the concept since 1979.

The Prime Minister: The doctrine of ministerial responsibility has been established by constitutional precedent and development over the years, and is set out in standard works about Government in this country. It is not for any particular Prime Minister to define.

Mr. Williams asked the Prime Minister what are the numbers, grades and functions of those officials whose actions are covered by her specific area of ministerial responsibility.

The Prime Minister: As to ministerial responsibility, I refer the right hon. Gentleman to my earlier reply. I have overall departmental responsibility for the Cabinet Office, including the Central Statistical Office and the Management and Personnel Office, and the Prime Minister's Office. Information about numbers, grades and functions is available from Estimates and from standard books of reference such as the "Civil Service List".

TRANSPORT

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by his Department with grant-aid in the last financial year for which figures are available and the size of the grant so given;

(2) if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations, and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available;

(3) if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

Mr. Ridley: My Department made grants in 1984-85 to the following organisations (international organisations excluded):

	£000
Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents	465
Community Transport	99
Medical Commission for Accident Prevention	6

I am satisfied that the grants are not used for party political purposes. No governmental agency, assuming the term excludes local authorities, nationalised industries and international agencies, receives grant-aid from the Department.

Fishing Vessels (Loss at Sea)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many United Kingdom registered fishing vessels have been lost at sea over the last 10 years; what were the causes in each case; what recommendations for future safety of fishing vessels were made by the enquiries into these losses; and what responses the Government made to each of these recommendations.

Mr. Ridley: The number and nature of casualties of fishing vessels are published in the Department's annual return "Casualties to Vessels and Accidents to Men". The following table sets out the figures of total losses of fishing vessels for the years 1975 to 1984:

	1975	1976	1977	1978	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	Total
Collisions	6	6	4	3	9	6	3	5	6	3	51
Strandings	13	9	13	6	1	8	13	12	7	8	90
Founderings/ floodings	17	15	18	19	24	18	20	22	18	22	193
Fires and explosions	9	3	1	5	2	1	10	7	6	2	46
Missing	—	—	—	2	4	1	2	—	2	2	13
Capsizings	2	1	—	1	2	4	3	3	3	2	21
Others	—	1	1	2	—	1	1	1	1	2	10
Total	47	35	37	38	42	39	52	50	43	41	424

Information about the causes and recommendations from the investigations of these 424 losses and the subsequent action by my Department is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost and effort.

All recommendations are carefully considered and, where appropriate, advice is given by means of merchant shipping notices directly to owners and skippers; by instructions to fishing vessel surveyors and by regular consultations on safety matters with representatives of the fishing industry.

Fishermen (Safety)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to the number of fishermen who have undertaken firefighting and survival courses in each of the last five years.

Mr. Ridley: I have no information on the numbers of fishermen who have taken these courses.

Addingham Bypass

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement about the preferred route for the A65 Addingham bypass.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Draft line and side roads orders for the A65 Addingham bypass will be published towards the end of this month. Copies of the proposals will be sent to my hon. Friend. A public exhibition explaining the draft proposals will be held in the Memorial Hall, Addingham from 27 February to 1 March.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Tampons

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the report of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the supply of tampons.

Mr. Howard: The report was published on 15 January.

The commission found that the market shares of Tambrands Ltd. and Southalls (Birmingham) Ltd. constitute a monopoly situation in relation to the supply of tampons.

It found, however, that since the commission's last inquiry in 1980 various changes in actual and prospective competitive conditions had occurred, notably the marked improvement and reduction in prices of external sanitary protection products (both relative to tampon prices and in real terms), the increasing importance of retailers' own brands of tampons and the increased probability of effective competition from new entrants to the tampon market. This, it considered, would be encouraged by, for example, the recent decision of the Independent Broadcasting Authority to allow television advertising of sanitary protection on an experimental basis, which would facilitate the establishment of new brands and the marketing of new external sanitary protection products in more direct competition with tampons.

However, the commission had little doubt that the two companies still had a degree of discretion in the pricing of tampons such that the prices of their main brands were higher than would be the case if their market power were less.

It was found that there were no natural or artificially created barriers to entry to the tampon market, and no restrictive or anti-competitive practices on the part of the two companies.

The commission concluded that it was more beneficial in this case that the currently rewarding profit levels should act as a magnet to attract new suppliers to the market than that the risk should be taken through measures of price regulation of harming existing smaller competitors and inhibiting new entry. The report's conclusion was therefore that the prices charged or proposed to be charged for tampons could be expected not to operate against the public interest.

I accept the commission's report. Because the commission found that the practices under reference did not operate against the public interest, there is no statutory basis to take further action on any of these practices. I have asked the Director General of Fair Trading to release Tambrands and Southalls from their undertaking given in 1981 to provide him with certain information to enable him to monitor the tampon market.

Microelectronics

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what effect his Department's microelectronics application project has had on the uptake of microelectronics in Great Britain's factories.

Mr. Butcher: Surveys carried out by the independent Policy Studies Institute, have shown that in 1983 microelectronics was used in 47 per cent. of all United Kingdom factories employing 20 or more people. Preliminary figures from a further survey undertaken during 1985 indicate a significantly increased level of use. The report detailing the latest survey is in the course of preparation and will be published in the spring. In 1978, when the microelectronics applications project began, it was estimated that only 5 per cent. of companies were using microelectronics in their products and production or manufacturing processes. Since then, activities under MAP have been varied and continuous and these will have made a major contribution to the increased use of microelectronics in British industry.

Audio Tapes

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest estimate of the level of imports and of import penetration of blank audio tapes.

Mr. Alan Clark: Imports of blank audio tapes in the 12 months to November 1985 were £64.9 million. Estimates of import penetration for blank audio tapes are not available, because the figures would disclose information about individual undertakings.

New Technology

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if any conclusions have been reached by the group consisting of Ministers most closely concerned, senior industrialists and representatives from the education world regarding the particular needs brought about by new technology; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: The final report of the Information Technology (IT) Skills Shortages Committee which I chaired was published in July 1985. Copies of this and the committee's two previous reports are available in the Libraries of both Houses. The committee made a number of recommendations for action by industry, professional institutions and trade associations, and the education system. Chief among these was the call for a new partnership between industry and education to help meet the growing demand for skilled IT manpower.

Following the report the Government announced a £43 million programme to provide some 5,000 extra engineering and technology places in higher education by the end of the decade. Industry has responded for its part by setting up the IT skills agency under the aegis of the CBI education foundation, and by a major increase in its financial support for IT-related courses in higher education.

London Borough of Ealing

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial assistance has been given from his Department to firms operating in the London borough of Ealing in each year since 1978; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Since 1978 grants worth a total of some £5,750,000 have been offered to firms in Ealing under the main schemes of assistance. I am sure that companies in Ealing, like those elsewhere, will continue to make full use of the help that my Department offers.

Kleinwort, Benson Ltd.

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what moneys have been paid to Kleinwort, Benson Ltd. by his Department in the last seven years; and for what services.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Takeovers (Shareholders' Funds)

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to restrict the practice of a company using its shareholders' funds to provide financial assistance, directly or indirectly, to another company to purchase its own shares in a takeover bid; what representations he has received on this subject; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Section 151 of the Companies Act 1985 already prohibits companies from giving financial assistance directly or indirectly for the acquisition of its own shares. Financial assistance is defined in section 152. This general prohibition is subject to various exemptions listed in section 153. I have received two recent representations about the operation of these provisions which I am considering, but ultimately their interpretation is a matter for the court.

ENERGY

Kleinwort, Benson Ltd.

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Energy what moneys have been paid to Kleinwort, Benson Ltd. by his Department in the last seven years; and for what services.

Mr. Peter Walker: As far as payments to Kleinwort, Benson Ltd. on the privatisation programme are concerned, I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by the Financial Secretary to the Treasury.

My Department has made no other payments to Kleinwort, Benson Ltd.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Sub-Saharan Africa

Sir Adam Butler asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government have yet decided whether to support the special fund set up by the International Fund for Agricultural Development to help farmers in sub-Saharan Africa.

Mr. Raison: Now that the fundamental question of the second replenishment of IFAD's basic resources has been settled, I shall give the matter careful consideration.

SCOTLAND

Labour Statistics

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretry of State for Scotland if he will publish a list showing the number and percentage of unemployed persons in each employment district in the Highland region as at the most recent date that figures are available and also the figures for the same time of year in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The tables show the number and percentage rates of unemployed registrants and claimants in each travel-to-work area in Highland region in January in each of the years 1976-86. The figures are not comparable throughout the period due to (a) changes in the basis of the count in October 1982 and August 1984, (b) the removal from the count from April 1983 of some men aged 60 and over, and (c) the redefinition of the TTWA's in August 1984.

For comparison purposes figures are also provided on the new and old bases at October 1982 and January 1984.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report, for the last 10 years for which figures are available, the amounts of money paid by his Department, whether directly or indirectly through some other agency, to organisations and bodies concerned, the amounts they received and the method of payment.

Mr. John MacKay: The provision of health education falls to the Scottish health education group nationally and to health boards locally. Their respective expenditure is funded by the Scottish Home and Health Department through financial allocations to the Common Services Agency for the Scottish Health Service and to health boards. since 1975-76 this expenditure has been as follows:

Financial Year	Scottish Health Education Group £000	Health Boards £000
1975-76	428	258
1976-77	716	480
1977-78	780	558
1978-79	1,067	776
1979-80	1,252	900
1980-81	1,540	1,018
1981-82	1,889	1,250
1982-83	2,136	1,413
1983-84	2,386	724
1984-85	2,799	831

In addition, the Scottish Home and Health Department gives grant-aid to a number of voluntary bodies, some of which undertake some health education. The amount of grant-aid paid to the appropriate bodies is as follows:

	Scottish Committee of Action on Smoking and Health	Scottish Council on Alcohol		Royal Environmental Health Institute for Scotland
		(a) Headquarters Grant	†(b) Training of Volunteer Counsellors

1984-85	22,990	69,300	21,000	—

Grant-aid amounting to £2,800 has been paid to date to Scottish AIDS monitor, which began during the current financial year.
* Prior to 1980-81 the Scottish Committee also received grant from the Scottish Health Education Group (then Unit).
† Grant paid by the Scottish Education Department under section 9 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968.

Parking Fines

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many persons in Scotland in each region paid parking fines in 1985;

(2) how many persons in Scotland in each region were charged in 1985 as a consequence of failure to pay parking fines within the prescribed period.

Mr. John MacKay: Information on the issue of fixed penalty notices in 1985 and the subsequent outcome is not likely to be available until July.

Projects (Liquidation)

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the projects which were drawn to the attention of the Scottish Affairs Committee in evidence by the Highlands and Islands Development Board as successes which have since gone into liquidation and give details of the losses involved.

Mr. John MacKay: None has gone into liquidation.

Examinations (Markers)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many markers are normally recruited by the Scottish Certificate of Education Board; and how many have so far been recruited for the 1986 examinations.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Scottish Examination Board normally appoints about 3,800 markers each year for the Scottish certificate of education and certificate of sixth year studies examinations. At 30 January 1986 the number of markers recruited for the 1986 examinations was 2,492.

Health Boards (Rates)

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the rates burden on the Scottish health boards in the years 1983-84 and 1984-85; and what is the figure for 1985-86.

Mr. John MacKay: In 1983-84 and 1984-85 health board expenditure on contributions in lieu of rates was £41·1 million and £43·1 million respectively. Information on 1985-86 is not yet available centrally.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish figures to show, for the years 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86, National Health Service revenue expenditure in Scotland for the first two years and the allocation for the current year; and if he will also give figures to show for the individual boards the additional cost of teaching and additional other costs in teaching hospitals expressed in cost terms and as cost per student.

Mr. John MacKay: Total current expenditure by health boards on hospital and community health services was £1,218·3 million in 1983-84 and £1,299·1 million in 1984-85. It is estimated that expenditure on the same basis will amount to £1,378 million in 1985-86.

The table shows the estimates made for revenue allocation purposes of the additional costs arising for individual health boards in meeting their teaching responsibilities. These costs have been expressed at 1985-86 prices as measured by the gross domestic product deflator. The cost per student calculation has been based on the additional cost of teaching only, since the estimates of additional other costs in teaching hospitals are distributed under the SHARE (Scottish Health Authorities Revenue Equalisation) calculations to teaching boards according to the proportion of the composite weighted population of Scotland served by each such board.

Health Board	1983-84 (at 1985-86 prices)			1984-85 (at 1985-86 prices)			1985-86
	Additional cost of Teaching	Additional other costs in Teaching Hospitals	Cost per student	Additional cost of Teaching	Additional other costs in Teaching Hospitals	Cost per student	Additional cost of Teaching	Additional other costs in Teaching Hospitals	Cost per student
	(1) £'000	(2) £'000	(3) £	(4) £'000	(5) £'000	(6) £	(7) £'000	(8) £'000	(9) £

Greater Glasgow	17,515	17,629	25,384	19,072	19,084	25,463	18,667	12,249	25,641
Lothain	13,784	7,041	25,384	14,183	7,204	25,463	14,718	4,918	25,641
Tayside	9,037	2,675	25,384	9,396	2,745	25,463	8,846	1,879	25,641

The additional costs of teaching are distributed according to the number of undergraduate medical and dental students in each teaching centre: for this purpose four dental students are counted as one medical student.

AIDS

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice the Scottish Education Department has issued to regional councils about the problem of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, particularly in regard to hygiene in schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Preliminary guidance was issued by the Scottish Education Department in October 1985 in relation to children with haemophilia who may have been exposed to the HTLVIII virus. Prelimimary guidance for social work departments was also issued in January of this year. The guidance was prepared in consultation with the Scottish Home and Health department and recommended simple hygienic precautions to counter the spread of the virus. Detailed guidance is being prepared and will be issued as soon as possible.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Terrorism (Syria)

17. Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has informed the Syrian authorities of Her Majesty's Government's concern at their support for and succour to those terrorists belonging to the Abu Nidal Group who have claimed responsibility for the incidents at Rome and Vienna airports.

Mr. Renton: During his visit to Damascus in December, my hon. Friend the Minister of State expressed grave concern to the Syrian authorities about their reported support for Abu Nidal.

Nicaragua

20. Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has had any recent discussions with the United States of America concerning American involvement in Nicaragua; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We regularly discuss all important issues, including the situation in central America, with the United States Government. They are fully aware of our views.

40. Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action has been taken by the Council of Ministers to assist Nicaragua in the resolution of its current political problems.

Mr. Eggar: The foreign Ministers of the European Community support the Contadora process, the aim of which is to restore peace and stability and resolve the political problems of all central Americans.

Afghanistan

21. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Government policy relating to the current situation in Afghanistan.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Only when Soviet forces leave Afghanistan will the country be free to regain its status as a sovereign, independent and truly non-aligned state. We look to the Soviet Union to open the way to a settlement on the lines of successive United Nations resolutions by agreeing to a timetable for troop withdrawal; this is the key to peace.

Middle East

22. Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he intends making any fresh proposals designed to reduce tension in the middle east ; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We will continue to support all realistic initiatives for the peaceful resolution of the region's conflicts.

26. Mr. Redmond asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the European Economic Community Foreign Ministers next propose to discuss the middle east ; and if he will make a statement.

77. Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Council of Ministers will next discuss the problems of the middle east.

Mr. Renton: The agenda for the next EC Foreign Ministers' meeting has not yet been agreed. We and our partners stand by the principles set out in the Venice declaration and subsequent statements and are ready to support realistic initiatives to solve the region's problems.

54. Mr. Walters asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards peace in the middle east.

83. Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards Palestinian self-determination.

Mr. Renton: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Latham).

Central America

23. Mr. Welsh asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Council of Ministers is next expected to discuss the situation in Central America in the light of the Contadora initiative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The 12 Foreign Ministers of the member states of the European Community regularly exchange views on important issues including central America.

USSR

24. Mr. Beaumont-Dark asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to meet the Foreign Minister of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Mr. Shevardnadze has accepted my invitation to visit the United Kingdom. I hope to see him here soon. No precise dates have yet been fixed for the visit.

South Africa

25. Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received in favour of sanctions against South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We have received a large amount of correspondence from interested parties, both for and against the imposition of economic sanctions against South Africa.

It remains our view that general trade sanctions would not help to bring about the changes we wish to see in South Africa.

45. Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he now expects to meet the United Kingdom representative on the Commonwealth eminent persons monitoring committee for further discussions on South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans at present to meet Lord Barber, who is a member of the Commonwealth group of eminent persons in his own right and not as our representative.

47. Mr. Torney asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Council of Ministers will next discuss its policy towards South Africa.

49. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Council of Ministers is taking to put pressure on South Africa to end apartheid.

64. Mr. Barnett asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Council of Ministers will next discuss South Africa.

67. Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Council of Ministers will next consider relations with South Africa.

68. Dr. Gilbert asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Council of Ministers will next discuss developments in South Africa.

71. Mr. Martin asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Council of Ministers will next discuss South Africa.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen).

52. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the subjects on which Her Majesty's Government have recently made representations to the South African Government.

Mrs. Chalker: We have recently made representations to the South African Government over:

The raid on Maseru on 19 December.

The enlargement and projected independence of the Kwandebele homeland.

An appeal for the release of Dr. Renfrew Christie on humanitarian grounds.

The restrictions on border traffic with Lesotho.

75. Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with Commonwealth Governments since the start of 1986 over the question of South Africa and the agreements reached at the 1985 Commonwealth conference.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend had an opportunity to discuss a range of questions with the Nigerian Foreign Minister during his visit to London on 7-9 January. The meeting of Foreign Ministers from EC and Front Line states, which my right hon. and learned Friend attended in Lusaka from 3-4 February, provided a further occasion for an exchange of views with a number of his Commonwealth colleagues.

79. Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the itinerary for the Commonwealth group which is charged with promoting dialogue between South Africa and the Commonwealth.

Mrs. Chalker: The members of the Commonwealth group of eminent persons are to operate as individuals not as representatives of Governments. It is for the group to decide its own itinerary in consultation with the other parties concerned.

80. Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has received any representations from the Commonwealth group of eminent persons who are to visit South Africa.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: No.

90. Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the South African Government concerning the reform of the South African constitution.

Mrs. Chalker: It is not for us to prescribe changes to the South African constitution. We have, however, both separately and with our EC and Commonwealth partners, repeatedly called on the South African Government to dismantle the system of apartheid and institute a process of genuine dialogue with a view to establishing the democratic, non-racial system of government so urgently needed in that country.

Terrorism (Arab Hit Squads)

27. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken in the European Economic Community to try to deal with the threat of Arab hit squads again coming to the United Kingdom and other European countries.

Mr. Renton: Following recent terrorist attacks at Rome and Vienna airports, security precautions here and in other European countries are already at a high level. If there is evidence of plans to mount a terrorist attack from any quarter then we shall of course take appropriate steps to deal with the threat. European Community Foreign Ministers agreed on 27 January to strengthen co-operation against international terrorism.

European Community Reform

28. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications for the United Kingdom's role in the European Community of the rejection by the Danish Folketing of the reforms agreed at the Luxembourg summit.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We want to see the agreement reached at the Luxembourg European Council signed and implemented as soon as possible. The Danish Government support the agreement and we hope that Denmark will ratify it, with the other member states.

Terrorism

29. Mr. Temple-Morris asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress being made in the struggle against international terrorism.

Mr. Renton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Brecon and Radnor (Mr. Livsey).

35. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with his European colleagues to consider what action should be taken following the alleged involvement of the Governments of Libya, Syria and Iran with the terrorists who perpetrated the attacks at Rome and Vienna airports.

78. Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations he has had with European Economic Community Governments, and to what effect, following Colonel Gaddafi's threat made on 16 January to offer facilities for the training, arming and financing of terrorists.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I refer the hon. Member and my hon. and learned Friend to the answer I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Ashfield (Mr. Haynes).

Treaty of Rome

30. Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs by what date the United Kingdom Government are expected to notify the Council of Ministers about the attitude of the United Kingdom Parliament to amendments to the treaty of Rome.

Mrs. Chalker: The United Kingdom is ready to sign the document embodying the amendments to the EC treaty agreed at the European Council in Luxembourg. The changes will thereafter be subject to approval by the national Parliaments of all EC member states. We propose to introduce a Bill for this purpose as soon as is practicable.

32. Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Foreign Minister of Denmark about amendments to the treaty of Rome.

86. Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has had any discussions with the Danish Foreign Minister about the future development of European Economic Community policies; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The Danish Foreign Minister called on my right hon. and learned Friend on 22 January. He explained to him that we wished to see the agreement reached by Heads of Government in Luxembourg signed and implemented as soon as possible, that we hoped Denmark would be able to accept it too, and that we saw no prospect of reopening what had already been agreed.

46. Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action is to be taken by the Council of Ministers following the rejection by the Danish Parliament of amendments to the treaty of Rome.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The Netherlands, as President of the Council, has proposed that those 11 member states able to do so should sign the single Act incorporating the amendments on 17 February.

69. Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further recommendations are being given by the Council of Ministers to amendments to the treaty of Rome.

Mrs. Chalker: Agreement on a single Act amending the treaty of Rome was reached at a meeting of Community Ministers on 27 January.

Gibraltar

31. Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Gibraltar's economy and the impact upon it of the official opening of the border with Spain.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The full opening of the border with Spain has had a positive effect on the Gibraltar economy particularly in those sectors most closely related to tourism. Some 300 to 400 extra jobs have been created in the process.

Nuclear Test Ban Treaty

33. Mr. Norman Hogg asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions Her Majesty's Government have had with the other participating states about progress towards the signing of a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty.

39. Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions Her Majesty's Government have had with the other participating states about the progress of negotiations towards a comprehensive test ban treaty; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Views on nuclear testing constraints have been exchanged periodically with the United States and the Soviet Union, participants in the trilateral negotiations which were suspended in 1980, as well as with other states.

Israel

34. Mr. Merlyn Rees asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his discussions with the Israeli Prime Minister on his recent visit to the United Kingdom.

62. Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on his recent meeting with the Prime Minister of Israel.

Mr. Renton: My right hon. and learned Friend's discussions with Mr. Peres were useful and constructive. They focused on efforts to move towards middle east peace negotiations and conditions in the occupied territories. We reviewed briefly other regional and bilateral issues.

Iran

36. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what instructions or advice was given to the British embassy and British officials in Iran as to the reception and acceptance of, and offers of help to, United States citizens immediately before, during and after the Iranian hostage crisis.

Mr. Renton: During the takeover of the American embassy in Tehran in November 1979 the British authorities acted in close concert with the American authorities, and with their knowledge and approval. The paramount consideration throughout was the safety of American personnel in Tehran.

BBC (External Services)

37. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any plans to change the method of financing of the external services of the British Broadcasting Corporation; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: An arrangement for multi-year funding of the external services has been agreed with the BBC for the three years from 1985-86 to 1987-88. This change in the way the external services are financed follows a recommendation in the Perry report that the grants-in-aid to the external services should be determined on a multi-annual basis for the same period as the licence fee.

Strategic Defence Initiative

38. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the United States Administration concerning the strategic defence initiative proposals.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The United States strategic defence initiative research programme is one element in the regular discussions I hold with members of the United States Administration, for example when I saw Secretary of State Shultz in December.

Iran-Iraq War

41. Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during his recent middle east tour, he urged the Governments of Saudi Arabia, Oman and Kuwait to make every effort to bring a stop to the Iran-Iraq war.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Yes. The Governments of Saudi Arabia, Oman and Kuwait fully share our view that it is in all our interests to see the Gulf conflict brought to the earliest possible end.

Nigeria (British Prisoners)

42. Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens are presently being held in Nigerian prisons.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: There are four British citizens at present in detention in Nigeria.

Libya

43. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Government's relationship with Libya.

Mr. Renton: We have at present no plans to resume diplomatic relations with Libya.

Australia

44. Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications for relations with Australia of the recent Royal Commission report on compensation for damage done by the testing of United Kingdom nuclear devices in Australia.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The Royal Commission's report was a long and detailed document. Its recommendations are being discussed with the Australian Government in a positive spirit. I see no reason why the report should damage our excellent relations with Australia.

Mr. Oscar Mpetha

48. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by Her Majesty's Government to the Government of South Africa on behalf of Mr. Oscar Mpetha, a trade unionist, who commenced a five-year jail term in August 1985.

Mrs. Chalker: As my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Pentlands (Mr. Rifkind) told the hon. Member for Battersea (Mr. Dubs) on 16 July 1985 there are strong humanitarian grounds for intervention in Mr. Mpetha's case. We therefore instructed Her Majesty's ambassador in South Africa to appeal to the authorities to exercise clemency. This was done on 11 June 1985 and again on 27 September 1985.

Anglo-Soviet Relations

50. Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current state of United Kingdom-Soviet relations.

Mr. Renton: We continue to seek better relations based on fuller mutual understanding with the Soviet Union. Mr. Shevardnadze has accepted my right hon. and learned Friend's invitation to visit London, and there are plans for a continuing and active programme of Anglo-Soviet contacts at both official and ministerial level. We also welcome the prospective visit of the British group of the IPU to Moscow, led by my right hon. Friend the Lord President of the Council.

Disarmament

51. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress at current disarmament conferences.

Mr. Renton: The United States-Soviet bilateral talks at Geneva resumed on 16 January, in the first round to follow the meeting between President Reagan and General-Secretary Gorbachev last November. We trust that further progress, building on the success of that meeting, will be made this year. At the MBFR talks in Vienna the United Kingdom delegation presented on behalf of NATO allies a new and constructive proposal on 5 December 1985 designed to break the longstanding deadlock. These talks resumed on the 30 January. There has been good progress on procedural issues at the Stockholm conference on disarmament in Europe. We hope this will lead to progress on substance during the ninth session which commenced on 28 January. At the conference on disarmament in Geneva there was limited progress in 1985 in the negotiations for a global ban on chemical weapons. The Conference reconvened on 4 February.

African National Congress

53. Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further consideration he has given to meeting representatives of the African National Congress; and if he will make a statement.

58. Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why Her Majesty's Government continue to refuse to meet the African National Congress.

Mrs. Chalker: A senior official of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office met with the ANC in Lusaka on 3 February. The meeting was used to convey our concern that there should be an end to violence and a process of genuine dialogue between parties in South Africa.

Pakistan

55. Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Pakistan.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We have good relations with Pakistan.

Turkish Peace Association

56. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has discussed the continued imprisonment of members of the Turkish Peace Association with the Prime Minister of Turkey; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I discussed the whole question of human rights, including the Turkish Peace Association, with the Turkish Government during my visit to Turkey last year and have done so on a number of subsequent occasions. I look forward to Mr. Ozal's visit here later this month. We shall welcome the progress made by his Government on human rights while, as on previous occasions, expressing our hope that Turkey will continue its efforts to achieve full normalisation in these matters.

Irish Republic (Terrorism Convention)

57. Mr. Stanbrook asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the Irish Republic to become a signatory of the European convention for the suppression of terrorism.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: As my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State said to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Gow) on 20 January, the Government of the Republic of Ireland announced in the joint communiqué on 15 November 1985 (Cmnd. 9657) their intention to accede to the European convention on the suppression of terrorism as soon as possible.

EC Council of Ministers (Veto)

59. Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions, on what subjects and by which countries the veto has been formally exercised in the Council of Ministers since 1973.

Mrs. Chalker: There have been many occasions when decisions which could have been taken by majority vote have been deferred because one or more member state was opposed to them. It is not possible to make a clear distinction between those occasions when the Luxembourg compromise was formally invoked and those where it was tacitly applied.

Turkey

60. Mr. James Lamond asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to seek to pay an official visit to Turkey during the current year.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend made an official visit to Turkey in February last year. He has no current plans to pay a further visit in 1986. We look forward to the official visit to the United Kingdom of the Turkish Prime Minister, later this month.

82. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he discussed human rights during the visit of the Prime Minister of Turkey to the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has already made clear we look forward to holding wide ranging talks with Mr. Ozal later this month. My right hon. and learned Friend will welcome the progress made by his Government on human rights, while, as on previous occasions, expressing our hope that Turkey will continue its efforts in this area.

EC (Policy Development)

61. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further proposals he intends to place before his European Community partners for the development of Community policies.

Mrs. Chalker: We shall continue to work for early completion of the common market, improvements in world trade rules, reform of the common agricultural policy and strengthened co-operation in foreign policy.

EC (Co-ordination and Co-operation)

63. Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what areas he expects greater co-ordination and co-operation between European Economic Community member states in the next 12 months.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: EC Heads of Government agreed last December that member states would aim to complete a genuine internal market by 1992; to strengthen co-operation in foreign policy; to improve Community decision-taking; to reduce constraints on small and medium-size undertakings; and to study the conditions for establishing non-inflationary growth.

Indonesia

65. Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the ambassador of Indonesia; and what subjects were discussed.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I received the new Indonesian ambassador for an introductory call on 22 January. We discussed bilateral and regional issues.

Hong Kong

66. Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to visit Hong Kong to discuss arrangements for the future implementation of the agreement with China on the transfer of sovereignty.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I have no plans to visit Hong Kong in the immediate future. My hon. Friend the Minister of State the Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton) visited Hong Kong in October 1985 and again on 23-24 January. I am glad to be able to report that the implementation of the Sino-British Joint Declaration is proceeding smoothly.

Chemical Weapons

70. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had on chemical weapons in the light of the United Kingdom's chairmanship of the chemical weapons committee of the conference of chemical weapons and disarmament.

Mr. Renton: We confer regularly on arms control topics with allies and in contacts with other countries. We have emphasised the high priority to be given to the early conclusion of a verifiable global ban on all chemical weapons. We very much hope that United Kingdom chairmanship of the Committee on Chemical Weapons at the conference on disarmament will enable substantial progress to be made in the negotiations this year.

European Act

72. Mr. TeddyTaylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what will be the consequences for the European Act of the decision of the Parliament of Denmark to reject it; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: The Danish Government, at the request of its Parliament, is to hold a referendum to determine Denmark's position on the outcome of the inter-governmental conference. We naturally hope that the consequence of the decision to hold a referendum will be to endorse the outcome of the conference.

Uganda

73. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the high commissioner for Uganda; and what matters were discussed.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I last saw the Ugandan High Commissioner in Nassau last October, at the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting. My right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Pentlands (Mr. Rifkind) gave a farewell luncheon for him on 6 November. His successor has not yet taken up his new post in London.

A variety of matters were discussed on these occasions.

EC (Treaty Reform)

74. Mr. George Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to introduce legislation to implement the treaty reforms agreed at the recent European Economic Community intergovernmental conference.

Mrs. Chalker: We will introduce a Bill as soon as all reserves are lifted. The text of the single European Act incorporating the proposed changes was placed in the Library and Vote office last week.

Gulf War

76. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest developments in the Gulf war.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We deplore the continuation of this tragic and wasteful conflict which is now well into its sixth year. We continue to support the United Nations Secretary-General and his special representative Mr. Olof Palme in their efforts to find a peaceful solution. We will do all we can to help bring about the earliest possible settlement.

East-West Relations

81. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current state of East-West relations.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: We continue to work for better East-West relations. We welcomed the successful meeting between President Reagan and Mr. Gorbachev, which has helped to establish a measure of understanding between the two leaders. It lends hope for progress in the resolution of the differences between East and West on arms control, regional problems and human rights. We will play a full and active part in this process.

Luxembourg Agreement (Denmark)

84. Mr. Buchan asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place in the Council of Ministers following the rejection by the Danish Parliament of the Luxembourg agreement.

Mrs. Chalker: There was discussion on 27 January in the Foreign Affairs Council, where I represented the United Kingdom. I refer the hon. Member to my statement of 30 January, at column 1106.

Israeli-Jordan Relations

85. Dr. M. S. Miller asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what indications he had from King Hussein during his recent visit to London regarding his policy towards entering direct negotiations with Israel.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I expect King Hussein to continue his efforts, which have our support, to make progress towards negotiations with Israel within an international framework.

EC (Foreign Policy)

87. Sir Anthony Meyer asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on recent progress towards closer co-operation in foreign policy in the European Community.

Mrs. Chalker: Treaty provisions on co-operation in the sphere of Foreign Policy based on a United Kingdom initiative were agreed at the inter-governmental conference, as my right hon. and learned Friend reported to the House on 18 December. I refer the hon. Member to the evidence which my right hon. and learned Friend gave on this subject to the House of Commons Select Committee on Foreign Affairs on 11 December. I understand that the Select Committee has placed an uncorrected transcript of the evidence in the Library of the House and that it will be published in due course.

Nepal (Royal Visit)

88. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Minister will be accompanying Her Majesty the Queen on the forthcoming visit to Nepal.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I shall be accompanying Her Majesty the Queen on the forthcoming state visit to Nepal.

Ascension Island

89. Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the development of Ascension Island.

Mr. Eggar: The dependent territory of Ascension island is an important communications centre and a vital link between the United Kingdom and the Falkland Islands. It consists of a largely barren island peak of volcanic rock and has no indigenous inhabitants. Normal development criteria do not therefore apply and the territory receives no aid from us.

Lesotho

91. Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what communications he has had with Major General Justin Lekhanya since the coup in Lesotho; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Our High Commissioner and members of other diplomatic missions met General Lekhanya and other members of the Military Council and Council of Ministers at the opening of the High Court session on 3 February. We have normal relations with the new Lesotho Government.

Vietnamese Refugees

92. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Vietnamese refugees are currently in (a) open and (b) closed camps in Hong Kong.

Mr. Renton: On 27 January 4,353 Vietnamese refugees were in open camps and 4,842 in closed camps in Hong Kong.

Vietnam

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has of the denial of human rights in Vietnam; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Human rights violations in Vietnam, of which we are aware, include detention without trial in "re-education" camps, persecution of Buddhists and Catholics, harassment of intellectuals, and discrimination against ethnic minorities. We deplore all such abuses. Our Representative at the 41st Session of the UN Commission on Human Rights in 1985 drew attention to these violations. We plan to express our concern again at Vietnam's poor record at this year's meeting.

Polish Nationals (Visas)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he is satisfied with the arrangements that are currently in existence in Poland for the issue of visas to Polish residents wanting to visit the United Kingdom.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Yes.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Deterrent

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the current value both in financial terms and as a percentage of total expenditure on the replacement of the United Kingdom's nuclear deterrent, of the amount of work and materials which will be provided from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Approximately 55 per cent., or over £5,100 million by value, of the total estimated cost of Trident (£9,285 million at 1984-85 prices and at £1=$1.38) is planned to be spent in the United Kingdom.

Cammell Laird

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the vessels, giving their type, which are under construction at Cammell Laird; when the order for each was placed; which were placed on the basis of competitive tendering; and, in each such case, which other yards competed for the order;

(2) if he will list the naval construction contracts which have been placed with Cammell Laird since 1979 following a competitive tendering exercise and in which wider and more relevant factors were taken into consideration before deciding where to place the order.

Mr. Lee: Since May 1979 the following orders have been placed with Cammell Laird:

Vessel—SSK-02 to 04
Order date—3 January 1986

The reasons for placing this order with Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Ltd/Cammell Laird were given by me on 14 January 1986 (Official Report, column 913). The other firms tendering for this contract were Yarrow Shipbuilders and Scott Lithgow.

Vessel—Type 22-13
Order date—29 January 1985

The reasons for placing this order with Cammell Laird were given by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Defence on 28 January 1985 (Official Report, column 21). Swan Hunter and Vosper Thorneycroft also tendered for this contract.

Fleet

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Defence which ships he expects to leave the active fleet during 1986.

Mr. Stanley: The ships which, on present plans, will be withdrawn from the active Fleet during 1986 are:

HMS	Class
Glamorgan	County Class Destroyer
Leander	Leander Class Frigate
Galatea	Leander Class Frigate
Yarmouth	Rothesay Class Frigate
Orpheus	Oberon Class Submarine
Oberon	Oberon Class Submarine
Hildeston	TON Class Minehunter
Bickington	TON Class Minesweeper
Alfreston	TON Class Minesweeper
Hodgeston	TON Class Minesweeper
Stubbington	TON Class Minesweeper
Walkerton	TON Class Minesweeper
Hydra	Ocean Survey Ship

Certain of these ships will continue to be available at standby status where they will remain declared to NATO.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his estimate of the effect of a 10 per cent. increase in personal tax allowances on the net weekly income of single people, married couples and married couples with two children in 1986-87 (on the basis of the latest forecast under the Industry Act 1975) for those on 50 per cent., 75 per cent., 100 per cent., 150 per cent., 200 per cent. and 500 per cent of average earnings;

(2) what is his estimate of the effect of a 2p cut in the basic rate of income tax on the net weekly income of single people, married couples and married couples with two children in 1986-87 (on the basis of the latest forecast under the Industry Act 1975) for those on 50 per cent., 75 per cent., 100 per cent., 150 per cent., 200 per cent. and 500 per cent of national average earnings.

Mr Moore: The information requested is as follows.

Increase in net income from a reduction of 2p in basic rate*

Multiples of Average Earnings	(£ per week) ½	¾	1	1½	2	3
Single person	1·24	2·31	3·38	5·52	6·62	6·62
Married couple † ‡	0·73	1·80	2·87	5·01	6·62	6·62

Increase in net income from 10 per cent. increase in allowances*

Multiples of Average Earnings	(£ per week) ½	¾	1	1½	2	3
Single person	1·27	1·27	1·27	1·27	1·69	2·54
Married couple† ‡	2·02	2·02	2·02	2·02	2·69	4·04

* Calculated for 1986-87 assuming that the proposed changes are applied on top of statutory indexation of the 1985-86 tax regime. The change in net income is calculated by comparison with the indexed tax regime.
† Assuming that the wife has no earned income.
‡ Income tax liability is unaffected by the number of children.

VAT

Mr. Maclean asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will now implement the provisions of article 25(11) of the sixth Council directive of 17 May 1977 which exempts small farmers from the requirement to complete value added tax returns as is the case in most European Community countries.

Mr. Brooke: No. The flat rate scheme for farmers provided by article 25 of the sixth Council directive is not appropriate or necessary in the United Kingdom. Unlike most other member states, the United Kingdom zero-rates agricultural products and much associated expenditure such as animal feeding stuffs and seeds. For other purchases, where appropriate, farmers are able to recover in full the VAT incurred. The United Kingdom VAT registration threshold of £19,500, which is one of the highest in the Community, already relieves small farmers if they so wish from the requirement to be registered and complete VAT returns.

Financial Guarantees

Mr. Cohen asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list all the current financial guarantees relying on funds provided by Parliament agreed to by the Bank of England; and what are the amounts involved.

Mr. Ian Stewart: There is none.

Income Tax (Self Assessment)

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he has given to moving to a system of self assessment for income tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: This is one of the subjects which will be considered in the forthcoming Green Paper on the reform of personal taxation.

Charities (Donations)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation to make contributions to charities and non-profit making organisations tax deductible.

Mr. Moore: Tax relief is already available for payments to charities under deeds of covenant.

Capital Transfer Tax

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer of raising the relief from capital transfer tax of business assets to 100 per cent.; and how many businesses were liable for such tax in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Moore: The full year cost is estimated to be £20 million. It is estimated that in 1985-86, capital transfer tax will be paid on business assets included in some 150 discretionary trusts and 1,500 transfers on death. Information is not available upon which to base estimates of the number of lifetime transfers involving business assets.

Income Tax

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will estimate the total number of individuals who would be removed from income tax by the raising of personal income tax thresholds by 10 per cent. above the current rate of inflation; and if he will estimate the total loss in revenue which would accrue to the Exchequer from such a move;

(2) what percentage of average earnings has been represented by personal income tax allowances in each of the last 20 years for which figures are available; and what was the percentage change in such allowances in each of those years on the previous year's figure.

Mr. Moore: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Westland plc

Mr. Dalyell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer which of the subsequently published letters between Ministers relating to Westland plc were copied to him or other Ministers of his Department; and what action was taken as a result.

Mr. MacGregor: As the letters themselves make clear, copies were sent to me. There was no need for me to take any action.

Kleinwort, Benson Ltd

Mr. Neillst asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what moneys have been paid to Kleinwort, Benson Ltd by his Department in the last seven years; and for what services.

Mr. Moore: Payments made to individual financial advisers in respect of work carried out for the Government are generally treated as commercially confidential. The work done for the Government by Kleinwort, Benson Ltd in the privatisation programme up to June 1985 was detailed in the replies I gave to the hon. Member for Thurrock (Dr. McDonald) on 3 April 1984, at columns 451-54, and 12 June 1985, at columns 497-98, respectively and to the hon. Member for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) on 24 May 1985 at columns 562-66. Since then, the Treasury has sold its residual shareholdings in Britoil plc and Cable and Wireless plc. Kleinwort, Benson Ltd acted as one of the underwriters in both these sales.

Lodging Allowances

Mr. Wareing asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the regulations governing exemption from tax on lodging allowances; what has been the nature of such representations; what plans he has to amend the regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986, c. 69]: I assume the hon. Member has in mind lodging allowances that an employee might receive from his employer. These are not treated as taxable income where they are paid to cover the additional accommodation costs incurred by an employee as a result of his being required temporarily to work away from his normal place of work. Representations are received from time to time suggesting that the schedule E rules should be changed so that lodging allowances paid to an employee in other circumstances should not be taxed either. There are no plans to change the present rules.

European Court Budget

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply of 22 January, Official Report, column 197, if the Government have yet applied to the European Court for suspension of implementation by the Commission of the disputed elements in the budget pending substantive judgment by the Court; what estimate he has made of the duration of the legal proceedings at the European Court in making financial provisions for additional payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986, c. 68]: Pending substantive judgment by the European Court, the Government hope to submit within the next 10 days their application to the Court for an interim order suspending implementation by the Commission of the disputed element in the budget. The Special

Supplementary Estimate approved by the House on 3 February contains provision for three months of additional payments, during which time it is hoped the Court will decide whether to grant our application for an interim order. The Court is not expected to reach judgment on the substantive cases before the end of 1986.

NORTHERN IRELAND

School Building

Mr. Bell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps will be taken to relieve overcrowding in Northern Ireland schools after 1 April when the moratorium on school building schemes begins.

Dr. Mawhinney: The usual steps to relieve overcrowding in schools in Northern Ireland, for example the provision of temporary classrooms, will continue to be taken, where appropriate under minor works schemes. The moratorium on new starts in the financial year 1986-87 applies only to major schemes.

Russian Language Teaching

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland in how many schools in Northern Ireland Russian is taught.

Dr. Mawhinney: Two.

Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Her Majesty's Government will request the Government of the Irish Republic to report to the next meeting of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference on progress made towards the implementation by the Irish Government of their intention to accede to the European convention on the suppression of terrorism as stated in paragraph 7 of the joint communiqué of the Anglo-Irish summit meeting at Hillsborough.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1986, c. 597-98]: The Irish Government have already expressed their intention to accede as soon as possible to the European convention on the suppression of terrorism and are well aware of our views, and of the importance of this matter.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if it is intended that Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers from time to time should attend the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference; and whether the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has been represented at official level.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1986, c. 598]: It is open under article 3 of the Anglo-Irish agreement for Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers to attend the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference. None have attended so far. The FCO has been represented at official level.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will raise at the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference, under article 7 of the Anglo-Irish agreement, direct cross-border contacts between the British and Irish armed forces.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1986, c. 598]: Since the Army operates in support of the police, it is the Royal Ulster Constabulary which must take the lead in improving the co-ordination of security activity on either side of the border.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of the security forces convicted of offences in Northern Ireland and sentenced to custodial sentences have been allowed to return to Great Britain on parole for humanitarian reasons in 1985.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986, c. 75]: There is no parole scheme in Northern Ireland. There are provisions for home leave for certain sentenced inmates, but information about the granting of home leave to former members of the security forces is not readily available.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the number of prisoners refused bail for each year since 1980; and what is the average period of remand without bail for accused persons charged either wholly or in part on the basis of accomplice evidence in each of the following categories (a) the top decile of prisoners awaiting trial for the longest period, (b) the top quartile of prisoners awaiting trial for the longest period, (c) the second quartile of prisoners awaiting trial for the longest period and (d) the average period of remand for all prisoners charged on the basis of such evidence.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986, c. 76-77]: The total number of applications for bail which were refused in each year since 1980 was as follows:

	Number
1980	728
1981	951
1982	990
1983	855
1985	764

Information on remand times for those at present on remand in custody who have been charged on the basis of evidence from alleged accomplice is not separately available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Terrorism

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what was the average period of remand without bail in each of the following cases involving accomplice witnesses' evidence of (a) persons convicted, (b) persons acquitted and (c) persons who were released as a result of such evidence being retracted; and how these figures compare with those for persons charged with terrorist-type offences on the basis of evidence other than accomplice evidence;

(2) what was the proportion and number of persons accused of terrorist-type offences on the basis, either wholly or in part, of accomplice witnesses' testimony who were accorded bail; and what was the equivalent proportion of persons accused of terrorist crimes who were not charged on the basis of accomplice testimony who were accorded bail in 1985.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986, c. 76-77]: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many persons accused of terrorist-type offences on the basis of accomplice witness testimony are currently awaiting trial in Northern Ireland; how many persons have been convicted and how many persons have been acquitted of such crimes after having been charged either wholly or partially on the basis of accomplice witness testimony; and how many persons have been released following the retraction of testimony by accomplice witnesses;

(2) how many people have been convicted in the current year, either on their own admission of guilt or following a plea of not guilty, on the basis of evidence given by accomplices on behalf of the Crown in cases concerning scheduled offences in Northern Ireland; how many suspects arrested on the basis of such evidence have been released as a result of the retraction of evidence given by accomplices; and how many people are presently awaiting trial as a result of evidence obtained from terrorist accomplices.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986, c. 77]: Sixty persons were convicted and 54 persons acquitted in cases concerning scheduled offences during 1985 following trials in which the evidence of a former accomplice was given on behalf of the Crown or on the basis of their statements of admission made during enquiries arising from the evidence of a former accomplice. There have been no such trials so far in 1986. It is not possible to associate directly the number of persons released with the withdrawal of evidence by alleged accomplices because persons may be released for other reasons and because persons who have been charged on such evidence may also face criminal charges on other grounds. However, the available records show that in 1985, following the withdrawal of evidence by alleged accomplices, some or all of the charges against 59 persons were dropped.

On 24 January 1986, 30 persons were on remand or had been returned for trial for scheduled offences in cases in which it was intended that an alleged accomplice would give evidence for the Crown. For figures for earlier years I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 13 February 1985.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Income Support

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much extra expenditure his Department would incur using the illustrative figures published in the technical annex to Cmnd. 9691, if the income support personal allowance for single people aged 18 to 24 years were £30·60 per week.

Mr. Newton: Any such estimate is subject to a wide range of uncertainty, since the hon. Member's proposal would increase the numbers who might become entitled to benefit and would be likely to have other effects arising, for example, from the fact that the proposed rate would be substantially above the current YTS allowance and would imply for this age group a married couple's rate less than twice the single rate. The minimum extra cost—that is, simply applying the hon. Member's proposed benefit rate to the number in this age group who currently receive benefit—would be of the order of £30 million to £40 million.

Food and Chemical Allergies

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much expenditure is undertaken by his Department each year on research into the causes and treatment of food and chemical allergies.

Mr. Whitney: The Department does not fund research into the causes and treatment of food and chemical allergies. I understand that the Medical Research Council which is funded by grant-in-aid from the Science Vote of the Department of Education and Science, is carrying out some research in this area.

I am also advised that the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has commissioned a study to obtain better information on the frequency with which allergic reactions to foods and food additives occur. The cost of this study is estimated to be £300,000 over a 3-year period.

Slough

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list National Health Service capital projects in the Slough constituency (a) authorised and (b) completed in the periods 1974 to 1979 and 1979 to 1985 and the cost of each project.

Mr. Whitney: I am afraid that information is not available centrally in precisely the form requested. Details of capital schemes funded by Oxford regional health authority and carried out over these periods and of the capital programme approved by the regional health authority for 1986-87 to 1993-94 are shown in the table. They include Wexham park hospital which provides the main hospital services for the people of Slough.

Health Education

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report, for the last 10 years for which figures are available, the amounts of money paid by his Department, whether directly, or indirectly through some other agency, to organisations and bodies working in the field of health education, detailing the organisations and bodies concerned, the amounts they received and the method of payment.

Mr. Whitney: The figures are:

	Health Education Council £ million	Action on Smoking and Health £'000	Coronary Prevention Group £'000	Alcohol Concern £'000
1975-76	1·6	18·5
1976-77	1·4	31
1977-78	2·9	41·5
1978-79	3·5	59·5

1983-84	8·6	136	3·25	69
1984-85	8·9	150·5	8·5	311

Payments are made by payable order.

A number of voluntary organisations grant-aided by the Department undertake some health education as part of their main function. A full list was set out in my predecessor's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith) on 25 July 1985 at columns 765-771.

Ambulance Drivers (Training)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make it his policy that the National Health Service training authority require all ambulance drivers to be trained and tested in motorway driving.

Mr. Whitney: I understand that the course of ambulance driver training to which I referred in my reply to my hon. Friend on 10 December 1985 at column 614, and the test related to it, which is required for all staff driving emergency ambulances, includes motorway driving. Those driving "sitting case vehicles" on non emergency work are given driver training as considered necessary to meet local conditions. We see no reason to change this arrangement.

Guardian's Allowance

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what advice his Department gives to people seeking to claim guardian's allowance as to the practical steps which should be taken to satisfy the requirement of section 38(2)(b) of the Social Security Act 1975.

Mr. Major: The conditions for entitlement to guardian's allowance are set out in leaflet NI 14 which is available from local social security offices. It is for the independent adjudicating authorities to decide if a person claiming the allowance has taken all reasonable steps to trace a missing parent. The steps which must be taken to trace a missing parent depend entirely on the circumstances of the case and no guidance has been issued.

Vaccine Damage Payments Act 1979

Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will consider extending the period of claim under the Vaccine Damage Payments Act 1979 from six years to 12 years.

Mr. Whitney: We have no plans to do so.

Health Authorities (Rates)

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the rates burden on English health authorities in the years 1983-84 and 1984-85; and what is the figure in the current year.

Mr. Hayhoe: The summarised accounts of regional and district health authorities in England together with those for the special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals show expenditure on rates as follows:

1983-84	127·2
1984-85	137·0

Figures for the current financial year will be available in the Autumn.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish figures to show the revenue expenditure for 1983-84 and 1984-85 and the allocation for 1985-86, on teaching for each of the English regions and for the Board of Governors hospitals, showing the service increment for teaching with supplements expressed in cash terms and in cost per student.

Mr. Hayhoe: Most direct medical teaching costs, including the costs of pre-clinical years, are met by medical and dental schools themselves, financed by the University Grants committee. The additional service costs associated with teaching are however recognised in protected sums within regional health authority allocations: the service increment for teaching. The information requested on the sums allocated through SIFT is given in table 1.

Different funding arrangements apply to the special health authorities for the London postgraduate hospitals (formerly boards of governors hospitals) which do not receive SIFT. Instead, their general allocations take account of their special teaching role. Details of their revenue allocations for the years concerned are in table 2.

Unit General Managers

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many of the total number of unit general managers so far appointed were previously (a) nurses, (b) doctors, (c) National Health Service administrators, (d) other National Health Service employees and (e) working outside the National Health Service;

(2) how many of the unit general managers so far appointed are male and how many female.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that not all this information is collected centrally. However I understand that health authorities have so far made the following appointments:

	Number
Nurses	42
Doctors	82
NHS Administrators	254
Other NHS	10
Non-NHS	35

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for each region the number of unit general managers who have so far been appointed.

Mr. Hayhoe: I understand the following appointments have so far been made:

Mrs. Myra Mabel Fairclough

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is now in a position to make a report available into the circumstances of the death of Myra Mabel Fairclough at St. Mary's hospital, Portsmouth.

Mr. Whitney: In view of the possibility of legal proceedings I am afraid that it would be improper at this stage to publicise the report.

Mr. Kenneth Harris

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether Mr. Kenneth Harris was transferred to Harefield hospital as a private patient following his heart transplant operation at the Harley street clinic.

Mr. Whitney: No. I understand that following a heart operation on a patient at the Harley street clinic, the view of the clinicians involved was that his condition indicated the need for an immediate heart transplant. In view of his condition it was decided that he should not be moved, and he therefore underwent a heart transplant on 10 January 1986 at the Harley street clinic. The costs of the operation and of his care in the clinic were met by American Medical International. The operation was perfomed by Mr. Magdi Jacoub from Harefield and a team from the clinic. The patient was transferred to Harefield on 15 January to continue his post-operative treatment in the specialist unit there as a National Health Service patient.

Mr. D. H. Briggs

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Social Services why the mobility allowance granted to Mr. D. H. Briggs of Kenilworth road, Balsall common, Coventry, reference MOB 895913, on 27 November 1985 has still not been paid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I regret that a number of errors have been made in dealing with Mr. Briggs' claim. I am investigating these, and I shall write to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Hospitals (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients there are in Coldeast hospital, Hampshire; how many patients have not been able to be put into the community; and where they are to be placed.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member all the information he seeks. Some of it is not available centrally. The most recent available figures are given in the table. For futher information I suggest that the hon. Member consults the health authority concerned.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the number of staff employed at each hospital in the Portsmouth and South-East Hampshire health district for each year since 1979 and by category of employment.

Mr. Whitney: I regret that this information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may like to obtain it from the chairman of the district health authority.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of psycho-geriatric beds in each hospital in the Portsmouth and South-East Hampshire health district currently and each year since 1979.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested is given in the table. Only one hospital in the district had beds available in the psychogeriatric specialty during this period.

Children in Care (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many children there are in care in each district in Hampshire; and how these figures compare with equivalent figures for 1981 and 1979, respectively.

Mr. Whitney: The figures requested for each district in Hampshire are not available centrally. The numbers of children in care in the county of Hampshire at 31 March 1979, 1981 and 1984 are given in the table.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his reply on 17 January, Official Report, column 746, he will publish a similar table showing the total weekly pensions assuming no change in the state earnings-related pension scheme, annual increases in the basic pension in line with average earnings, and that earnings increase in real terms by 1·5 per cent. a year.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Health and Personal Social Services (Statistics)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is now able to give figures for 1984 to update table 3·14 of "Health and Personal Social Services Statistics for England 1982".

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 28 November 1985 c. 657]: The updated table is as follows. These figures have not been previously published in this format. Figures for the years up to and including 1983 were given in table 3.14 of "Health and Personal Social Services Statistics for England, 1985 edition", which was published on 3 December 1985.

Primary Health Care (Expenditure)

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the expenditure on primary health care per head of population for each year since 1979 in (a) the Islington health authority area, (b) Barnet and (c) Sutton Coldfield.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 17 December 1985, c. 155]: Following are the figures requested:

*Expenditure per Head of Population on Primary Health Care

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Medical Negligence

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Attorney-General how many cases of medical negligence are considered by courts on average per annum; and how many cases are currently extant.

The Attorney-General: I regret that information relating to cases of medical negligence is not currently collected and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Maintenance

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list in the Official Report all local authority bids made to his Department for the purposes of school maintenance over the last 12 months.

Mr. Dunn: The greater part of local education authorities' maintenance expenditure is classified as recurrent. Authorities do not submit bids in respect of recurrent expenditure, but provision for expenditure on maintenance and repairs, along with all other aspects of recurrent education spending, is discussed annually with the local authority associations.

Each authority is invited annually to submit to the Department details of its capital expenditure plans; capitalised maintenance expenditure may figure in these, but is not separately identifiable on the basis of the information supplied.

Teachers (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the number of (a) full-time and (b) part-time teachers in Hampshire; and what the figures were in 1979.

Mr. Chris Patten: There were 10,312 full-time and 1,734 part-time qualified teachers employed within primary, middle and secondary schools in Hampshire in January 1985. The equivalent figures for Januray 1979 were 12,273 full-time and 1,547 part-time qualified teachers respectively.

Schoolchildren (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the total number of schoolchildren in Hampshire at the last available date and in 1979, respectively.

Mr. Dunn: There were 218,990 full-time and 2,159 part-time pupils in maintained primary, middle and secondary schools in Hampshire in January 1985. The equivalent figures for January 1979 were 260,074 full-time and 1,688 part-time pupils respectively.

Mid-day Supervision

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list those local education authorities which have so far applied for education support grant in respect of their proposals for mid-day supervision in schools.

Sir Keith Joseph: By 5 February applications had been received from the following local education authorities:

Gloucestershire
Berkshire
Redbridge
Bradford
Hereford and Worcester
Hillingdon
Bury Harrow
Newham
Durham
South Tyneside
North Yorkshire
Surrey

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Select Committees

Mr. McCrindle asked the Lord Privy Seal what action he intends to take with regard to the implementation of the proposals made in the second report from the Committee of Privileges, Session 1984-85, regarding the premature disclosure of proceedings of Select Committees.

Mr. Biffen: I understand that the procedures recommended in paragraphs 11, 12 and 13 of the report are already being followed by Select Committees. As regards the recommendation [paragraph 14(iv)] that a report by a Select Committee that a leak had caused "substantial interference" to its work should be automatically referred to the Committee of Privileges: I propose that any change in Standing Orders should be deferred until the effect of the implementation of the other recommendations made in the report can be assessed.

Private Members' Motions

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will publish in the Official Report a list of private members' motions, excluding prayers against statutory instruments, which have been debated in parliamentary time provided by the Government in each Session since 1960.

Mr. Biffen: The information requested is as follows:

Early-day Motions

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Lord Privy Seal (1) if he will publish in the Official Report a list of early-day motions which have been debated on the Floor of the House in parliamentary time provided by the Government in each Session since 1960, showing separately (a) prayers against statutory instruments and (b) other motions;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report a list of early-day motions that have been debated on the Floor of the House in each Session since 1960, showing respectively (a) prayers against statutory instruments and (b) other motions.

Mr. Biffen: The information is not readily available. My hon. Friend may wish to discuss with the offices concerned the provision of information which would nevertheless meet his needs.

ENERGY

Nationalisation

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will state, for each industry in public ownership in 1979, the latest annual amount paid to former owners; and, in respect of any such industry which has been privatised, if there is any contribution from public funds for compensation payments to former owners.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: All but an insignificant amount of compensation for the publicly owned energy industries has been paid; the remaining small payments are a matter for the industries concerned.

No contributions have been made from public funds for compensation payments for those parts of the industries which have been privatised since 1979.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by his Department with grant aid in the last financial year for which figures are available, and the size of the grant so given;

(2) if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations, and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available;

(3) if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

These are commitment figures. Accounting procedures preclude the separate identification of payments without disproportionate expense.

Although no grant was made in 1984-85 the Department has agreed to make a grant of £3,000 in each of the financial years 1985-86 to 1988-89 to the petroleum law education trust.

Both the petroleum law education trust and neighbourhood energy action are registered charities, and are thus precluded from engaging in political activity. The bona fides of applicants for seedcorn grants are checked with neighbourhood energy action before grants are committed.

Project grants go only to bodies engaged in projects using the Manpower Services Commission's community programme, under whose rules they are forbidden to engage in political activity. Compliance is monitored and enforced by the MSC.

In addition, in 1984-85 and 1985-86 the Department has made a grant-in-aid to the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority who have made a number of minor donations to voluntary bodies, the largest of which in 1984-85 was £50 to the police memorial trust.

Alternative Energy Projects

Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the estimated contribution, in million tons coal equivalent, of each alternative energy project to total energy supply; and what is each project's likely contribution in the year 2000.

Mr. Peter Walker: At present hydro power contributes about 2 mtce per annum to total United Kingdom energy supply. In addition some heat-producing renewables have now become established as economically attractive and are beginning to make a valuable contribution.

Forecasts of the contribution from the renewable technologies to United Kingdom energy supply in 2025 published in ETSU R30, copies of which are in the Libraries of both Houses, show that for the heat producing technologies, the contribution could be about 26 mtce per annum and for the electricity producing technologies, about 2 mtce.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Crown Immunity

Mr. Richard Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has yet completed his review of Crown immunity in respect of hospital kitchens; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler: Yes. I have completed the review of Crown immunity of hospital kitchens in respect of the food hygiene provisions of the Food Act 1984. Inevitably much of the ground covered is the subject of the Bill introduced by my hon. Friend and I pay tribute to the effectiveness with which he has pursued this matter. His Bill is to be debated tomorrow and I think it right to indicate now the conclusions which the Government have drawn from the review and the action which will follow.

The Government share the widespread concern about the state of hygiene in some hospital kitchens. This problem led to tragic consequences at the Stanley Royd hospital in August 1985 which was the subject of the recent inquiry. In responding to these problems there can be no substitute for more effective management and supervision in hospital kitchens generally. The introduction of general managers, who will be both responsible and accountable for these and other matters, will do much to secure this. But the Government have concluded that there is more that can and should be done.

The Food Act 1984 and the Food Hygiene (General) Regulations 1970 do not apply to the Crown. Nevertheless, it has for many years been Government policy that health authorities should behave as if they did. But the Government have decided that the nature of the problems displayed by recent events is such that stronger safeguards are needed to underpin management effort and above all to protect the patients. I therefore intend to introduce legislation in the present Session to remove Crown immunity from hospital catering in respect of the food hygiene regulations by making health authorities subject to the provisions of the Food Act.

This legislation will be coupled with strengthened guidance to the health service on measures to ensure high food hygiene standards. The Government are determined to spare no effort to secure the highest standards of food hygiene in hospitals.

NHS (Services)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assessments have been made by his Department of cost-effectiveness of services provided within the National Health Service since the implementation of the recommendations of the Griffiths report.

Mr. Hayhoe: I am determined to consolidate and develop the significant improvements which have already been achieved in the cost-effectiveness of the National Health Service so that the increased resources provided by the Government are used to give the best possible service to patients. This has been one of the Government's major aims both in setting up the Griffiths inquiry and in implementing its proposals for strengthening management and making it more accountable at all levels. I endorse the inquiry team's view that line managers have a key responsibility to seek out cost improvements in all the services they manage and should be held to account for their achievement. Within the Department the NHS management board, established by my right hon. Friend on the recommendation of the inquiry team, has been developing the arrangements which already existed for health authorities to achieve a significant level of measurable cost improvement each year. Cost improvements achieved in 1984-85 amounted to over £100 million —more than 1 per cent. of health authorities' revenue allocations. The cost improvement targets proposed by authorities for 1985-86 give a total of about £150 million —more than 1½ per cent. of revenue allocations.

Higher cash spending and improved efficiency resulted in very significant increases in services to patients in 1983, as the service recovered from industrial action, and 1984. For example, in-patient and day cases increased by 650,000 and out-patient attendances by nearly 1·7 million between 1982 and 1984.

My right hon. Friend introduced in 1983 a programme of "Rayner-type" scrutinies which are conducted by seconded NHS officers who examine in detail a particular field where there is potential for improving efficiency. A number of scrutiny reports have now been published and regional health authorities are specifically asked to identify savings from implementing these in their cost improvement programmes.

The Department introduced performance indicators for the NHS in 1983. These are an important source of information for local managers on variations between their own and comparable districts' performance in key areas which can help them identify scope for improvement. The original indicators have been revised and expanded and indicators based on 1984-85 data have now been issued to all authorities.

The management board will in future be undertaking annual reviews of the performance of individual regions. The first of these reviews — which supplement arrangements already existing for reviews at Ministerial level — are about to take place. They will be used to examine key aspects of authorities' performance, including the short-term programme submitted annually by each RHA and the cost improvements it proposes. They will draw on performance indicators and other key data to help in identifying aspects of performance requiring particular scrutiny. Regional health authorities are taking up similar performance issues in their reviews of districts.

The NHS management board is actively considering ways in which these monitoring and review arrangements can be further developed and strengthened, and local management supported in its task of seeking greater cost-effectiveness in all services.

Rates

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) where financial savings to be made as a result of the proposal that social security recipients should pay 20 per cent. of their rates will be shown in the national accounts;

(2) if the transitional protection provisions for supplementary benefit recipients in April 1988 will cover their extra expenditure in having to meet 20 per cent. of their rates bill;

(3) if the transitional protection in his proposed reforms of social security covers the 20 per cent. contribution to local rates.

Mr. Newton: As the White Paper made clear in paragraphs 3.54-3.57, and as my right hon. Friend stated to the House on Second Reading of the Social Security Bill on 28 January at column 829 the proposed social security structure will have to be developed in the light of discussions on the recent Green Paper on local government finance. The transitional protection arrangements described in paragraphs 3.44 and 3.89 of the White Paper refer to weekly cash payments of supplementary benefit/income support and FIS/family credit, not to housing benefit including rate rebates. Any reduction in rate rebates appears in the national accounts as an increase in rates payable; they are not shown as a separate item.

Benefits

Mr. Andrew Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what, in the light of the economic assumptions contained in the latest Government expenditure plans, is the estimated percentage increase upon which the July 1986 supplementary benefit uprating will be based;

(2) what, in the light of the economic assumptions contained in the latest Government expenditure plans, is the estimated percentage increase upon which the July 1986 housing benefit uprating will be based.

Mr. Newton: In recent years the uprating of the supplementary benefit scale rates has been based on the retail price index excluding housing costs, and that of the housing benefit needs allowances on the retail price index excluding housing costs plus the movement of local authority rent and rates and water rates. It is not the practice to publish forward estimates of movements in individual components of the retail price index.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will state, for each of the following categories of supplementary benefit recipients, the numbers receiving laundry additions, the average amount received by each person and the total amount paid (a) pensioners aged 60 to 79 years of age, (b) pensioners aged 80 years and over, (c) disabled pensioners, namely, those receiving benefits related to disability or continuing incapacity, aged 60 to 79 years and (d) all other non-pensioner recipients;

(2) if he will state, for each of the following categories of supplementary benefit recipients, the numbers receiving diet additions, the average amount received by each person and the total amount paid (a) pensioners aged 60 to 79 years, (b) pensioners aged 80 years and over, (c) disabled pensioners, namely, those receiving benefits related to disability or continuing incapacity, aged 60 to 79 years and (d) all other non-pensioner recipients;

(3) if he will state, for each of the following categories of supplementary benefit recipients, the numbers receiving heating additions, the average amount received by each person and the total amount paid (a) pensioners aged 60 to 79, (b) pensioners aged 80 years and over, (c) disabled pensioners, namely, those receiving benefits related to disability or continuing incapacity, aged 60 to 79 years and (d) all other non-pensioner recipients.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Virus B

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons have died in the United Kingdom during each of the last 30 years as a result of infection with Virus B.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, in England and Wales there have been no deaths registered since 1979 with an underlying cause of death stated as Simian B disease, which is an extremely rare condition in this country.

Mrs. B (Invalid Carriage)

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what are the current whereabouts of the offside rear shock absorber of the crashed three-wheel carriage driven by Mrs. B. of Rutland, (Department Reference PO(5) 4374/61); and why it was removed by representatives of his Department prior to the second visit by Mrs. B's consultant engineer to the Ministry's retained garage in December 1983;

(2) what tests were carried out by representatives of his Department on the removed shock absorber of Mrs. B. of Rutland's invalid carriage prior to December 1983; why they were only instigated after the first report in May 1983 by Mrs. B's consultant engineer; what was the result of the tests; and what steps were taken to notify Mrs. B's legal advisers of the findings;

(3) why no response was made by his Department's Artificial Limb and Appliance Centre at Sherwood hospital to the oral and written complaints made by Mrs. B of Rutland (Reference PO(5) 4374/61) about the condition of her three-wheeled invalid carriage in February 1982; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Conceptions (Statistics)

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many conceptions to 15-year-old girls there were in England and Wales in 1983; and how many of these conceptions ended in abortion and how many ended in births.

Mr. Whitney: During 1983 there were 6,968 known conceptions to girls usually resident in England and Wales who were estimated to have been aged 15 years at the time of conception. Of these, 3,108 led to maternities with live or still births and 3,860 were terminated by abortion under the 1967 Act.

Pensions and Benefits (Payment)

Mr. Crowther asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in what areas recipients of pensions and other benefits have been offered financial inducements to change from payment through the Post Office network to payment through banks; and under what powers such offers are authorised.

Mr. Major: I understand that no such inducements have been offered.

South London Blood Transfusion Centre

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has on the grade at which the post of general manager of the South London blood transfusion centre has been advertised; to whom the manager will be responsible; and what medical qualifications are required.

Mr. Hayhoe: The post of general manager of the south London blood transfusion service was advertised by the South-West Thames regional health authority as a scale 29 post; it was made clear that a clinician appointment would be made in accordance with HC(85)9. It is intended that the general manager will report to the regional general manager of the South-West Thames regional health authority. The advertisement made no mention of any specific qualifications being required.

Health Authorities (Grading)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidance he gives to regional health authorities as to the grading and qualifications appropriate for management of regional medical services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Most medical services are managed at district or unit level, even if designated a regional specialty. With the implementation of general management health authorities have been allowed to propose management arrangements to suit local circumstances. Health authorities are expected to make provision for appropriate professional input into management.

Orthopaedic Operations (Devon)

Sir Peter Mills asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average waiting time for orthopaedic operations at Exeter, Barnstaple and Plymouth hospitals; and what is the average waiting time for such operations nationally.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give my hon. Friend all the information he seeks. Information on waiting time for admission to individual hospitals is not available centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to write to the chairman of the South-Western regional health authority who may be able to provide details of local activity. The estimated median interval between the date a patient was put on the waiting list and the date of admission to a National Health Service hospital in England for the specialty of trauma and orthopaedics in 1983, the latest year for which information is available centrally, was 13 weeks.

Cancer

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average national figure for cases of lymphatic cancer and leukaemia among people under 25 years of age, expressed (a) in total and (b) as a rate of incidence.

Mr. Hayhoe: The average annual numbers of registrations of newly diagnosed cases of (i) Hodgkin's and non-Hodgkin's lymphomas (lymphatic cancer), International Classification of Diseases (ICD) 9th revision 200-202 and (ii) Leukaemia, ICD (9) 204-208, for persons aged under 25 years of age for the period 1980-82 for England and Wales are 466 and 477 respectively, and these represent corresponding rates per 100,000 population of 2·60 and 2·66.

Birth Statistics

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the numbers of children born to unmarried mothers in each year since 1965 in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland, expressed (i) in figures and (ii) as a percentage of all live births.

Mr. Whitney: The available statistics for Scotland, England, Wales and Northern Ireland relate to births which were registered as illegitimate and are as follows.

Year of birth	Number of live births registered as illegitimate				Percentage of live births registered as illegitimate
	Scotland	England	Wales	Northern Ireland	Scotland	England	Wales	Northern Ireland

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the percentage cumulative growth of National Health Service expenditure each year since 1979 (a) in retail price index terms, (b) in terms of National Health Service pay and prices and (c) after taking account of the annually growing demand for health services; if he will give actual expenditure figures each year both in current and constant price terms in accordance with each of these three criteria; and if he will state the level of planned expenditure savings each year, both in current and constant price terms, together with the evidence on which these expenditure savings claims are based.

Mr. Hayhoe: I will let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Social Security Bill (Actuary's Report)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in the Government Actuary's report to the Social Security Bill 1986, Cmnd.9711, in table 5, page 14, what would be the estimated joint rates of contributions for each of the years stated if the assumptions included: (a) forecast growth of the economy of three per cent. per year, (b) growth in real earnings of three per cent. per year or (c) both these assumptions, whilst other assumptions in each case remained the same.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Pensions and Benefits

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the annual cost of providing (a) unemployment benefit, (b) sickness and invalidity benefit, (c) retirement pensions and (d) widows' benefit at a level equivalent to the current adult supplementary benefit scale rate, excluding housing costs, for all adults currently claiming these benefits whose income is below the supplementary benefit scale rate level but who are not currently claiming supplementary benefit; how many individuals are involved in each case; and what would be the annual cost in respect of unemployment benefit if unemployment fell to, respectively, 3, 2½, 2, 1½ and 1 million.

Mr. Newton: The information is not available to provide detailed costings, and even the production of illustrative figures would take substantial time and be disproportionately costly.

Venereal Diseases

Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what statistics are available to him as to the national incidence of venereal diseases amongst persons aged between 15 and 20 years of age; and what trend they show;

(2) what is the current trend of the nationwide incidence of venereal diseases.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

War Pensions

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to the answer of 3 February, regarding disregard on war pensions, he will list those branches of the Royal British Legion which can readily be identified as having made representations on the subject; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Maternity Units

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report his Department's guidelines for the size of maternity units in teaching hospitals in terms of the number of live births each year.

Mr. Whitney: The Department has not issued such guidance. It is for health authorities to determine the size of maternity units needed to meet local demand. In doing so, factors such as the anticipated number of births, and the number of mothers and babies likely to require specialist care and facilities, will be taken into account.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the number of live births in each maternity unit in 1983, 1984 and 1985, respectively, indicating which of those units are located in teaching hospitals.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have such information as can be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost as soon as possible.

NHS Employees

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the number and rate per 1,000 claimants of people who received single payments (a) nationally, (b) in each social security region, and (c) in each standard economic planning region for each year 1979 and to the latest available date in 1985 with the average payment and what proportion were (i) pensioners, (ii) families with children.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his rely, 19 December 1985, c. 321-22]: It is not possible to provide the precise information requested since data are available only for social security regions and nationally. The following table sets out the available information for the calendar years 1979-1985. Normally the data collected are not analysed by reference to families with children, but a special analysis of the data in the 1983 annual statistical inquiry showed that of families with children one-third had received a single payment in the previous 12 months.

Notes:

1. The figures in columns (2), (4) and (5) are calculated from information collected by the Management Information System (MIS) which is a 100 per cent. of all single payment awards.

Column 2—the basis on which the figures are recorded was altered in April 1984. Previously a payment covering items under different regulations was counted as one award. Now an award is counted in respect of each regulation used.

Column 5—the MIS returns give separate figures for those over pension age but do not give a breakdown for families with children.

2. Column (3) is calculated by dividing the figures in column (2) by the number of claimants recorded in the August Quarterly Enquiry for each year. Figures for 1985 August Quarterly Enquiry are not yet available.

3. The 1982 regional breakdown is not given; during that year the regions were re-organised and reduced from 12 to 7, and comparable figures on a regional basis could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his reply on 17 January, Official Report, column 746, he will publish a similar table showing the total weekly pensions assuming no change in the state earnings-related pension scheme, annual increases in the basic pension in line with average earnings, and that earnings increase in real terms by 1½ per cent. a year.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 5 February 1986, c. 197-8]: The following table gives the information requested. Amounts illustrated are total weekly state basic and earnings-related pensions assuming no change in the present earnings-related scheme and that basic pensions were increased in line with earnings from November 1985 onwards. As the hon. Member will be aware from the report by the Government Actuary on the financial effects of the Bill on the national insurance fund (Cmnd. 9711), on the same assumptions such pensions would require a combined contribution rate of 27·3 per cent. in 2033-34, compared with a notional rate of 15·7 per cent. in 1986-87.

* Amounts were not shown for these cases in tables P5 and P6 of the Technical Annex.

Since my previous reply to the hon. Member on 17 January at column 746, four minor errors in the accounts of the assumptions used in the tables, on pages 1 and 2 of the technical annex, have come to light, as follows:

Table P3
"Middle earner" and "high earner": 25 years and 15 years should read 26 and 14 respectively.

Table P4
"Low earner": 12 years should read 10.

"3¼ per cent." should read "3¾ per cent."

The projections in the technical annex, those in my reply of 17 January and in this reply are based on the assumptions as explained in pages 1 and 2 of the technical annex, amended as above.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Horses, Ponies and Donkeys

66. Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received on the practice of abandonment of horses, ponies and donkeys on wasteland.

Mr. Mellor: Since the beginning of 1985 the Government have received 27 letters on this subject from hon. and right hon. Members and 14 from members of the public.

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by his Department with grant aid in the last financial year for which figures are available, and the size of the grant so given.

Mr. Douglas Hurd: The Home Office made the following grants to voluntary organisations in the financial year 1984-85.

Criminal Department also made grants for some 350 hostels and similar accommodation schemes, administered by voluntary organisations in which places are provided for offenders; and one-off grants to voluntary organisations providing day facilities and other services. In 1984-85 these grants totalled £4,481,577.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations, and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available.

Mr. Hurd: The agencies concerned are the Commission for Racial Equality and the Equal Opportunities Commission. In 1984-85 the CRE made grants to voluntary bodies of £3·828 million and the EOC made grants to voluntary bodies of £56,000.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

Mr. Hurd: It is the clearly stated policy of the Home Office, the Commission for Racial Equality and the Equal Opportunities Commission that grants cannot be given to voluntary bodies and organisations for political purposes. Grants are monitored to confirm that money is spent for the purposes for which it is made available.

Reward Payments

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis which lists for each year since 1980 all reward payments above £5,000; and whether any individual in this category has received more than one reward payment.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis tells me that no reward payment of more than £5,000 has been made by the Metropolitan police from public funds in any year since 1980. On occasion, in order to maintain the confidentiality of informants, the Metropolitan police also facilitate the payment of rewards offered by private institutions such as insurance companies, banks, etc. It is not the practice of the Metropolitan police to release details of any reward payments.

Criminal Injuries (Compensation)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been paid out in each of the past five years by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board to someone subsequently found guilty of a criminal offence.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not available; but in considering whether to make an award and, if so, of what amount, the board takes account of the applicant's character and way of life, and of his conduct before, during or after the events giving rise to the claims.

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been paid out by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board in each of the past five years.

Mr. Mellor: The informaton requested is supplied in he table:

Year	Compensation paid £
1980-81	21,462,464
1981-82	21,976,696
1982-83	29,444,675
1983-84	32,820,772

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been paid out to injured police officers by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board in each of the past five years.

Mr. Mellor: Information about the amount of compensation paid to police officers (as distinct from the number of cases in which awards were made to them) in respect of injuries incurred in the course of their duties is available, following a special monitoring exercise, only for four months from 4 June to 3 October 1984. During that period a total of about £568,000 was paid in compensation to 484 police officers.

Martina Anderson and Ella O'Dwyer

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions and on what dates in November 1985 (a) Martina Anderson, and (b) Ella O'Dwyer were subjected to strip searches in Brixton prison.

Mr. Mellor: My noble Friend is writing to the hon. Member.

Prisons

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any plans to bring Her Majesty's prison department establishments under the public health regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: No. The primary responsibility for supervising hygiene standards in prison service establishments rests with the medical officers based at each establishment, who may call on the advice of environmental health officers as required. We see no need to alter these arrangements.

Police Manpower

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report the applications he has received from police authorities in England for additional manpower in respect of 1986-87 and the increases in establishment which he has approved to date.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I refer my hon. Friend to the replies given to questions by my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Bruinvels) on 13 January 1986 at column 456, and by my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson) and my hon. and learned Friend for Leicester, South (Mr. Spencer) on 23 January 1986 at column 272, for information about the applications received from police authorities for increases in their police establishments for the financial year 1985-86 or later, and the seven police authorities which have recently been informed that the Home Secretary is prepared to approve additional posts.

Prisoners (Disclosure of Information)

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if it is the practice of the prison service to disclose in response to inquiries from third parties whether a named individual is serving a prison sentence and the prison at which the sentence is being served.

Mr. Mellor: Information about individual inmates is not normally given to third parties without the consent of the inmate concerned. If my hon. Friend has a particular case in mind, perhaps he would let me have details and I will look into it.

Passports (False Documentation)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of false birth certificates produced by applicants for passports for the most recent period of 12 months for which figures are available.

Mr. Waddington: 175 cases were detected in the 11 months from March 1985 to January 1986, the fullest period for which information is available.

Stop Orders

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations about stop orders or deportation he received from right hon. and hon. Members in 1985 and each of the previous 10 years; how many of these were made in writing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The available information concerns the number of passengers on whose behalf hon. and right hon. Members have made representations against a decision to refuse entry, and is shown in the table:

	Numbers
1983	2,518
1985	5,694

Comparable figures are not available for earlier years, but the number of representations in this category were running at about 1,000 a year from 1980 to 1982.

Leeds

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department which new applications for funding of posts in Leeds under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966, made between April and October 1985, were allowed and which were not.

Mr. Waddington: The posts for which funding was agreed in this period were:

2 Community Development Officers
1 Employment Liaison Officer
1 Environmental Health Education Officer
4 Equal Opportunity Training Officers
1 Monitoring Assistant and 1 Clerical Assistant (for the Council's Employment Policy)
1 Neighbourhood Social Worker
2 Peripatetic Music Teachers
4 Social Welfare Officers

The posts for which funding was refused were:

1 Co-ordinator and 1 Warden for a housing association
1 Social Worker
1 Officer-in-charge and Nursery Officer for a community nursery
1 Assistant Cook and 6 Supervisory Assistants

In addition, an application made in respect of one post in October 1985 has not yet been determined.

Immigration

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide detailed figures for the past five years for the number of immigration appeals against the refusal for leave to enter which was successful under the Immigration Act 1971; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: Information provided by the Immigration Appeals Secretariat on appeals against the refusal of leave to enter at ports of entry is given in the following table:

Appeals against refusal of leave to enter at ports of entry allowed and dismissed, 1981-1985

	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985

Dogfighting

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many charges have been brought following illegal dogfighting in the north-west; in how many of those cases the accused was convicted; and what was the average custodial sentence in such cases.

Mr. Mellor: Information collected centrally does not distinguish offences relating to dog fights from other offences under the Protection of Animals Act 1911.

Race Relations

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of racial harassment have been recorded in each police district in the Metropolitan police area by year since 1983.

Mr. Mellor: The term "racial harassment" has no standard definition and no figures are available for it. I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the information on recorded racial incidents by police district is as given in the following table. The changes may reflect changes in the extent of recording rather than changes in the numbers of incidents occurring.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of reported racial incidents in the Metropolitan police area for each year since 1983, by type of incident, the number of arrests and the number of subsequent convictions.

Mr. Mellor: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the available information is as given in the following table. Information on convictions following racial incidents is not available.

Racial incidents recorded in the Metropolitan police district by type of incident

Metropolitan Police (Specialist Squads)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give a breakdown by rank of those members of the following Metropolitan police specialist squads: central drugs squad, anti-terrorist branch, City police fraud branch, royalty and diplomatic protection department, serious crimes branch, central robbery squad, regional crime squad, criminal intelligence department, special branch, central information unit, national drugs intelligence unit and national identification branch.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information asked for in respect of the central information unit, the national drugs intelligence unit and the national identification bureau is given in the attached table. The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis considers that to give similar information about the other squads and units listed might compromise their operational effectiveness.

Community Radio

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report his reasons for the oversight of community radio, particularly in respect of political balance, for the two-year experimental period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Community radio is being established on an experimental basis, and we shall therefore want to undertake research into its output and impact with a view to taking informed decisions about its future. In addition, as the experimental stations will broadcast under licences issued by the Department, the question of their adherence to the conditions of their licences will be my right hon. Friend's responsibility. However, as the published guidance notes for prospective licensees make clear, there will be no obligation on them to balance programmes expressing political points of view.

SCOTLAND

Crown Immunity

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the review of Crown immunity in respect of hospital kitchens in Scotland has been completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: Yes. I have concluded that the existence of Crown immunity from the food hygiene provisions of the Food and Drugs (Scotland) Act 1956 in hospital kitchens is a factor which can have the effect of detracting from the responsibility of those most directly in a position to control the hygienic preparation of food.

I share the conclusion of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services that stronger safeguards are needed to underpin management efforts and to protect the patients. Accordingly legislation to be introduced in the present Session will be applied in Scotland to remove Crown immunity from hospital catering in respect of the Food Hygiene Regulations by making health authorities subject to the relevant provisions of legislation dealing with food.

Strengthened guidance will be given to the Health Service on measures to ensure high food hygiene standards. The Government are determined to spare no effort to secure the highest standards of food hygiene in hospitals.

Lothian Health Board

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the answer of 25 November, Official Report, columns 429-32, if he will make a statement concerning the £28,774 written off as bad debts by the Lothian health board in 1984-85.

Mr. John MacKay: The sum written off represents £24,634 in respect of debts dating from 1975 of overseas visitors treated in hospitals in the health board area and £4,140 due by private patients which remained unpaid despite repeated efforts to effect recovery. In all cases it is no longer considered cost-effective to continue to pursue recovery. Guidance issued since 1981 advises health boards to seek deposits in line with estimated treatment costs to avoid bad debts arising, and I am satisfied that this is now the practice.

Boards of Governors

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland to whom chairmen of boards of governors of colleges of education in Scotland are responsible for the actions taken by them.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Latent Damage

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he plans to review the law on latent damage, particularly in buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: I am aware of the concern expressed in Scotland about the existing law and of the decision to legislate for England and Wales in the light of the Law Reform Committee's report on latent damage.

In Scotland, time limits on actions arising as a result of latent damage are governed by the law on prescription and limitation. My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate has Ministerial responsibility for changes in that law and he has invited the Scottish Law Commission to consider the problems which arise and to report to him with their recommendations. The commission has agreed to do so.

Scottish Health Service

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has received requests for further consultation following the consultative letter on general management at unit level in the Scottish Health Service issued by the Scottish Home and Health Department on 8 July 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: More than 60 comments have been received in response to the Department's letter. A number of health boards and several of the professional organisations requested further opportunities for comment following the conclusion of the study of unit management which the Department commissioned from Coopers and Lybrand Associates.

In order to give those who will be most effected by future developments in general management a further opportunity to discuss and contribute to those developments, I have decided that it would be useful to have a further period of consultation. When the Coopers and Lybrand study is concluded, the Scottish Home and Health Department will prepare and issue for comment a draft circular of guidance on the development of unit general management. This will be based on the report of the Coopers and Lybrand study and on the responses to the consultative letter of 8 July 1985. A summary of the main findings, conclusions and recommendations from the Coopers and Lybrand study, prepared by the company, will accompany the draft circular. The full report of the study will not be an appropriate document for public consultation as it will contain material confidential to the four health boards which are participating in the study. I expect the draft circular and summary to be issued for comment in early May and, in order to avoid unnecessary delay and uncertainty about future developments, comments will be requested by mid July.

Ministers will consider the results of this further consultation in the course of the summer and final guidance on general management at unit level will be issued in time for health boards to plan implementation following the holiday period.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Ms. Harman asked the Paymaster General if he will estimate how many building workers in the London borough of Southwark are unemployed.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not available.

Data on the occupations of the unemployed are derived from the labour force survey, and cannot be provided for areas smaller than regions.

Crown Notices

Mr. Richard Shepherd asked the Paymaster General how many Crown notices have been served by inspectors of factories in each of the last five years; and how many instances have been recorded of failure to comply with a Crown notice over the same period.

Mr. Trippier: The figures are as follows:

	1981	1982	1983	1984
Number of Crown notices served	82	90	53	49
Number complied with	80	81	51	44
Number not complied with by due date	nil	nil	nil	nil

	1981	1982	1983	1984
Number of notices where the time limit has not expired, has been extended or where the circumstances have changed	2	9	2	5

The figures for 1985 are not yet available.

Mr. Richard Shepherd asked the Paymaster General if he is satisfied with the operation of the Crown notice system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The chairman of the Health and Safety Commission wrote to my right hon. and noble Friend on 23 September 1985 expressing the Commission's continuing concern about the different sanctions applying to Crown and non-Crown bodies under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act. It wished to give further consideration to certain aspects of the matter. I await its advice.

Clothing Industry

Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on his Department's study of clothing industry employment.

Mr. Trippier: My Department's employment market research unit has recently issued an appraisal replying to criticisms of its report made by researchers at the Department of Applied Economics, Cambridge. A copy has been placed in the Library.

PRIME MINISTER

Nuclear Weapons

Q34. Mr. Foot asked the Prime Minister if she will set up an inquiry into health and safety in the United Kingdom's nuclear weapons industry.

The Prime Minister: No. Nuclear weapons development and production facilities are subject to health and safety standards which are at least as rigorous as those applied to any similar industry. Achievement of these standards is confirmed by regular monitoring and by independent inspection by the appropriate regulatory and environmental authorities. While I am aware that certain suggestions have been made in regard to health and safety in this area, I have seen no soundly based scientific evidence to support such views.

EC (Food Exports)

Q85. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the effect on the economies of the Soviet Union and East Europe of the Community's policy of providing subsidised food to these countries.

The Prime Minister: If it seems appropriate to raise the common agricultural policy at the next meeting of the European Council, I shall bear in mind the aspect to which my hon. Friend refers.

Engagements

Mr. Foulkes asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 February.

Mr. Flannery asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 February.

Mr. Stern asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 February.

Mr. Dubs asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 February.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 February.

Mr. Yeo asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 February.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 February.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 6 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Westland plc

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister whether any attempt was made by the Cabinet Office to find out if Ministers would be available for a meeting to discuss Westland plc on the afternoon of Friday 13 December.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my speech in the House on 15 January at column 1094.

Crimes of Violence

Mr. Terlezki asked the Prime Minister if she will seek to discuss at the earliest possible opportunity with the President of the United States of America and others the formation of a multinational unit to counter politically motivated crimes of violence.

The Prime Minister: There is already extensive international co-operation against terrorism and frequent discussions with our allies. However, for operational and legal reasons, defence against a particular terrorist attack must remain a national responsibility.

Unemployment (Costs)

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Prime Minister if she will state the latest figures for the overall cost of (a) unemployment benefits, together with all other social security payments to the unemployed, (b) central Government training programmes designed to reduce unemployment, (c) central Government payments to industry designed to reduce unemployment, and (d) the combined total of such expenditure.

The Prime Minister: The overall cost of social security benefits to the unemployed in 1985-86 is estimated to be about £6,800 million.

Central Government expenditure on training programmes both for adults and for young people has as its prime objective the promotion of competitiveness through improving the skills of the work force. It is estimated to be about £1,060 million in 1985-86.

Central Government expenditure specifically directed towards reducing unemployment is incurred via the Department of Employment's employment measures.

Expenditure on these is estimated to be about £1,050 million in 1985-86. Of this, about £30 million is expected to be paid to industry principally via the young workers scheme.

Given the different purposes for which this expenditure is incurred, it would be misleading to aggregate these figures.

Public Sector Employees

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Prime Minister if she will state the total number of (a) civil servants and (b) all other public sector employees in each of the years 1979 and 1985, giving in each case the percentage decrease and the combined percentage decrease since 1979.

The Prime Minister: The United Kingdom figures (thousands) on a full-time equivalents basis are as follows:

Mid-year	Civil Service	Other public sector
		Actual	Excluding corporations subsequently privatised
1979	724	5,863	5,483
1980	700	5,845	5,460
1981	684	5,707	5,405
1982	659	5,547	5,276

Between 1979 and 1985 there was a fall in employment in the Civil Service of 18 per cent. and in the rest of the public sector of 14 per cent.; total public sector employment fell by 14 per cent. Excluding the effects on employment levels of companies privatised there was a fall in employment in the rest of the public sector of 8 per cent. and in the total public sector of 9 per cent.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the decision to proceed with a rail-only fixed link across the Channel.

Mr. David Mitchell: Since 20 January we have received a small number of letters about the fixed link, the majority from people who oppose the decision to proceed.

BR (Capital Investment)

Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Transport how much capital investment has been approved for British Rail in each year from 1974 to date.

Mr. David Mitchell: The Government have given specific approval for investment projects worth the following amounts in each year since May 1979 (comparable details are not readily available for the earlier years):

Year	Investments Approved (£ million) at 1985-86 prices
1979	27
1980	—
1981	70
1982	57
1983	87
1984	450
1985	257

BR now holds forward approval for £1,200 million worth of projects out of the £2 billion programme included in its 1985 five-year corporate plan.

Motor Cars (Spare Wheels)

Mr. Conlan asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the report of the Office of Fair Trading on non-standard motor car spare wheels.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department of Trade and Industry is responsible for publishing reports made by the Office of Fair Trading. The office tells me that it has not prepared such a report.

Motor Cyclists

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representations he has received from bodies representing motor cycling interests about aspects of existing legislation affecting motor cyclists, especially learners; and what assessment he makes of the extent of correlation between the existence of legislative controls and the level of sales of new motor cycles;

(2) what information he has as to the impact of legislation concerning learner motor cyclists on the level of sales of new motor cycles; what representations the motor cycle trade has made about existing legislation affecting motor cyclists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There is regular contact between the Department and the principal bodies representing the motor cycle industry and riders, in the course of which their views on existing legislation have been made clear. We have also received comments from a large number of individuals.

The views of interested organisations and individuals are being taken into account during our current review of motor cycle licensing, training and testing.

I am not aware of any satisfactory evidence to suggest that legislative measures have had more than marginal effect on the overall levels of motor cycle sales.

Air Travel Reserve Fund

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to wind up the air travel reserve fund and to dissolve the agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friend has today laid an order before the House under section 6 of the Air Travel Reserve Fund Act 1975. The order provides for the fund to be wound up on 27 February and for the assets in it to be transferred to the trustees of the Air Travel Trust. Copies of the trust deed have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

The agency itself will be dissolved on 30 June. In the period from 27 February until its dissolution the agency will prepare a statement of accounts and a report on its last year of operations.

The fund currently stands at over £20 million and the trust deed allows the trustees to supplement that with insurance, which it is doubtful that the agency would have been able to do. The new arrangements will also streamline the system, ensuring faster pay-outs and greater discretion in dealing with claims.

With more people going on air package holidays this summer, they can do so safe in the knowledge that financially they are well protected against an operator's collapse.

Roads (Lighting and Signs)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many miles of the M4 motorway between London and Pont Abraham are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(2) how many miles of the M5 motorway between Birmingham and Exeter are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(3) how many miles of the M3 motorway between London and Southampton are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(4) how many miles of the M2 motorway between Rochester and Faversham are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(5) how many miles of the M62 motorway between Liverpool and Wakefield are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(6) how many miles of the M62 motorway between Hull and Wakefield are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(7) if his Department intends to carry out any electrification work on the unlit section of the M1 motorway between junctions 26 to 29;

(8) if his Department intends to carry out any electrification work on the unlit section of the M1 motorway between Newport Pagnell and junction 18;

(9) if his Department intends to carry out any electrification work on the unlit section of the M1 motorway between junction 17 and junction 24;

(10) how many miles of the M6 motorway between Rugby and Carlisle are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(11) how many miles of the M26 between Sevenoaks and Wrotham heath are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(12) how many miles of the M27 between Cadnam and Portsmouth are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(13) how many miles of the M25 orbital motorway are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(14) how many miles of the M32 between Bristol and Parkway are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(15) how many miles of the M40 between Denham and Oxford are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(16) how many miles of the M10-St. Albans bypass are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(17) how many miles of the M11 between London and Cambridge are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(18) how many miles of the M18 between Rotherham and Goole are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(19) how many miles of the M20 between London and Folkestone are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections;

(20) how many miles of the M23 between Hooley and Pease Pottage are unlit; and if he will list the unlit sections.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to his reply, 19 December 1985, c. 296-7]: Some information sought by the right hon. Gentleman has subsequently become available and I am able to provide this within the cost ceiling to which I must have regard. The information now available is as follows:

Between London and Pont Abraham 87 miles of the M4 are unlit in England.
Between Birmingham and Exeter 115 miles of the M5 are unlit.
Between London and Southampton 48 miles of the M3 are unlit.
Between Rochester and Faversham 25 miles of the M2 are unlit.
Between Liverpool and Wakefield 21·3 miles of the M62 are unlit.
Between Hull and Wakefield 36·3 miles of the M62 are unlit.
Between Rugby and Carlisle 168 miles of the M6 are unlit.
Between Sevenoaks and Wrotham Heath 9·3 miles of the M26 are unlit.
Between Cadnam and Portsmouth 28 miles of the M27 are unlit.
52 miles of the M25 are unlit
The M32 is the responsibility of Avon County Council.
Between Denham and Oxford 27 miles of the M40 are unlit.
The entire 3 miles length of the M10-St. Albans by-pass are unlit.
Between London and Cambridge 45 mile of the M11 are unlit.
Between Rotherham and Goole 25·3 miles of the M18 are unlit.
Between London and Folkestone 36·3 miles of the M20 are unlit.
Between Hooley and Pease Pottage 16 miles of the M23 are unlit.

The need for electrification works on motorways is kept under review by my Department. Plans presently exist to install further lighting on the M1 between Newport Pagnell and junction 16.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Meetings

Mr. Bowen Wells asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the regular meetings which he expects to attend or be represented at in 1986 of the United Nations, the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development and its DAC committee FCO international fund for agricultural developments, the World Health Organisation, the European Economic Community and the EPF.

Mr. Eggar: I shall write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Western European Union

Mr. Coleman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards Portugal's application for membership of Western European Union; and if he will make a statement;

(2) why a decision has not been taken by the Western European Union on Portugal's application for membership; when a decision is expected to be taken; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards enlargement of the Western European Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The question of the possible enlargement of the WEU is currently under consideration. Ministers agreed at Bonn on 22-23 April 1985 that, once the process of reactivating and reorganising the WEU had been completed, the Council should consider the principles which should govern possible WEU enlargement. The Council would then, on the basis of these general principles, consider individual cases, particularly that of Portugal which applied for membership in October 1984.

Mr. Coleman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what approaches have been received by the Western European Union from Spain about possible Spanish membership of the organisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Spain has not applied to join the WEU.

Mr. Coleman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who is the representative of the United Kingdom on the Western European Union public administration committee.

Mr. Eggar: The United Kingdom is represented on the Western European Union public administration committee by a Home Civil Service principal grade officer in the Cabinet Office (Management and Personnel Office).

Mr. Coleman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has held with the Spanish Government covering possible Spanish membership of the Western European Union.

Mr. Eggar: None.

Mr. Coleman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what specific measures the Government are promoting to seek to improve public information about the Western European Union Council and about the other organs of the Western European Union; and what measures are currently being taken by the Western European Union in this direction.

Mr. Eggar: The Government maintain contact with representatives of the media, academic life, and members of Parliament to inform them about the activities of the WEU and its Council. Ministers regularly address the six-monthly sessions of the WEU assembly in Paris. As part of the process of reorganising WEU institutions a new post has been created in the WEU secretariat in London with responsibility for public relations and information. The Government support this initiative, and other publicity activities of the WEU.

Mr. Coleman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the budgetary implications of the measures which have been taken, and of those which are being taken, to reinvigorate the Western European Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The measures agreed by the Council of the Western European Union to reinvigorate the organisation have been undertaken with respect for existing budgetary limits. It is the Government's policy, and the policy of many of our allies, to maintain zero real growth in the administrative budgets of international organisations, inclusive of pensions.

Mr. Coleman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwelath Affairs what new agencies have been established by the Western European Union since the Rome declaration of October 1984; what relationship is envisaged between these agencies and the Standing Armaments Committee and Agency for the Control of Armaments; and what relationship is envisaged between the new agencies and the Assembly of the Western European Union, and between the new agencies and the council.

Mr. Eggar: WEU Ministers decided at Bonn in April 1985 that three new agencies of the Western European Union should be established. They were:

i) the agency for the study of arms control and disarmament questions;

ii) The agency for the study of security and defence questions;

iii) The agency for the development of co-operation in the field of armaments.

These agencies were established with effect from 1 January 1986.

The director of agency I has a dual capacity as director for the agency for the control of armaments; his deput in that capacity is a member of the staff of agency I.

The role of WEU in armaments co-operation is to help provide the necessary political impetus for, and practical contribution to, the various efforts undertaken in this field, incuding those carried out by the independent European programme group, the main forum for European equipment co-operation, and the conference of national armaments directors. The standing armaments committee will help ensure that the work of agency III is fully co-ordinated with the activities of theses other organisations.

The new agencies will be responsible to the WEU Secretary-General in London and, through him, to the WEU Council. The Council will maintain overall control of the agencies' word programmes. The Council considers that the agencies should provide technical assistance to the assembly on a case-by-case basis and in conformity with criteria to be agreed in the light of individual requests.

Mr. Coleman asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what new posts have been created within the Secretariat-General of the Western European Union and within other organs of the Western European Union since the Rome declaration of October 1984; what responsibilities and salaries these posts carry; which of them have been filled and by whom; by what means new staff are being recruited; and what steps are being taken to keep (a) Parliament and *(b)*the assembly of the Western European Union, informed of such developments occurring in the course of the Western European Union reinvigoration process.

Mr. Eggar: I am arranging for the detailed information requested on posts to be assembled and to be published in the Official Report as soon as possible. Information about developments arising from WEU reactivation is reported regularly by the Council and Secretary General to the WEU assembly, British members of which are drawn from Parliament.

Engagements

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list his engagements for the afternoon of 13 December stating on which date each engagement was arranged.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I went from a meeting of the North Atlantic Council via Gatwick to Chevening.

Cash Limits

Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he proposes to make any further changes to his Department's cash limits for 1985-86.

Mr. Eggar: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the cash limit for Class II, Vote 1 (Overseas Representation, Diplomatic, Consular and other Foreign and Commonwealth Services) will be increased by £5,155,000 from £384,277,000 to £389,432,000 and the cash limit for Vote 4 (British Council) will be increased by £1,645,000 from £48,459,000 to £50,104,000. The increases in both cases take account of unavoidable increased costs net of offsetting savings. The increase will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

WALES

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by his Department with grant aid in the last financial year for which figures are available, and the size of the grant so given.

In addition, a large number of payments amounting to £1,241,700, were made to voluntary education bodies in 1984-85 under the provisions of the Education Acts 1944 and 1980. To list payments to individual bodies and to distinguish between payments made under each Act would involve disproportionate costs.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant aid who in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations, and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The non-departmental public bodies in Wales for which we are responsible which provide financial support for voluntary bodies are listed as follows:

Government Funding 1984-85

	£ million
Cwmbran Development Corporation	4·006
Development Board for Rural Wales	8·974
Sports Council for Wales	2·852
Wales Tourist Board	6·365
Welsh Development Agency	40·900

Source: "Public Bodies 1985".

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Grants to voluntary organisations are made for specific purposes, and are monitored to ensure that they are used for these purposes. Grants are not available to support party political activity.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in the Official Report, for the last 10 years for which figures are available, the amounts of money paid by his Department, whether directly or indirectly through some other agency, to organisations and bodies working in the field of health education, detailing the organisations and bodies concerned, the amounts they received and the method of payment.

Land Reclamation

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Wales what the total acreage of derelict land in Wales was in (i) 1975 and (ii) 1985, or the last year for which figures are available; and what the total acreage of derelict land within those figures is attributable to coal mining activities.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: A survey of derelict land in Wales was carried out in 1972 and this identified 34,000 acres of derelict land of which about 50 per cent. was thought to be attributable to coal mining activities. The latest estimate by the Welsh Development Agency, taking account of land reclaimed and new dereliction, is that these figures are still broadly accurate.

Russian Teaching

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Wales in how many schools in Wales Russian is taught.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information supplied by the Welsh joint education committee indicates that there were six schools in Wales where Russian was examined as a GCE subject in the summer of 1985.

Departmental Staff (Equality)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he takes to satisfy himself that there is equality of opportunity for both sexes in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: An equal opportunities officer has been designated within my Department's personnel management division. The officer has responsibility for advising senior management on the application and monitoring of the Civil Service policy on non-discrimination. The officer also provides advice on the implementation of the programme of action on equal opportunities recommended by the joint review group of the Civil Service National Whitley Council's joint personnel management committee.

Task Forces

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to set up a task force in Cardiff to tackle urban decay; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Urban redevelopment in Cardiff is being pursued in a vigorous and concerted way by the local authorities and the private sector with substantial encouragement and support from our Department and other bodies. I have no plans to set up a special task force in Cardiff.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to set up a task force to tackle urban and environmental blight in Mid-Glamorgan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I fully recognise the urban and environmental problems of Mid-Glamorgan and these were taken into account in allocating to that county almost 25 per cent. of the Department's urban programme resources for 1986-87. The Welsh Development Agency is also pursuing an active programme of land reclamation and environmental improvement in the county. The Department works closely with the agency and the local authorities, but I have under continual review the question of improved co-ordination.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has conducted any studies to establish why cervical cancer incidence was some 11 per cent. higher in Wales than in the United Kingdom as a whole between 1979 and 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Whilst in Wales the incidence of cervical cancer was recorded as being higher than the United Kingdom as a whole between 1979 and 1983, in the same period comparable English standard regions such as the northern region, Yorkshire and Humberside and the north-west recorded a higher rate. Although there are no plans for a special Welsh study, account is taken of the ongoing research into this form of cancer.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to facilitate a decline in the incidence of cervical cancer in Wales; and how much he estimates will need to be spent by his Department to implement the recommendations of his Department's working party in this matter.

Mr. Mark Robinson: We are taking steps to reduce the incidence of death from this disease through screening women in the groups at risk. Early detection is important as the disease is amenable to treatment if diagnosed in the early stages. The joint NHS/Welsh Office working party reported last August and recommended ways in which the administration of this service could be improved. The screening service is managed on a district basis and its funding is the responsibility of the health authority concerned. The Welsh Office is funding the provision of computers for all the family practitioner committees in Wales and this will facilitate the administration of the scheme. It is anticipated that all FPC computers will be operational by the autumn. £400,000 is being earmarked for 1986-87 for centrally funding development of cancer screening services.

The Department is separately considering a bid by South Glamorgan health authority for the allocation of centrally funded development money to improve training facilities for medical laboratory staff, which could benefit the whole of Wales.

ENVIRONMENT

Liverpool Ice Rink

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the future of Liverpool ice rink.

Mr. John Patten: Since the Liverpool ice rink is a privately owned company, any decisions on future operations should rest primarily with the owner. However, I recognise that a decline in attendances over recent years has led to the ice rink becoming increasingly dependent on public sector financial support. In addition to £300,000 provided by my Department and the Sports Council in capital grants to improve the facility, urban programme support has been given in partnership with Merseyside county council in the form of a £35,000 bank loan guarantee and grants to offset revenue deficit including a monthly grant of £7,000 currently.

Such funding will cease on the abolition of Merseyside county council since Liverpool city council has so far not indicated an intention to take over any financial assistance, and my Department does not have the powers to maintain urban programme support in the absence of a sponsoring local authority. However, I understand the owner is currently seeking an opportunity to discuss the future of the ice rink with Liverpool city council.

Local Authorities (Lost Revenue)

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to how much revenue was lost by local authorities in 1984-85 by defaulting tenants failing to pay rents.

Mr. John Patten: Provisional figures indicate that about £200 million in rent (excluding the rates and service charges elements) was owed by tenants to local authorities for the 1984-85 financial year. A substantial proportion of this is unlikely to be recovered. Details of local authority rent arrears will be placed in the Library shortly.

Flats (Freehold)

Mrs. Roe asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to give residents of blocks of flats the first right to refusal when the landlord wishes to sell the freehold.

Mr. John Patten: A right of first refusal for residents of blocks of flats if the landlord wishes to sell the freehold is one of the recommendations in the report of the Nugee committee on the management of privately owned blocks of flats. We are considering this and the committee's other recommendations as a matter of urgency, and I will announce the Government's conclusions as quickly as possible.

Dog Licences

Miss Fookes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest figure for the administrative cost of collecting dog licence fees; and how this compares with total receipts.

Mrs. Rumbold: The total amount to be paid by my Department to the Post Office in respect of the costs of issuing dog licences in 1985-86 is £3·5 million. The revenue raised from dog licences is expected to be about £900,000.

Local Authorities (Capital Receipts)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total amount of money held by local authorities in capital receipts; and how much is held by each authority.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is estimated that at the end of 1984-85 local authorities in England held about £5·8 billion of accumulated capital receipts which, subject to the relevant prescribed proportions, give rise to spending permission under the capital control system. Not all of this total is backed by cash; some of the cash has been used for purposes, such as debt repayment, which do not extinguish the spending permission. Figures for the accumulated receipts of individual local authorities are not available centrally but the Department is currently undertaking an exercise to collect them.

Hedgerows and Amenity Woodlands

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to encourage farmers to leave strips of unploughed land under and around hegerows; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: It is Government policy to encourage farmers to adopt all sensible measures to assist in conservation of the countryside.

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking to encourage preservation and plantation of hedgerows and amenity woodlands.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Countryside Commission, the Nature Conservancy Council, the Forestry Commission, the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service and local authorities encourage preservation and plantation of hedgerows and amenity woodlands. The Department works with these bodies to this end. Encouragement is provided by such means as grant-aid, advisers, demonstration farms, and pamphlets. Last year, the Forestry Commission launched a new scheme to encourage the planting and rehabilitation of broadleaved woodlands. The Department provides financial and other support to the Tree Council, which itself promotes the planting and care of amenity trees, and sponsors an arboricultural research programme.

THE ARTS

Museums and Art Galleries (Funding)

Mr. Adley asked the Minister for the Arts if he will list, for all those museums and art galleries in receipt of central Government funds, the total central Government funding for each of the last five years for which figures are available together with his assessment of the relevant figures for the current year.

Mr. Luce: Voted net expenditure from the arts and libraries programme on the 11 museums and galleries for which I am directly responsible totalled as follows:

Year	£ million cash outturn
1981-82	62·806
1982-83	73·584
1983-84	76·560
1984-85	83·095

* estimated.

These figures include provision where applicable for purchase grants, for other net running costs, and for the building and maintenance programme undertaken by the Property Services Agency. For the years up to 1984-85, they also include funding of the local museum purchase grant schemes, responsibility for which was transferred from the Victoria and Albert and Science museums to the Museums and Galleries Commission in 1985-86.

Export Licences

Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts whether a press notice was issued from the Office of Arts and Libraries on 22 January publicising the information in his reply to the hon. Member for Warley, East on 22 January, Official Report, column 208, relating to the suspension over a half-year period of licences for the export of works of art.

Mr. Luce: A press notice publicising the information contained in my reply to the hon. Member on 22 January was issued by the Office of Arts and Libraries on 22 January.

Liverpool Empire and Philharmonic Hall

Mr. Parry asked the Minister for the Arts (1) when he expects to reply to the letter of 15 January from the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside, seeking a meeting to discuss the future of the Liverpool empire and the Philharmonic hall;

(2) if he will meet the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside, to discuss the future of the Liverpool empire and the Philharmonic hall and orchestra.

Mr. Luce: I have already replied to the hon. Member's letter of 15 January, and I am happy to meet him.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Diesel Fuel

Mr. Robert Banks asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the additional annual revenue from equalising the cost of diesel fuel with petrol at the point of sale.

Mr. Brooke: The present instability in the prices of petrol and diesel fuel (derv) makes comparison difficult, but, on the basis of the latest information available, raising the duty on derv to bring its pump price into line with that of petrol is estimated to yield net additional revenue of £45 million in a full year.

VAT

Mr. Stern asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to remove the requirement to pay value added tax on transactions between registered traders.

Mr. Brooke: No. The Government believe, in accordance with the clear majority view of a working party consisting of business, professional and Customs and Excise interests, which reported in 1979, that the balance of advantage remains with retaining the present system.

Furs (Illegal Importation)

Mr. Hancock asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many prosecutions there have been for the illegal importation of furs in each of the last three years.

Mr. Brooke: I am not aware of any such prosecutions under endangered species legislation. Information about prosecutions for smuggling furs on which import charges are due is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Engagements

Mr. Dalyell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list his engagements for the afternoon of 13 December, stating on which date each engagement was arranged.

Mr. Lawson: On the afternoon of Friday 13 December 1985 I was on a speaking tour in Berkshire and Oxfordshire. This had been arranged last summer.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Motor Vehicles (Incidents)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of casualties arising since 1982 from incidents when the security forces have opened fire on vehicles taken without their owners' consent.

Mr. Scott: The information (which includes casualties inflicted on the security forces by such vehicles, and deaths and injuries of civilians involved in terrorist as well as ordinary crime) is as follows:

Year	Deaths		Casualties
	Civilians	Security Forces	Civilians	Security Forces
1983	2	—	3	1
1984	1	—	3	5
1985	2	—	8	5
1986*	—	—	—	—

* As at 22 January.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if it is his policy that the chairman of the Police Federation of Northern Ireland shall be prevented from representing by means of public statements and interviews with the media the federation's views on matters pertaining to the welfare and efficiency of the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Mr. Tom King: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Audio and Video Tapes

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress towards the introduction of the proposed levy on blank audio and video tapes.

Mr. Pattie: The Government are still considering whether to introduce a levy on blank audio and video tapes. Our conclusions will be announced in a White Paper dealing with copyright law, which is now in the final stages of preparation.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the present state of the negotiations on the future of the multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

British Leyland

Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account he took of the long-term agreement reached between Land Rover and Fiat of Italy for the supply of engines for the Land Rover vehicle when he made his statement to the House on Monday 3 February; and if he will make a further statement in regard to promises given to his Department by General Motors.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the statement he made to the House on Monday 3 February concerning the possible acquisition by General Motors of British Leyland was made without prejudice to any future decision to refer any such takeover to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Yes. My right hon. Friend would decide whether to make such a reference in the light of the Director General of Fair Trading's advice.

Takeovers (Poison Pill)

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to give statutory effect to the prohibition of the use of poison pill tactics by companies seeking to defeat an unwelcome takeover bid currently contained in the city code on takeovers and mergers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Some such tactics may already be precluded by law, whilst others are unexceptionable. I am confident that the takeover panel will act against any tactic it judges abusive, and I am similarly prepared to bring forward proposals if I conclude that legislation is necessary. I am not, for the moment, persuaded that it is. But I am keeping the situation under review.

Engagements

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the Secretary of State's engagements for the afternoon of 13 December, stating on which date each engagement was arranged.

Mr. Channon: I am consulting my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Richmond (Mr. Brittan) and I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farm Incomes

11. Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the aggregate profit in 1985 for livestock farms employing labour.

Mrs. Fenner: I regret that aggregate farming income is not collected on a basis which enables it to be split by sector or according to whether labour is employed.

15. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on recent trends in farm incomes.

18. Mr. Bruce asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the recent fall in farm incomes.

Mr. Gummer: The White Paper on the annual review of agriculture presented to Parliament last month showed that farming income in the United Kingdom for 1985 is forecast to fall by 43 per cent. to £1,154 following a 35 per cent. rise in 1984. The decline is of course particularly marked because of the exceptionally poor weather during 1985.

45. Mr. Maclennan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, in the light of the drop in agricultural incomes set out in the "Annual Review of Agriculture 1986", Cmnd. 9708, what steps he intends to take to arrest and reverse their decline.

Mrs. Fenner: The drop in farming income during 1985 was mainly due to the bad weather. Weather is one of the risks that the farming industry must expect to face, but because of the exceptionally adverse situation of some livestock producers almost £17 million was made available as special weather aid for those who were worst affected. We will continue our efforts aimed at promoting an efficient and prosperous agriculture within the context of an economical and fair common agricultural policy.

56. Mr. Kennedy asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the net income of agriculture in the calendar year 1985 and express that amount as a percentage of the net income of agriculture in the calendar year 1984.

Mrs. Fenner: Table 23 of the White Paper, Annual Review of Agriculture 1986 (Cmnd. 9708) shows various income indicators. Farming income in 1985 is forecast at £1,154 million and represents 57 per cent. of farming income in the previous year. Farm business income—a broader based measure—is forecast at £2,223 million and represents 75 per cent. of farming income in 1984.

Ewes

13. Sir Paul Hawkins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the new arrangements for the export of ewes to France.

Mr. Gummer: We are obliged under Community law to implement the European Commission regulation which requires us to charge clawback on ewes and ewemeat exported to other member states. But we shall continue to press our fundamental opposition to the imposition of clawback on animals and meat which have not received variable premium.

23. Mr. Livsey asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has made in support of the National Farmers Union's reference to the European Court of France's refusal to import British ewe meat without a clawback.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Norfolk, South-West (Sir P. Hawkins).

We are closely in touch with the National Farmers' Union which is still considering the legal position.

Hormones

16. Mr. Dalyell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his reply to the European Economic Community on the issue of hormones.

Mr. Jopling: I voted against the proposal and recorded my view that a ban on the use of the hormones concerned for growth promotion was scientifically unjustified and could in any case only be adopted by unanimity.

Food Additives

17. Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is satisfied with the effectiveness of current regulations governing the use of food additives.

Mrs. Fenner: We have a comprehensive range of regulations under the Food Act covering the use of food additives. We keep them under regular review but we are always prepared to consider suggestions for improvements.

31. Mr. Pike asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received from consumer organisations concerning the use of additives in food.

Mrs. Fenner: My Ministry regularly receives a great variety of correspondence on all matters concerning food including the use of additives.

36. Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received requesting the listing of additives to individual ingredients in packaged food.

Mrs. Fenner: The Food Labelling Regulations 1984 require that with effect from 1 July 1986 all additives that perform a technological function in the final food must be listed either by category name, or by category name and specific name or approved serial number. This is a requirement of the European Community's food labelling directive (79/112). Statutory consultations were undertaken before the United Kingdom regulations were made.

Field Drainage Design Service.

19. Mr. Fallon asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the charging policy of the field drainage design service.

Mrs. Fenner: Prices for the field drainage design service have been set at levels which the market will support.

Official Secrets Act (Food Standards Committees)

20. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received on the implications of the application of the Official Secrets Act to members of committees concerned with food standards.

Mrs. Fenner: A small number of people have wrongly suggested that the Food Advisory Committee operates under a cloak of secrecy in the way it offers advice to Ministers.

41. Mr. Freud asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why it is his policy to keep confidential material submitted to, and proceedings of, official committees dealing with nutritional matters.

Mrs. Fenner: All the reports of the Food Advisory Committee are published and are thus available to members of the public. Where those reports refer to supporting material, the committee requests the holder of that material also to make it available to inquirers from the public. In some cases it is necessary to respect the commercial confidentiality of certain information.

Planning Applications

21. Mr. Chapman asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the oral answer of 19 December, Official Report, column 559, in how many cases relating to planning applications on sites of more than four hectares of agricultural land his Department was consulted in the last 12 months for which figures are available.

Mrs. Fenner: Provisional figures for the 1985 calendar year show that there were about 600 consultations in England in respect of all types of non-agricultural development on sites of more than 4 hectares of agricultural land.

Milk Quotas

22. Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the latest estimate for the number of jobs lost on farms, creameries, and dairy plants, as a result of the imposition of milk quotas.

Mr. Gummer: I regret that the information requested is not available.

61. Mr. Best asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the dairy industry regarding the operation of milk quotas.

Mr. Gummer: I and my officials are in regular contact with a wide range of organisations to discuss various aspects of the milk quota arrangements. We shall continue to seek their views on new developments, such as the proposed Community outgoers' scheme.

Mr. Ashdown asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the effect of milk quotas on tenant farmers.

Mr. Gummer: The introduction of milk quotas has led to problems for producers which are in many respects similar for both owner-occupier and tenant. The fact that both tenant and landlord have an interest in the quota allocated to a producer for use on a tenanted holding may, however, give rise to additional issues when the tenancy comes to an end or when the tenant wishes to give up milk production. We are examining these issues and consulting the industry to see if agreement can be reached on solutions which recognise the contribution that both parties have made to the build-up of quota and which ensure the continued effective functioning of the landlord-tenant system.

39. Mr. Patrick Nicholls asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made to resolve the issue of transferability of milk quotas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: As I made clear to my hon. Friend on 21 November, I attach great importance to obtaining better arrangements for the transfer of quota between producers. We are actively considering what might be done for the 1986-87 milk year.

Intervention Stocks

24. Mr. Torney asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the latest amounts of surplus United Kingdom cereals placed into intervention; what is the cash value; and what is the cost of storage of these intervention stocks.

48. Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current value of cereals held in intervention in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: There are 6 million tonnes of grain in intervention stocks in the United Kingdom, valued at £715·4 million. The average cost of taking grain into store and storing it for one year is about £13 per tonne.

28. Mr. Clay asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total, by volume and value, of grain currently held in intervention in the United Kingdom; and how this compares with 1985.

Mr. Gummer: There were 6·2 million tonnes of grain in intervention stores in the United Kingdom at the beginning of January, valued at £738·4 million. The stock at the beginning of January 1985 was 3·3 million tonnes, valued at £401·2 million.

53. Mr. Fisher asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much grain was taken into intervention in the United Kingdom during 1985.

Mr. Gummer: Four million tonnes of grain was sold into intervention in the United Kingdom during 1985.

59. Mr. Haynes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total value of agricultural produce currently held in intervention in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: The value of United Kingdom agricultural produce held in intervention on 31 December 1985 was £1,406 million, calculated on the basis of the buying—in prices applicable at that date.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of the 1985 cereal crop was taken into intervention; and how this compares with the average taken in over the last five years.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of the United Kingdom's 1985 grain harvest was taken into intervention.

Mr. Gummer: About 10 per cent. of estimated United Kingdom cereals production in 1985 has been sold into intervention in the current marketing year to date. Sales into intervention over the previous five marketing years averaged 7 per cent. of total production.

Agricultural Development and Advisory Service

25. Mr. Hardy asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the budget for the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service for 1986-87 as a percentage of its 1985-86 figure.

33. Mr. Clelland asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by what amount the budget for the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service will be reduced in 1986.

Mr. Jopling: The cost of ADAS in cash terms is expected to show very little change in 1986-87 compared with 1985-86.

52. Mr. Fatchett asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff will be employed in the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service in 1986; and how this compares with 1985.

Mr. Jopling: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary gave the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) on 19 December 1985 at column 279.

Pesticides

26. Mr. Alton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his plans to make the results of toxicity tests on pesticides available to the public.

Mrs. Fenner: We are proposing to make available to the public a full evaluation of each pesticide as soon as it becomes commercially available or undergoes a review under the new arrangements. This document details in every respect the product's toxicity, its wildlife and its environmental effects. We also propose to consider, on a case-by-case basis, requests for access to the study reports themselves, and to grant access where a request is justified in scientific terms. These proposals are set out in detail in the consultative document "Pesticides: Implementing Part III of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985" which is in the Library.

47. Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to lay the regulations governing the use of pesticides and the procedure for their approval provided for in the Food and Environmental Protection Act 1985.

Mrs. Fenner: I hope that I and my colleagues will be able to lay the draft regulations provided for in part III of the Food and Environment Protection Act before the summer recess.

Fishing Industry

27. Mr. Tom Cox asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress being made to prevent abuses in the fishing industry arising from the use of flags of convenience by other members of the Community.

Mr. Gummer: I hope that the measures which my right hon. Friend announced in a written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Wantage (Mr. Jackson) on 6 December will be effective in ensuring that the quotas allocated to the United Kingdom are reserved for fishing vessels having a real economic link with this country.

Farm Workers

29. Mr. James Lamond asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the average farm worker's earnings at the latest available date; and what they represent as a percentage of national average earnings.

Mrs. Fenner: The average weekly earnings of hired regular whole-time men working in agriculture in England and Wales is estimated at £129·92 for 46·6 hours for the year ended September 1985. This represents over 80 per cent. of the average weekly earnings of equivalent workers in all industries and services in Great Britain as a whole at April 1985.

51. Miss Maynard asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the latest figures for the average weekly earnings of farm workers.

58. Mr. Strang asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what were the average weekly earnings of agricultural workers in 1985.

Mrs. Fenner: I refer the hon. Members to the answer given today to the hon. Member for Ogmore (Mr. Powell).

57. Mr. Evans asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of farmers and growers currently employ workers on a regular basis; and what is the size of this labour force at the latest available date.

Mrs. Fenner: Details of the size and composition of the agricultural labour force in the United Kingdom at June 1985 are given in table 5 of the "Annual Review of Agriculture 1986" White Paper (Cmnd. 9708). Just over 36 per cent. of holdings in England and Wales returned at June 1985 employed regular hired or family agricultural workers.

63. Mr. Jack Thompson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the average skilled agricultural workers earnings; and how they compare with the average skilled wage in industry.

Mrs. Fenner: No estimate is available of the average earnings of skilled manual workers in all industries and services. Figures for the average weekly earnings of skilled manual workers in agriculture are shown in the table:

Average gross weekly eagnings and hours of full-time skilled men in agriculture 1984-85†*

	Grade I	Grade II	Craftesmen
Earnings (£)	175·57	151·44	136·40
Hours	47·8	47·1	47·8

* Appointment grades and craftesmen as defined by the Agricultural Wages Board (England and Wales) in the Agricultural Wages Order 1985.

† Figures relate to full-time hired men (aged 20 and over) in England and Wales for the year ended September 1985.

Source: Wages and Employment Enquiry (England and Wales)

65. Mr. Weetch asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate what effect the decline in agricultural incomes has had on the numbers employed in agriculture in East Anglia.

Mrs. Fenner: Estimates of farming income by standard statistical region in 1985 are not available and I am unable to estimate the effect on numbers employed in East Anglia of recent income movements.

Results of the June 1985 agricultural census suggest, however, that the proportional reduction in the numbers of hired and family agricultural workers in East Anglia between 1984 and 1985 was slightly less than the average annual fall over the period 1980 to 1984.

Red Meat

30. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many red meat animals were slaughtered for food in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Gummer: For 1985, the provisional total number of slaughterings for the United Kingdom was 34·75 million, comprising 4·22 million cattle, 15·27 million sheep and 15·26 million pigs.

Outgoers Scheme

32. Mr. Maclean asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in establishing the details of the proposed European Economic Community outgoers scheme.

35. Mr. Franks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in the negotiations on the proposed European Community outgoers scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The proposal has been discussed several times at official level within the Community. There is general recognition of the need for a reduction in total quotas, but little agreement on the broad shape of the scheme or on the details. The proposal has not yet been considered by the Council of Agriculture Ministers.

46. Sir John Farr asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many letters he has received in relation to the European Economic Community further milk outgoers scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: My right hon. Friend and I have received many representations about the proposed Community outgoers scheme from hon. Members, interested organisations and individual farmers.

The proposals are still being discussed at official level and have yet to come before the Council of Ministers. I am however, particularly concerned that any scheme adopted should reflect the interests of all concerned and operate fairly throughout the Community. I am consulting fully with the organisations concerned as the negotiations go forward.

Agriculture (Future Prospects)

34. Mr. Hicks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a White Paper on the future of agriculture and its position in the rural economy; and if he will make a statement.

40. Mr. Latham asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he proposes to produce a White Paper on future agricultural policy.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a White Paper on the future development of agriculture.

Mr. Jopling: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Staffordshire, Moorlands (Mr. Knox).

Freezer Trawlers

37. Mr. Wallace asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many freezer trawlers are currently in receipt of a pressure stock licence.

Mr. Gummer: A total of four freezer trawlers are currently licensed to fish for pressure stocks, three of these on a provisional basis pending the completion of the current review of licensing arrangements for the pelagic fisheries.

COMA Report

38. Mr. Ryder asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action his Ministry has taken in implementing the recommendations of the COMA report.

Mrs. Fenner: Draft proposals for legislation on the labelling of foods with their total and saturated fat contents and revised proposals for voluntary full nutritional labelling of food will be circulated for comment shortly.

In addition, certain changes under the beef and sheep variable premium schemes are designed to encourage the production of lean carcases.

Female Agriculture Workers

42. Ms. Richardson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the current hourly rates of pay for part-time female workers in agriculture.

Mrs. Fenner: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on Tuesday 28 January to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies).

River Mersey (Silt)

43. Mr. Parry asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to make a decision on the application for a pumping licence for silt dredging from the River Mersey.

Mr. Gummer: I have received a number of representations on this matter, in particular from the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mr. Parry) and from other hon. Members who represent Liverpool constituencies. I shall reply as soon as possible.

Untreated Milk

44. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will take steps to permit farmhouse sales of untreated milk to paying guests.

Mr. Gummer: As I told my hon. Friend the Member for Teignbridge (Mr. Nicholls) on 30 January, we have looked again at the position of farmhouse caterers under the new untreated milk regulations. We propose to amend the regulations to allow registered dairy farmers to provide untreated milk to farm visitors provided they tell them what they are drinking.

My Department issued consultation documents covering this proposal on 3 February.

Agricultural Land

49. Sir Dudley Smith asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has of agricultural land lost in the past five years through local authorities granting themselves planning permission.

Mrs. Fenner: I regret that this information is not available.

Common Fisheries Policy

50. Mr. Allen Adams asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is satisfied with the operation of the common fisheries policy.

Mr. Gummer: As my right hon. Friend made clear during the debate on 16 January the common fisheries policy represents a first-class deal for the United Kingdom and I am satisfied that it is now working increasingly effectively.

Common Agricultural Policy

54. Mr. Charles Wardle asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy towards current proposals to reform the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Jopling: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham).

EC (Beef and Wine)

55. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current rebated price at which beef and wine is made available to the Soviet Union, expressed in pence per pound and pence per litre, respectively, in consequence of European Economic Community export rebates and special rebates approved by the management committee.

Mr. Gummer: Prices at which beef and wine may be sold to the Soviet Union are matters for the traders concerned. Rates of export refund for beef vary according to the category of animal, type of meat, and destination; those applicable at the end of January were published in the Official Journal of the European Communities (Reference No. L 19 of 25/1/86, page 24) a copy of which is in the Library of the House. For wine, there is a standard rate of export refund valid for nearly all destinations and this was published in the Official Journal of the European Communities (Reference No. L 22 of 27/1/84, page 23). The export refunds are set in ECU per unit weight or unit volume. 1ECU/tonne converted at the United Kingdom agricultural conversion rate is equal to 0·028062 p/b; 1 ECU/hecto-litre is equal to 0·618655 p/litre.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

62. Mr. Rogers asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which statutory or voluntary bodies he proposes to consult in respect of the designation of environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Jopling: I am already consulting the Countryside Commission and the Nature Conservancy Council over the selection areas. Their advice is based on extensive consultation with other interested bodies.

Environmental Conservation

64. Sir Hector Monro asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals the European Commission is investigating as ways of encouraging farming practices which conserve the environment.

Mrs. Fenner: The Commission has undertaken to operate a common framework for encouraging the conservation of the rural environment and the protection of specific sites and to forward the relevant proposals to the Council. We anticipate that these will include direct support for farmers who maintain or introduce agricultural practices compatible with the protection of the environment and the integration of the objectives into environmental policy. A Community financial contribution towards such arrangements may be proposed. No formal proposals are as yet on the table.

Chicken Feed

Mr. Proctor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what encouragement he gives to egg producers to avoid the use of drugs, antibiotics, synthetic additives, and colouring agents in the mash used for chicken feed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Drugs, antibiotics and synthetic additives are only permitted for use in egg production after thorough screening for safety and efficacy as required by the Medicines Act 1968 and the Use of Feedingstuffs Regulations 1982, as amended in 1984.

Animals (Ritual Slaughter)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he now has any plans to introduce legislation to ban the ritual slaughter of animals.

Mrs. Fenner: We are considering carefully the Farm Animal Welfare Council's report on religious slaughter. We have sought the views of all interested parties on the council's recommendations and these will be taken fully into account before decisions are taken.

ENERGY

Wind Power Technology (Exhibition)

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Energy, if he will arrange for an exhibition relating to wind power technology to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: Such an exhibition is being organised by the British Wind Energy Association for display during the week beginning Monday 10 February. My Department is sponsoring it, and I will attend the formal opening.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Attorney-General if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by the Lord Chancellor's Department with grant aid and in the last financial year for which figures are available and the size of the grant so given.

The Attorney-General: In the financial year 1984-85 the following grants were made by the Lord Chancellor's Department to voluntary bodies:

Adamsdown Community Law Centre	64,230
Cambridge House Legal Centre	38,090
Harehills and Chapeltown Law Centre	78,010
Newham Rights Centre	97,620
North Kensington Law Centre	148,650
Saltley Action Centre	58,930
Tower Hamlets Law Centre	115,175
Law Centres Federation	48,155
Bristol Courts Family Conciliation Service	20,000
	668,860

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Attorney-General if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which the Lord Chancellor's Department gives grant aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available.

The Attorney-General: No such grants are made by the Lord Chancellor's Department.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Attorney-General if he will outline the steps which the Lord Chancellor's Department takes to ensure that grant aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

The Attorney-General: It is not absolutely clear to which organisations my hon. Friend refers in the question. But the seven law centres which exceptionally receive financial support from the Lord Chancellor's Department are required as a condition of their annual grant to adhere to the Lord Chancellor's guidelines for law centres. These include the requirement that a law centre should refrain from party political activity and should not allow its premises to be used for that purpose.

Legal Aid (Fees)

Mr. Lawrence asked the Attorney-General what negotiations he has had, or is proposing to have, arising from the Coopers and Lybrand report, with the Bar Council over fees in criminal legal aid cases.

The Attorney-General: Officials have discussed the Coopers and Lybrand report with representatives of the Bar Council. The Lord Chancellor will be writing later today to the chairman of the Bar with the Government's response. I have also written to the chairman of the Bar.

PRIME MINISTER

Farm/Tourist Operators (Grants)

Mr. Maclean asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on co-ordination between the Department of Employment and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on publicity for the availability of grants for farm/tourist operators.

The Prime Minister: Publicity for grants available under the agriculture improvement scheme for investments in farm tourism is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. His Department is in touch with the Department of Employment and the English and regional tourist boards about the administration of the scheme.

Civil Defence

Mr. Thurnham asked the Prime Minister which Minister has responsibility for the provisions of civil defence telecommunications.

The Prime Minister: The Home Secretary has responsibility for a number of emergency communications arrangements which would support civil defence plans in time of war. As from 1 April 1986, he will also assume responsibility for other emergency communications services that are currently the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Bradford City Football Club

Mr. Lawler asked the Prime Minister when a decision will be made regarding the request by Bradford City football club for financial assistance to enable the Valley Parade ground to be rebuilt.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have been asked to reply.

At the request of Bradford city council I am pleased to be able to make it an additional capital expenditure allocation for 1985-86 of £1·462 million. This will enable the council to make a grant to the Bradford City football club towards the rebuilding of the club's ground at Valley Parade. I pay tribute to my hon. Friend's efforts on behalf of the club.

WALES

Nursing Profession

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to meet leaders of the nursing profession in Wales regarding hospital management and nursing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I have no immediate plans to do so, though of course the Department is in frequent touch with leaders of the nursing and other professions associated with the Health Service in Wales on a wide range of topics, and I met the chairmen of all statutory advisory committees earlier this month for example.

I have also discussed these matters with nursing managers and front-line staff during my visits to date to the health authorities in Wales. Our officials have had useful recent contact with the Welsh branch of the RCN specifically on matters related to the introduction of general management to the NHS in Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to improve consultative procedures for nurses employed in the National Health Service in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: It is a feature of the changes implied by the introduction of general management into the NHS in Wales that lines of nursing and other professional accountability and advice should be made more plain. Health authorities are well aware of their responsibility to ensure proper consultation on appropriate matters with all relevant professional groups.

Cervical Cancer Testing

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many workplace agreements have been signed with employers in Wales concerning cervical cancer testing agreements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information is not available centrally. It is for health authorities to decide how best to provide screening facilities, and it is open to them to consider whether it can be provided effectively in the workplace.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Human Rights (Vietnam)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to the extent of denial of human rights in re-education camps in Vietnam; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: I would refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 5 February, at column 182.

Many thousands of people have been detained since 1975 in the so-called "re-education" camps in Vietnam, without charge or trial, apparently on an indefinite basis and in contravention of the international covenant on civil and political rights, which Vietnam ratified in 1982. We are deeply disturbed that the detainees have still been neither charged, nor tried nor released, and that they continue to be subjected to harsh treatment.

Less Developed Countries (Interest Rates)

Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the impact that the rise in pound sterling interest rates has had on the economies of less developed countries.

Mrs. Chalker: The proportion of debt of less developed countries denominated in pounds sterling is so small that a change in sterling interest rates has relatively little impact.

El Salvador

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government have taken to seek to ensure adherence to the recent United Nations General Assembly resolution on the situation in El Salvador; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: No resolution on the situation in El Salvador has been tabled for the next United Nations General Assembly.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Buildings

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what allocation has been made in the current year for building work on voluntary aided and church schools in Oxfordshire; to which schools money was allocated; and what were the criteria for allocations.

Mr. Dunn: Oxfordshire's allocation for grant-aided building works in voluntary schools for 1986-87 is £470,000. This sum covers committed expenditure and is allocated for the current project at the recently established St. Augustine of Canterbury ecumenical school, Oxford. In making allocations for the aided building programme nationally, first priority was given to expenditure committed to projects already under way. This took up about two thirds of the available resources. The remainder was allocated, first, to projects to provide new school places in areas of population growth; second to those related to approved statutory proposals involving the removal of surplus places; and, finally, to a small number of projects which were urgently and unavoidably needed because of serious dilapidation of school buildings.

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what response he has made to the representations from Lancashire county council for additional funding for the repair and maintenance programme for school buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has not received any representations from Lancashire county council.

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will pay an official visit to Lancashire to discuss with representatives of the local education authority the current repair and maintenance programme for school buildings in both the county and aided sectors and the adequacy of the current level of resources available for it; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has no immediate plans to pay an official visit to Lancashire in the near future. The repair and maintenance of school buildings is the responsibility of the local education authority, with the exception of external repairs to school buildings in the aided sector which are the responsibility of the school governors, and on which 85 per cent. grant is available from the Government.

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he proposes to receive a delegation of county councillors, officials and hon. Members from Lancashire regarding the school repairs and maintenance programme for the county; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: While my right hon. Friend would be willing to receive a delegation of county councillors, officials and hon. Members, he has not been asked to do so.

Pupil Statistics

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will provide an analysis of those staying on at school after 16 years of age by region.

Mr. Dunn: The number and proportion of pupils aged 16 and 17 years staying on in maintained schools as at January 1985 are given in the table:

Region	16-year-olds in maintained schools		17-year-olds in maintained schools

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give on a regional basis a breakdown of destinations of school-leavers of (a) 16, (b) 17 and (c) 18 years of age.

Mr. Dunn: The information is shown in the following table:

Burnley Wood County Primary School

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has received any representations regarding the emergency closure of Burnley Wood county primary school; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend has not received any representations concerning this school.

Cash Limits

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he proposes to make any changes to the 1985-86 cash limits for his Department's Votes.

Sir Keith Joseph: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the 1985-86 cash limit for Class X, Vote 5, (Research Councils etc.: Agricultural and Food Research Council) will be increased by £2,385,000 from £50,340,000 to £52,725,000. This is to enable the Agricultural and Food Research Council to meet extra short-term costs arising from the restructuring of the council's work, which will lead to cost savings in future years. The increase will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the planning total of public expenditure.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

African Famine

Mr. Merchant asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further assistance he will make available to refugees and victims of the African famine.

Mr. Raison: I have decided to make available a further £3 million for spending in the current financial year. Of this, £1·5 million is being allocated to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees; £500,000 to the League of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies; and £1 million to the International Committee of the Red Cross.

These sums are additional to the £750,000 I approved last month, of which £500,000 was for the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and £250,000 for the International Committee of the Red Cross.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Health Education

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list in the Official Report, for the last 10 years for which figures are available, the amounts of money paid by his Department, whether directly or indirectly through some other agency, to organisations and bodies working in the field of health education, detailing the organisation and bodies concerned, the amounts they received and the method of payment.

Mr. Needham: A proportion of the funds allocated to health and social services boards is used for health education but it is not possible to identify the amounts involved. The table lists grants to other bodies whose primary role is health education. Payments are made directly to the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents in respect of home safety activities in Northern Ireland. The contributions to other organisations are paid through the Department of Health and Social Security.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has about the attitude adopted by representatives of the nationalist community and the Roman Catholic Church towards the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Ulster Defence Regiment, following the signing of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Tom King: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Her Majesty's Government were aware before signing the Anglo-Irish agreement of the extent to which the Irish Government had engaged in consultation with the Social Democratic and Labour Party in Northern Ireland about the progress of negotiations on the agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986, c. 78]: The Government were aware that there were informal consultations between the SDLP and the Irish Government in the course of the negotiations. The Government were not informed about the substance of such consultations.

Terrorism

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many persons were detained under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Acts 1973 and 1978 in 1985;

(2) what information he has concerning the number of people who were detained in 1985 under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 and who were charged with scheduled offences under the Act, and other Acts, separately;

(3) if he will make a statement concerning the operation of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978 in 1985 with regard to the annual total of arrests made under the Act; and how many persons arrested under the Act were detained for the following periods: (a) up to 12 hours, (b) 12 to 24 hours, (c) 24 to 36 hours, (d) 36 to 48 hours, (e) 48 to 60 hours and (f) 60 to 72 hours, indicating those numbers (i) not ultimately charged under the Act and released, (ii) those charged under the Act, (iii) those charged with an offence but not under the Acts, indicating which offences and (iv) those charged under the Act but not initially detained under the Act.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986, c. 77]: In 1985 there were 986 arrests by the Royal Ulster Constabulary and 61 by the members of the armed forces under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978. Some of those arrested by members of the armed forces would be recorded in the Royal Ulster Constabulary figures if they were subsequently handed over to the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Of those arrests carried out by the Royal Ulster Constabulary, in 784 of the cases the persons concerned were released without charge; in one case a person was subsequently charged with offences under the Act only; in one case a person was charged with offences under the Act and with offences under other legislation; and in 200 other cases persons were charged with offences under other legislation. One hundred and seventy three of the cases involved persons charged with scheduled offences, though details of the offences are not readily available.

Information on persons charged with an offence under the Act after arrest under other provisions and information on the length of time individuals were held under the Act could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

TRANSPORT

M25 (Safety)

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he is satisfied with safety arrangements on the M25.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The safety arrangements on the M25 are in line with the usual provision on motorways. Improvements to the M25 signalling system, by installing "matrix" signs, have been brought forward a year and are due to be completed by the end of 1987. The Department recently published details compiled by the Meteorological Office of fog-prone areas on the M25. We shall be deciding whether to install more fog-detection equipment that would help drivers. We are also reviewing lighting policy on motorways generally, taking economic and environmental considerations into account.

The greatest aid to safety is still careful and considerate driving. I would be happy to consider any specific point which may concern my hon. Friend.

Advanced Driving Instructor Licence

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it a condition of issue of an advanced driving instructor licence that its validity is conditional upon the licensee also holding a valid driving licence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The issue of a certificate of registration as an approved driving instructor is already conditional upon the applicant holding a full driving licence and having held it for four out of the last six years; the Registrar has the power to remove anyone from the register if he no longer holds a current licence.

Boeing 747s (Cracks)

Mr. Bevan asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on standards of maintenance in relation to the recent directive from the Federal Aviation Authority following the discovery of cracks in Boeing 747s.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Civil Aviation Authority, which has the statutory responsibility for ensuring the safety of aircraft, informs me that aircraft built to modern standards, such as Boeing 747, ae designed to be tolerant of structural cracking which can occur in service. Inspections are specified initially as a result of manufacturers' testing, but subsequently take account of service experience. The cracking recently discovered on some Boeing 747 aircraft was within the structural capability of the aircraft concerned. However, the CAA informs me that additional inspections are being specified to ensure that any necessary rectification action is taken in good time.

SCOTLAND

Avalanche Forecasting

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the discussions with the relevant bodies to establish a better system of avalanche forecasting in Scotland to produce recommendations.

Mr. John MacKay: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Crichness (Planting Grant)

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what applications have been made to the Forestry Commission for planting grant in respect of land at Crichness in East Lothian; and what decisions have been made on such applications.

Mr. John MacKay: Altogether, the Forestry Commission has received a total of five grant applications for proposed planting at Crichness. The first, for the planting of some 240 hectares, was made in November 1984, but was withdrawn in January 1985 following the sale of the land and before a decision was given. The second application was made by the new owners in January 1985 and covered 508 hectares. This was replaced in February 1985 by one for 212 hectares. Consideration of this revised application was suspended in March 1985 when it was learnt that planting had already commenced on part of the area; no grants were paid in respect of this planting.

A fourth grant application, covering 225 hectares lying outside the area already planted, was submitted in September 1985. The Forestry Commission has since indicated that it would be prepared to approve this application subject to the applicants producing a satisfactory landscaping plan.

The latest application, made in December 1985, is for the proposed planting of 8·4 hectares of broadleaved trees under the broadleaved woodland grant scheme. This is still under consideration.

Scottish Certificate of Education Examinations Board (Markers)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many of the markers recruited by the Scottish Certificate of Education Examinations Board for 1986 have been markers on (a) at least one previous occasion and (b) two or more previous occasions;

(2) how many of the markers recruited by the Scottish Certificate of Education Examinations Board for the 1986 examinations are teachers or further education lecturers presently employed (a) in Scotland, (b) elsewhere in the United Kingdom and (c) outside the United Kingdom;

(3) how many of the markers recruited by the Scottish Certificate of Education Examinations Board for the 1986 examinations have a minimum of two years' recent experience of presenting candidates for Scottish Certificate of Education examinations;

(4) what was the cost of advertising for and recruiting Scottish Certificate of Education Examinations Board markers (a) in Scotland, (b) elsewhere in the United Kingdom, and (c) outside the United Kingdom for the 1985 examinations; and what are the corresponding estimated costs for the current year;

(5) how many people aged 70 or over have (a) applied and (b) been accepted as markers for the Scottish Certificate of Education Examinations Board examinations for 1986.

Mr. Allan Stewart: To provide the information requested, the Scottish Examination Board will require to scrutinise the records of some 2,500 markers individually and calculate the actual and likely expenditure incurred on recruitment of markers in 1985 and 1986, respectively. I have asked the chairman of the board to write to the hon. Member when the information is available.

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland in what exceptional circumstances markers for the Scottish Certificate of Education Examinations Board will be excused from attendance at markers' meetings for the 1986 examinations.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Scottish Examination Board has informed me that it will consider waiving the normal requirement of compulsory attendance at markers' meetings:

i. where a meeting is to be held on a weekday and serving teachers cannot be given release to attend the meeting by their headteacher;
ii. where a meeting is to be held on a Sunday and the marker is unwilling on grounds of religious principle to attend; and
iii. where the marker has a previous specific and unbreakable commitment on the day fixed for the markers' meeting.

In any event, every marker receives written instructions and, where a marker is unable to attend a meeting, these are supplemented as required.

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the usual qualifications of markers recruited by the Scottish Certificate of Education Examinations Board; and what qualifications, and so on, are required of those markers who do not fulfil the normal qualifications.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Scottish Examination Board continues to require all applicants for consideration for appointment as markers to have, either in the subject concerned or in a related subject, three years experience of presentation for the Scottish Certificate of Education or Certificate of Sixth Year Studies or three years examining experience in tertiary education.

Hospital Patients

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will state for each year since 1978 the number of in-patients and out-patients treated in National Health Service hospitals in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: The table shows the numbers of patients discharged from in-patient treatment and of new out-patients attending consultant clinics in National Health Service hospitals in each year to 30 September.

Year	*Number of patients discharged	Number of new out-patients attending consultant clinics
1978	748,984	1,961,338

Scottish Development Agency and Highlands and Islands Development Board

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is considering any alterations to the current treatment of profits accruing through the sale of shares and investments in companies in which the Scottish Development Agency and the Highlands and Islands Development Board, respectively, have existing interests; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: In planning the public expenditure provision for these bodies, account is taken of the total receipts each expects to receive. These can include those accruing from the realisation of investments, including shares; the amount of which can be either greater or less than their original cost. As provision is both planned and provided on a cash flow basis, the question of profits or losses accruing from individual assets does not arise directly. The question of whether to allow unanticipated excess receipts to increase gross expenditure on activities financed by the grant-in-aid will continue to be considered if, and when, it arises in the light of all the circumstances prevailing at the time.

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the profits accruing, respectively, to the Scottish Development Agency and the Highlands and Islands Development Board through the sale of shares and investments in companies in which they have had interests for each of the years since 1980.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Information on the performance of each body in respect of their investments is contained in their annual accounts, copies of which are obtainable in the Library.

Profits (losses in brackets) on the disposal of shares in companies are as follows:

This review programme is designed to ensure that the work of these bodies continues to represent good value for money.

Boards of Governors

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland to whom chairmen of boards of governors of colleges of education in Scotland are responsible for the actions taken by them.

Mr. Allan Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1986, c. 233]: Regulation 4 of the Teachers (Colleges of Education) (Scotland) Regulations 1967 provides for the constitution of a governing body for each college of education; and regulation 11(3) of those regulations contains provision for each such governing body to elect a chairman. The chairman is responsible to the governing body as a whole, subject to any delegated authority which that governing body may have granted to him.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the level of income in current prices and expressed as a percentage of average earnings at which single people, married couples (both working) and married couples with two children pay less income tax and national insurance contributions than they did in 1978-79.

Mr. Moore: The table shows the ranges of earnings within which income tax plus national insurance contributions form a smaller proportion of gross earnings in 1985-86 than in 1978-79, assuming that earnings have risen in line with the national average.

At all income levels those whose earnings have risen in line with the national average have seen a real increase in their take home pay since 1978-79.

London Financial Markets

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any guarantees involving the contingent commitment of public funds have been extended on the rescue of (a) members of the London gold market other that Johnson Matthey and (b) members of any other London financial market.

Mr. Ian Stewart: No guarantee relying on funds provided by Parliament was extended in the rescue of Johnson Matthey Bankers Ltd., nor at the present time is there any liability on the taxpayer under such a guarantee to rescue any other member of the London gold market or any member of any of the London financial markets.

Concessionary Travel Warrants

Mr. Wallace asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to the Exchequer of exempting from tax the concessionary travel warrants given to officers of the Northern Constabulary posted to Orkney, Shetland and the Western Isles.

Mr. Moore: I regret that a precise estimate is not possible, but the revenue cost is unlikely to exceed £40,000 per annum.

Public Sector Bodies

Mr. Kennedy asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his policy towards the treatment and destination of profits accruing to public sector bodies from the sale of part or all of their shares in companies in which they have invested; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: The treatment of disposal receipts of public sector bodies able to hold shares will vary according to the nature and scale of the holding concerned and the framework of their accounting arrangements. Such receipts would generally be taken into account in determining the public sector resources available to the body in question.

Oil Revenues

Mr. Wallace asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of gross national product is represented by oil revenues; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: The value of total sales of North sea oil and gas, net of costs, is estimated to have been 5 to 6 per cent. of our gross national product in 1985.

Civil Service Unions (Political Funds)

Mrs. Currie asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he has given to the effect the proposals by certain Civil Service unions to set up political funds will have on the relationship between the Government and the Civil Service.

Mr. Brooke: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement I made earlier today.

ENVIRONMENT

Planning Appeals

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, for each of the years 1983, 1984, and 1985 those planning applications in which he overturned the recommendation of an inspector following a public inquiry; for each application what is the title and nature of the application, the name of the applicant, the inspector's recommendation and Secretary of State's decision; and if he will give a brief reason for his decision in each case.

Mr. Tracey: Some of this information, particularly in relation to section 36 appeals in 1983, cannot be provided without disproportionate cost. I shall write to the hon. Member with such information as is readily available.

Dog Licences

Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many authorities have authorised voluntary agencies to issue dog licences under section 134 of the Post Office Act 1969; what steps he has taken to encourage local authorities to do so; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Local authorities are responsible, under section 134 of the Post Office Act 1969, for the issue of dog licences. I am not aware that any authority has chosen to employ a voluntary agency as its agent for this purpose. I see no need to seek to influence local authorities' judgment in this matter.

Gravesend Town Centre

Mr. John Fraser asked the Sectetary of State for the Environment if he will call in for his consideration the proposal by Gravesham district council to give planning consent for the use of the town centre swimming pool and public open space to private developers.

Mr. Tracey: I am informed that there are at present no formal planning proposals before Gravesham borough council for the use of this site. If such proposals are forthcoming and are referred to my right hon. Friend, he will consider whether to intervene.

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what, in real terms, was the housing investment programme allocation to the Cherwell district council for the last five years.

Sir George Young: The housing investment programme allocations to the Cherwell district council for the five financial years from 1982-83 to 1986-87 at 1985-86 prices were:

	£m
1982-83	2·239
1983-84	2·58
1984-85	2·726
1985-86	2·411
1986-87	2·082

The authority's share of the total HIP allocation in the south-east has risen in each of the years in question, from 1·13 per cent in 1982-83 to 1·48 per cent in 1986-87. Since 1981-82 local authorities have been able to supplement their HIP allocations by spending the prescribed proportion of their capital receipts.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the housing invesment programme allocation paid or payable to the London borough of Waltham Forest in each year from 1979-80 to 1986-87 in (i) cash and (ii) real terms expressed in 1979-80 prices.

Sir George Young: The allocations were as follows:

Year	Cash Terms (£ million)	Real Terms (£ million, 1979-80 prices)
1979-80	17·046	17·046
1980-81	12·892	10·854
1981-82	9·225	7·054
1982-83	9·082	6·488
1983-84	8·627	5·900

Year	Cash Terms (£ million)	Real Terms (£ million, 1979-80 prices)
1984-85	8·945	5·853
1985-86	8·684	5·412
1986-87	7·716	4·601

Since 1981-82 authorities have been able to augment their allocations by use of prescribed proportions of capital receipts. Additional allocations may be made for 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Rugby Football Union

Mr. McGuire asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it a condition of any future grant to the Sports Council that it does not give any money to the Rugby Football Union while that body persists in laying down rules and conditions incompatible with the concept of a free gangway for British Amateur Rugby League Association players and Rugby Football Union players.

Mr. Tracey: No.

Thermal Insulation Values

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in the context of Energy Efficiency Year, he will review the thermal insulation values within the building regulations.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Ealing, Acton (Sir G. Young) on 16 December 1985 to the question from my hon. Friend the Member for Devon, North (Mr. Speller), at column 13.

Greater London Training Board

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for the future of the Greater London training board.

Mr. Tracey: None. This is a matter for successor authorities.

Capital Expenditure Grants

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount of grant based on debt charges and allocation given for capital expenditure for Hyndburn, Burnley and Blackburn local authorities for (a) the urban programme, (b) the urban development grant, (c) the derelict land grant and (d) the European regional development fund for 1984-85; and what is the estimate for 1985-86 for each of these buildings.

Sir George Young: Figures are as follows:

Urban programme

	Capital allocation		Grant paid		Debt charges claimed
	1984-85 £000s	1985-86 £000s	1984-85 £000s	1985-86 £000s	1984-85 £000s	1985-86 £000s
Blackburn	3,199	3,222	302	385	403	570
Burnley	381	742	49	38	65	50
Hyndburn	209	50	68	62	90	93

Urban development grant

There were no approvals, or grant paid, in 1984-85. Burnley had no approvals, or grant paid, in 1985-86. Blackburn had approvals for £1·9 million of urban development grant in 1985-86, but has claimed no grant as yet. Hyndburn had approvals for £1·8 million of urban development grant, and has claimed £1,600 in grant so far.

Cathedrals

Mr. Cormack asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give full details of the listed building status, together with dates of listing, of all the cathedrals of the Church of England.

Mr. Tracey: I shall answer this question shortly.

Sports (Tobacco Agreement)

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied about the working of the voluntary tobacco agreement between the governing bodies of sport and the tobacco companies; whether he has sought the advice of the Sports Council on this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I am satisfied that a voluntary agreement provides the best way of securing that the promotional activities of tobacco companies conform with the overall Government policy and in particular with the voluntary agreement on advertising. I have sought the advice of the Sports Council and other interested bodies on the working of the present agreement. Any alterations sought to the agreement will be decided in the light of comments which I receive and amendments to the voluntary agreement on advertising, which are currently under discussion between the companies and by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services.

Merseyside (Voluntary Organisations)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 19 November 1985, Official Report, column 148, what further representations have been received from relevant local authorities on the future of county funded voluntary organisations on Merseyside following abolition of the county councils, in the light of his Department's letter to them indicating in more detail how the transitional grants will be allocated; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The Merseyside co-ordinating committee of local authority representatives has met my noble Friend the Minister of State to press its view that transitional grant should be made available to help local authorities on Merseyside support voluntary bodies operating countywide. These views have been supported by letters from individual authorities.

The transitional grant scheme is designed to help individual authorities take on support for voluntary bodies operating primarily on a local basis whose funding is affected by abolition. Countywide voluntary bodies can look to all the authorities in an abolition area for funding, and authorities can contribute either through a collective grant-giving scheme, or on an individual basis. The RSG settlement has ensured that successor authorities have access to all the resources the county would have had, and we have no proposals to treat Merseyside authorities on a more favourable basis than authorities elsewhere in the country.

Bradford City Football Club

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the reply of 21 January, Official Report, column 143, when he expects to be in a position to announce what financial assistance her Majesty's Government intend to give to Bradford City football club to help rebuild its ground at Valley Parade.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend to his hon. Friend the Member for Bradford, North (Mr. Lawler).

Government Expenditure

Mr. Straw asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out in the Official Report tables showing net rates as a percentage of income assuming the operation of rebates as at present and on a basis comparable with the tables at figures 9 page 20 and figure 11 page 25 of Cmnd. 9714.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986, c. 26]: The information requested is set out in the table, together with figures for the proposed community charge calculated on the same basis. The figures show that with the present rebates system as well as the new rebates system on which the Cmnd. 9714 illustrations are based the lowest income households would, on average, pay less in local taxes under a community charge.

Relationship of net rates and net community charge to net household income with present rebate scheme—(Great Britain 1984-85 prices)

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Shipbuilding

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the means by which his Department secures its objectives of supporting British shipbuilding; how he is monitoring their implementation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Financial support for merchant shipbuilding is available through the intervention fund. British Shipbuilders also receives public dividend capital. The performance of British Shipbuilders is carefully monitored against its annual corporate plan. As sponsors, my Department both monitors and supports the industry as a whole.

Telephone Exchanges

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many system X telephone exchanges have been sold overseas by Plessey and the General Electric Company as a result of assistance from his Department.

Mr. Butcher: Orders outside the United Kingdom for system X have been won in St. Vincent, Jersey and Guernsey. In each case the business was won on the competitive merits of the system and its suppliers.

Motor Industry (Components)

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to encourage Ford, Vauxhall and Peugeot Talbot to increase their use in the United Kingdom and elsewhere of United Kingdom-made components.

Mr. Butcher: Departmental Ministers and officials are in regular touch with the senior management of Ford, Peugeot Talbot and Vauxhall and every opportunity is taken to emphasise the need for the companies to give full and fair access to United Kingdom component manufacters. I am optimistic about the way matters are developing.

Ford, of course, is itself an important manufacturer of components in the United Kingdom for use both here and overseas. Its United Kingdom vehicles already have a United Kingdom content of around 80 per cent.

Peugeot Talbot has recently launched the Ryton-built Peugeot 309 with an initial level of United Kingdom content of 65 per cent. Talks will commence shortly between the company and my officials to explore ways in which more United Kingdom components might be incorporated in PSA group models built here and overseas.

As far as Vauxhall are concerned, General Motors Passenger Cars (Europe) set up a high level task force last year to look at the imbalance between what it builds in the United Kingdom and what it sells here. Vauxhall has now undertaken to increase United Kingdom production and increase United Kingdom component sourcing which should mean that by the end of 1986, some 64 per cent. of Vauxhall cars sold here will be built here with a United Kingdom content of 60 per cent. Talks between my Department and the task force are continuing with the aim of securing further improvements and further opportunities for United Kingdom component manufacturers.

Director of Information

Mr. Williams asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will detail the functions of his Director of Information.

Mr. Butcher: The Director of Information is responsible for advice on, and overall supervision of, the presentation of departmental policies, activities and services through the news media and through paid publicity; for the management of the Department's weekly business magazine, British Business, and its monthly staff newspaper, DTI News; and the management of the Department's general inquiry point.

Rolls-Royce Ltd.

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to announce details of the privatisation of Rolls-Royce Ltd.

Mr. Pattie: I am not yet in a position to add to my reply of 8 November to my hon. Friend. I shall make a further announcement in due course.

Benefit Payments

Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the chairman of the Post Office concerning the future of benefit payments at post offices; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The payment of social security benefits forms a substantial proportion of the work of the counters business and the future level of such traffic is therefore covered in my department's periodic discussions with the Post Office about future plans for the business.

Post Office Corporation

Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to prepare the Post Office Corporation for privatisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The Post Office is not excluded from our policy to transfer activities from the public to the private sector wherever it is practicable and commercially sensible to do so. We have not decided whether the corporation might be privatised and we therefore have no plans at present to prepare it for privatisation.

British Leyland

Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what account he took of the long-term agreement reached between Land Rover and Fiat of Italy for the supply of engines for the Land Rover vehicle when he made his statement to the House on Monday 3 February; and if he will make a further statement in regard to promises given to his Department by General Motors.

Mr. Peter Morrison [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1986, c. 252]: I am told by Land Rover Ltd. that it does not have agreements with Fiat of Italy.

Were a deal with GM to be reached in relation to Leyland Trucks, Land Rover, Freight Rover and certain related overseas operations, it would be willing to give full undertakings that the majority of products sold by the businesses involved would be manufactured in the United Kingdom; that the products would continue to have a high local content; that there would be a substantial level of exports; that research and development facilities will be maintained and developed in the United Kingdom; that Land Rover will retain its distinct British identity; and that appropriate level of investment will be injected into the business to achieve competitive future models and facilities.

Multi-Fibre Arrangement

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the present state of the negotiations on the future of the multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Alan Clark: [pursuant to his reply 6 February 1986, c. 251]: Discussions are in progress in the Community on a mandate for the negotiations on the renewal of the MFA. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has recently met the industry and other interested parties. I intend to keep closely in touch with interested parties in the United Kingdom on this.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Bed Sores (Treatment)

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the estimated cost of the treatment of a patient with bed sores in a National Health Service hospital.

Mr. Whitney: The information is not available.

Meningitis

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will state the number of medical practitioners whose conduct in respect of the diagnosis of meningitis has been found unsatisfactory by family practitioner service committees in each of the last five years.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that this information is not available.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give a breakdown of the losers from the £450 million cut in housing benefit under the Social Security Bill, by category of claimant and by numbers losing less than £1 per week, £1 to £2, £2 to £3, £3 to £4, £4 to £5, £5 to £6, £6 to £7, and more than £7 per week.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the total number of claimants of housing benefit at his Department's offices at Highgate and Finsbury Park for each year since the scheme was introduced.

Mr. Major: Housing benefit is administered by local authorities and it is therefore not possible to relate the case load to this Department's local offices. Tables showing each local authority's estimate of its rent rebate, rent allowance and rate rebate case load, for each year since the introduction of housing benefit, were placed in the Library last July following a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Derbyshire, South (Mrs. Currie) on 19 July 1985, at column 305.

Prescriptions

Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the present cost to his Department of the administrative processing of a prescription.

Mr. Hayhoe: The administrative cost of the Prescription Pricing Authority in 1984-85 was 4·62p per prescription.

Mr. Colin Shepherd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the percentage of prescriptions for prescription-only medicines which have a content value of less than £2.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that the information required can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Death Grant

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the total number of claimants of funeral grant for each year since 1979 at the Highgate and Finsbury Park offices of his Department.

Mr. Major: The information relating to the number of claims to death grant received in the years from April 1980 to date is as follows; figures for the year commencing April 1979 are no longer available:

	Highgate	Finsbury Park
1980-81	1,327	947
1981-82	938	882
1982-83	1,256	1,108
1983-84	1,109	1,028
1984-85	1,116	883
1985-86*	1,311	716

* To 14 January 1986.

Stanley Royd Hospital

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about the circumstances surrounding the recent failure of a private contractor to fulfil a contract to supply clean laundry at the Stanley Royd hospital in Wakefield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: I have no such information. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Wakefield health authority.

Benefits (Payment)

Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what discussions he is having with the banks about the Government's response to the recommendations of the 20th report of the Public Accounts Committee about switching benefit payments from post offices to banks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: No such discussions are currently taking place. The position remains as described in the Government response to the Public Accounts Committee's report.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his reply on 17 January, Official Report, column 746, he will publish a similar table showing the total weekly pensions on the assumption that the additional 2 per cent. contribution to personal and occupational pension schemes ceases after the first five years.

Mr. Newton: Tables P1 to P6 in the technical annex to the White Paper were all prepared on the basis sought. The 2 per cent. incentive addition to the rebate has not been assumed to continue beyond 1992-93. This point is explained in paragraph 1.9 on page 2 of the technical annex.

Income Support

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, pursuant to his reply on 17 January, Official Report, column 746, he will publish a similar table showing the rate of income support for a single person, assuming annual increases in the income support rate in line with average earnings and annual increases of earnings of 1·5 per cent. in real terms (a) including the premium for a person aged over 80 years and disabled and (b) excluding that premium.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Pension Schemes

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assumption was made in table P1 of the technical annex to "Reform of Social Security" as to the proportion of the payments made to personal and occupational pension schemes that would be used to defray adminstrative expenses, to pay commission, or in any other way not resulting in the provision of benefit for or in respect of members of those schemes.

Mr. Newton: Administrative and all other charges are assumed to account for 10 per cent. and 7 per cent. respectively of contributions to personal pensions and occupational money-purchase schemes, as indicated in paragraphs 1.6 and 1.7 of the techincal annex. These assumptions were made for illustrative purposes only and are not intended as firm indications of the Government's intentions.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report details of the waiting lists for hospital treatment for each district health authority in the north-west region.

Mr. Whitney: The requested information is given in the "Hospital In-Patient Waiting List at 31 March 1985, England, District Summaries", a copy of which is in the Library.

Hospital Closures (Burnley)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has received any representations regarding the proposed closure of Bank hall and Marsden hospitals in the Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale district health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: No representations have been received. I understand Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale health authority is about to consult locally on the Bank hall and Marsden hospitals. The hon. Member may therefore wish to address his inquiries to the chairman of the authority.

Nurses

Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has about shortages of trained nurses in hospitals for the mentally sick and handicapped; and if he will give figures on a regional basis.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that detailed information of this nature is not collected centrally. However, a survey for the Review Body for Nursing Staff, Midwives and Health Visitors showed that at 31 March 1984 in England 3 per cent. of all whole-time equivalent funded posts for mental illness and 4·6 per cent. for mental handicap nursing staff remained vacant for at least three months, compared with the average of 2·5 per cent. of all nursing and midwifery staff.

The information for March 1985 is still being validated.

Cash Limits

Mr. Bellingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether any changes will be made to the cash-limited Votes for his Department.

Mr. Newton: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for Class XII, Vote 5, will be increased by £9,241,000 from £762,393,000 to £771,634,000. The increase reflects the costs of additional staff partly offset by savings on other items of expenditure.

Taking account also of costs which fall on the national insurance fund, the overall increase in public expenditure will be £14,161,000, which will be charged to the Reserve and so will not add to the planning total of public expenditure.

Community Pharmacies

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to introduce legislation providing powers to bring in the new contract for National Health Service community pharmacies.

Mr. Hayhoe: In my reply to the hon. Member for Preston (Mr. Thorne) on 14 November 1985, at column 289, I confirmed the Government's commitment to the contract for National Health Service community pharmacists negotiated and agreed with their representatives last summer. Yesterday my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services announced that the Government will introduce a Bill in the present Session to remove Crown immunity and make the Health Service subject to the provisions of the Food Act. This Bill will also propose the provision of powers to introduce, in full, the new pharmacists' contract; and, to re-establish beyond doubt the Government's ability, challenged in court proceedings last autumn, to ensure that the remuneration and reimbursement arrangements for all NHS family practitioner services professional contractors are fair to the contractors themselves and to the taxpayer by allowing past overpayments or underpayments to be reflected in future fees. There provisions will cover Great Britain and, if necessary, be extendable to Northern Ireland.

Hip Operations

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the modal average interval between the date a patient is placed on the waiting list and the date of admission to a National Health Service hospital for a total hip replacement or other arthroplasty of the hip in England for the last year for which figures are available and what were the longest and shortest waits respectively.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 21 January 1986, c. 133-34]: The estimated modal average interval between the date a patient was placed on the waiting list and the date of admission to a National Health Service non-psychiatric hospital for total hip replacement or other arthroplasty of the hip in England in 1983, the latest year for which figures are available centrally, was between eight and nine weeks. As information is held centrally on a sample basis, it is not possible to ascertain maximum and minimum waiting times precisely but in 1983 about 2 per cent. of the recorded waiting times in the sample were three years or more and about 2 per cent. were less than two weeks.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people qualify for supplementary benefit additions for (a) domestic help, (b) heating, (c) disabled persons heating, (d) diet, (e) laundry, (f) special clothing, (g) attendance costs, (h) bathing needs and (i) blindness; and how many people qualify for (i) all of these, (ii) seven to eight of these, (iii) four to six of these, (iv) two in three of these and (v) one of these.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 22 January 1986, c. 234]: Estimated numbers at December 1983, the latest date for which information is available, are as follows:

	Number of claimants with additions (thousands)
(a) Domestic assistance	2
(b) Heating (excluding item (c))	2,471
(c) Disabled person's heating*	116
(d) Diet	429
(e) Laundry	121
(f) Special clothing†	22
(g) Attendance needs	Less than 500
(h) Baths	13
(i) Blindness	36
(i) In receipt of all the above additions	None
(ii) In receipt of seven to eight	None
(iii) In receipt of four to six	6
(iv) In receipt of two to three	460
(v) In receipt of one only	2,206

* Payable under paragraph 7 of Schedule 4 to the Supplementary Benefit (Requirements) Regulations 1983 (SI 1983 No. 1399).

† Includes additions for heavy wear and tear on clothing due to disability and non-standard size clothing and footwear.

EMPLOYMENT

Job Creation

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General (1) what are the original sources (with approximate dates) from which the estimates of percentage impact on unemployment, shown in table 3.7.13 of "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1986-87 to 1988-89," Cmnd. 9702-II, are derived for each of the following employment measures: the community programme, community industry, the job release scheme, the job splitting scheme and the young workers' scheme;

(2) what are the sources (with approximate dates) from which the estimates of the percentage impact on unemployment, contained in the special employment and training press notice, are derived for each of the following measures: the enterprise allowance scheme, the YTS and training in industry.

Mr. Lang: Relevant information is derived from ongoing internal monitoring of the measures and from sample surveys conducted by external consultants. Copies of their reports are placed in the Library as soon as is practicable.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General what is the percentage impact on unemployment of the enterprise allowance sheme, the YTS and training in industry assumed by his Department for the purposes of the estimated direct effect of the special employment and training measures shown in its monthly unemployment and vacancies and special employment and training measures press notice.

Mr. Lang: 69 per cent. in December. This depends on a number of uncertain assumptions and is a best estimate of the direct effects only.

Ms. Clare Short asked the Paymaster General when the estimate contained in the special employment and training press notice of the percentage impact on unemployment was last revised; and what was the reason for, and the effect of, the revision for each of the following measures: the community programme, community industry, the job release scheme, the job splitting scheme, the young workers' scheme, YTS, training in industry and the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Lang: The estimate of the impact on unemployment of the measures covered in the special employment and training measures press notice usually changes each month as coverage of each individual measure changes or if any assumptions are changed. Measures without changed coverage over the past two months were community industry, training in industry and the job splitting scheme.

Travel-to-work Areas

Mr. Maclean asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to review the method by which travel-to-work areas are determined; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The travel-to-work areas, and the methods used in deriving them, were reviewed in 1984 using the data on the pattern of journeys to work provided by the 1981 census of population. The definitions of the revised areas were published, together with a description of the methodology, in a supplement to the September 1984 edition of Employment Gazette, a copy of which is in the Library. Only censuses of population provide sufficiently detailed and comprehensive data on travel patterns to form the basis of a review of travel-to-work areas. The next review is therefore scheduled to be undertaken when the results of the 1991 census are available.

Dairy Industry

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Paymaster General how many people were employed in the dairy industry in November 1984 and 1983, respectively.

Mr. Lang: In November 1984 there were an estimated 41,800 employees in employment in the milk and milk products industry (activity heading 4130 of the 1980 Standard Industrial Classification) in Great Britain. The corresponding figure for November 1983 was 42,500.

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General if he will provide an analysis in percentage terms and overall numbers of those entering YTS programmes: (a) at 16 and (b) at 17 years of age by region.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is given in the table.

Entrants to YTS from 1 April to 31 December 1985

* The figures in this column include entrants in special groups who entered YTS at 18 years of age or older.

Mr. Sheerman asked the Paymaster General (1) if he will provide an analysis of destinations of YTS leavers by region, in overall number and percentage terms;

(2) if he will provide a breakdown of regional differences of destinations (unemployment, employment, further education, and so on) from the Manpower Services Commission 100 per cent. survey of YTS leavers.

Mr. Lang: A regional breakdown of survey results covering young people who left YTS during the period April to July 1985 is given in the following table:

Notes:

i) Follow-up results are liable to seasonal fluctuations. The April to July period may not be representative of the results for a full year.

ii) Leaver results should be considered alongside regional unemployment rates to put them into proper context.

Start-up Grants

Mr. Madden asked the Paymaster General what is the availability of start-up grants, related to the enterprise programme, in Bradford and in West Yorkshire generally; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: For 1985-86 there are 1,372 places available on the enterprise allowance scheme in West Yorkshire, which includes Bradford. At 31 December 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, 964 people had joined the scheme in that area. No separate figures are available for Bradford.

SOLICITOR GENERAL FOR SCOTLAND

Drug Abuse

Mr. David Marshall asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will take steps to prosecute shopkeepers who sell kits which can be used for drug abuse, and in particular for cocaine snorting.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland: The exposure for sale or selling of kits which can be used for drug abuse is a practice to be deplored. It is not, however, possible to say in general terms that such activity is necessarily one in respect of which criminal proceedings can or will be taken. Each such case which is drawn to the attention of the criminal authorities will be closely investigated with a view to possible prosecution. In certain circumstances even in the absence of the possession of controlled drugs or an intent to supply such drugs there could be a contravention of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971, including section 19.

Miners' Dispute

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will list for the duration of the miners' dispute (a) the number of people arrested and charged with an offence; (b) the number of people convicted; and (c) the number of people acquitted, stating in each case the nature of the offence.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland [pursuant to his reply 3 December 1985, c. 168]: During the course of the miners' dispute 1,504 persons were arrested, 1,026 persons were prosecuted, 720 persons were convicted and 304 persons were acquitted in respect of offences arising out of the miners' strike. The figure for the number of persons acquitted includes 14 persons whose convictions were quashed on appeal. As a result of the failure of two persons to appear for trial, there are two cases still outstanding. Information on the nature and number of the charges involved is set out in the following table. A large number of the persons brought to trial faced two or more charges.

My reply on 4 April 1985, at columns 718-19, should be revised to show 4 convictions for possession of an offensive weapon and 3 convictions for theft and as at 22 March 1985 no acquittals.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Solicitor-General for Scotland if he will list for each region of Scotland his most recent information on the number of arrests, cases where proceedings have been instituted and convictions arising from the miners' strike; and if he will list the offences for which persons have been (a) charged and (b) convicted.

The Solicitor-General for Scotland [pursuant to his reply, 3 December 1985, c. 168]: The information is set out in the following tables.

The first table details for each local authority region in Scotland the number of persons arrested; the number of persons prosecuted and the number of persons convicted in respect of offences arising out of the miners's strike. The figure for the number of persons convicted does not include 14 persons whose convictions were quashed on appeal. As a result of the failure of two persons to appear for trial, there are two cases still outstanding.

The remaining tables set out for each Scottish local authority region involved, the nature and number of charges brought by procurators fiscal in respect of such offences and the nature and number of such charges which resulted in conviction. A large number of the persons brought to trial faced two or more charges.

My reply on 4 April 1985, at columns 718-9, should be revised to show four convictions for possession of an offensive weapon and three convictions for theft and, as at 22 March 1985, no acquittals.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Robbery and Assault

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis showing for the year 1984 in respect of each London borough of police districts (a) the ages and sex of victims of recorded offences of robbery and (b) the ages and sex of victims of recorded woundings and serious assaults.

Mr. Mellor: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the readily available information is as given in the following table. To provide a breakdown of this information by boroughs or police districts would involve disproportionate cost; it would require extensive tables of figures, many of which would be small and so subject to wide variation and possibly misleading.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis showing for the year 1984 in respect of each London borough, separately, the number of reported crimes and the number of offences cleared up in each of the following categories: (1) violence against the person, broken down into (a) murder, (b) manslaughter, (c) death by dangerous driving, (d) wounding and (e) assaults; (2) robbery broken down into (a) less serious offences of violence, (b) street robbery of personal property, (c) other robbery, (d) serious offences of violence and (e) robbery with a firearm; (3) sexual offences, broken down into (a) rape, (b) assaults on females and (c) assaults on males; (4) burglary, broken down into (a) residential property and (b) commercial property; (5) motor vehicle crimes, broken down into (a) theft, (b) stealing property from and (c) damage; and (6) theft and handling stolen goods, broken down into (a) theft from the person, (b) theft from a dwelling and (c) theft of a pedal cycle.

Mr. Mellor: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the information that is readily available on notifiable offences recorded and cleared up in each borough or district in 1984 is as given in the following tables. These tables correspond to those which will be placed in the Library for 1985 and each subsequent year, in accordance with the reply to my hon. Friend on 8 May 1985, columns 410-11. To produce a more detailed breakdown by type of offence would involve disproportionate costs and require extensive tables of figures, many of which would be small and so subject to wide variation and possibly misleading.

Labour Party Offices, London (Incident)

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to the circumstances surrounding an incident on 3 February in which a dustbin was thrown through the window of the Labour party offices in High Street North, E.12, traffic police refused to detain a suspect who had been pointed out to them and an emergency call took over 20 minutes to bring police on to the scene; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commission that following a telephone report to the police by a member of the public who witnessed this incident, a police officer arrived 18 minutes later. The police transit van which coincidentally was in the area was manned by traffic wardens who were not empowered to assist in this matter. Police inquiries into the incident are continuing.

Merseyside Fire Brigade

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the authorised establishment of the Merseyside fire brigade; how many vacancies currently exist; what is its anticipated establishment on disbandment of the Merseyside county council; what is its current level of financing; what is the projected level of financing after disbandment of the Merseyside metropolitan council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The latest information available to us is that the notified uniformed establishment (including control room staff) of the Merseyside Metropolitan County fire brigade was 1,651 at 1 January 1985, and there were 89 vacancies at the end of 1985. The establishment on 1 April will be that to be determined under the Fire and Civil Defence Authorities (Establishment, Support Services and Management Schemes) Regulations 1985. The metropolitan council has no agreed current budget for any of its services. It is estimated that the maximum precept level prescribed for 1986-87 for the new Merseyside Fire and Civil Defence Authority under the draft Local Government Act 1985 (Police and Fire and Civil Defence Authorities) Precepts Limitation Order 1986 laid on 30 January will yield £28·2 million, and we are satisfied that that sum is sufficient broadly to maintain the existing level of fire protection.

Drugs Abuse

Mr. Lawler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will now publish the report prepared for Foreign Ministers of states participating in the 1985 economic summit on the options for individual and collective actions to intensify the fight against drug abuse.

Mr. Hurd: Yes. I have arranged for copies of the report to be placed in the Library.

DEFENCE

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by his Department with grant aid in the last financial year for which figures are available, and the size of the grant so given.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer my hon. Friend to the full list of grants-in-aid made by my Department which appears in Vote 1, section K, of the Defence Estimates.

▽ Accounts of expenditure out of these grants in aid will be audited by the Comptroller and Auditor General. Any unexpended balances of the sums issued will not be liable to surrender to the Consolidated Fund.

■ Items where provision is sought under the sole authority of part I of the Estimate and of the confirming Appropriation Act.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations, and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Ministry of Defence makes no such payments to governmental agencies.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The provision of grants-in-aid is subject to specific conditions which cover such matters as the purposes for which they may be used. My Department takes a close interest in the activities of the recipient bodies and has a right of access to their accounts.

Trident

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the latest progress with the Trident programme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The project remains on programme to enter service as planned in the mid-1990s.

Nuclear Bases (Security)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is satisfied with the security at nuclear bases in Britain.

Mr. Stanley: Security at all such bases is kept under constant review.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current annual defence expenditure incurred in the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest estimated cost to the defence budget for 1985-86 of the Falkland Islands.

Mr. Stanley: The latest estimated cost to the defence budget for Falkland Islands expenditure in 1985-86 is £562 million, including £190 million for replacing equipment lost during the campaign.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many members in each year since its inception have been discharged from the Ulster Defence Regiment under the provisions of paragraph 9.414, Queen's Regulations 1975 or its equivalent.

Mr. Lee: The information is not available in the form requested and could be provided only with disproportionate cost.

Military Bases

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all bases and facilities used by the Ministry of Defence and British forces in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland, (d) Northern Ireland and (e) elsewhere.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost and effort.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether any of the following bases and facilities have been made available for use by United States forces in the United Kingdom: Stornoway, RAF Brize Norton, Cowden, RAF High Wycombe, Holbeach, Jurby, RAF Marham, Oakhanger, Pitreavie, Rosyth, Plymouth, Shetland Islands, Thurso and Wainfleet.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have nothing to add to my answers given on 27 November 1985, at columns 577-78, and 13 January 1986, at column 538.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether RAF Cranwell and RAE Bedford are no longer United States bases or facilities.

Mr. Norman Lamont: There is no United States peacetime presence at either of these locations.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence where and for what purpose an additional main operating base for United States forces in the United Kingdom has come into use since 1 March 1983.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The United States air force has seven main operating bases in the United Kingdom; this number has not changed in the period since 1 March 1983. In a written answer on 27 November 1985, at columns 577-78, the United States Navy's mooring at Holy Loch was, for reasons of simplicity, included under the heading "main operating bases". This should not be taken to imply any change of function or status of this facility.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence why the list of United States bases and facilities given in the answer of 27 November 1985, Official Report, column 577-78, does not include contingency wartime hospitals at Bordon, Newton, Waterbeach, Cosford, Colerne, Bulford, Tidworth and Locking.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Contingency wartime hospitals do not exist at these locations.

United States Military Personnel

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department is kept informed by the United States authorities of the precise location and function of each of the 32,000 United States military personnel in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My Department is kept informed of total numbers of United States military personnel deployed in the United Kingdom, and of major changes to the numbers at particular bases associated with changes in operational deployments.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence why the number of United States forces in Britain has increased from 24,000 in January 1980 to approximately 32,000; what functions these 32,000 personnel perform; and if he will list their distribution base by base and facility by facility.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The increase in numbers of United States service personnel stationed in the United Kingdom since 1980 is due to a number of factors, including the build-up of the ground-launched cruise missile programme, the deployment to the United Kingdom of EF111 and TR1 aircraft, and the establishment of facilities at RAF Kemble. The overall function of these personnel is to contribute to NATO's collective defence. On the numbers stationed at individual bases and their precise functions, I refer the hon. Member to my answer to his further question of today's date.

Defence Procurement

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has as to the total number of employees at the most recently available date employed by each United Kingdom-based defence procurement contractor paid £5 million or more for equipment in 1983-84, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont Information on the number of employees working for individual companies is collected on a confidential basis and cannot be published.

Security (Disciplinary Action)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many officers and men in the Royal Air Force have been disciplined for major breaches of security in each of the last three years;

(2) how many officers and men in the Royal Navy have been disciplined for major breaches of security in each of the last three years;

(3) how many officers and men in the Army have been diciplined for major breaches of security in each of the last three years;

(4) how many officers and men in the Royal Air Force have left in each of the last three years, due to the fact that their services are no longer required;

(5) how many officers and men have left the Royal Navy, in each of the last three years, due to the fact that their services were no longer required;

(6) how many officers and men in the Army have left in each of the last three years due to the fact that their services were no longer required.

Mr. Lee: I shall answer shortly.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Peter Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total verified membership of registered trade unions within his Department in (a) industrial and (b) non-industrial grades at the last convenient date.

Mr. Lee: This information is not available from the Government's statistics.

Mr. Peter Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total number of civil servants employed within his Department in (a) industrial and (b) non-industrial grades at the last convenient date.

Mr. Lee: As at 1 October 1985 there were 78,330 United Kingdom-based industrial and 94,094 non-industrial civil servants employed within the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Peter Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received regarding check off facilities for members of registered trade unions which are departmentally recognised but not part of the Council of Civil Service Unions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The Secretary of State for Defence has received representations regarding the check-off facilities from one trade union which is not a member of the Council of Civil Service Unions. That union is the Ministry of Defence Staff Association (MODSA). MODSA has recognition for two departmental groups: the royal observer corps and the mooring, salvage and boom officers. Check-off facilities have been made available for these groups.

Host Nation Support

Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list the technical arrangements which have been concluded between the United Kingdom and the Federal Republic of Germany following the 1983 treaty on host nation support during crisis or war;

(2) what technical arrangements or other provisions are made for German civilian labour to be provided to assist United Kingdom forces in Germany during crisis or war;

(3) if he will list the subjects of all technical arrangements which may be desired by either party but which remain to be concluded between the United Kingdom and the Federal Republic of Germany following the 1983 treaty on host nation support during crisis or war, Cmnd. 9202, 1984.

Mr. Stanley: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 20 November 1985 at column 200.

Atomic Weapons Research Establishment, Aldermaston

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether any extensions of building facilities are planned for the Atomic Weapons Research Establishment, Aldermaston for purposes of the Trident project.

Mr. Lee: A major programme to replace or improve aging capital facilities at the atomic weapons research establishment, Aldermaston, began before the decision on Trident was made in order to maintain a basic nuclear capability for the future and to ensure the achievement of essential health and safety standards. None of the new facilities is therefore solely for the purpose of Trident.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Church Land (Solihull)

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the hon. Member for Wokingham as representing the Church Commissioners, if he will indicate what Church land is owned by the Commissioners in the borough of Solihull.

Sir William van Straubenzee: None.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 10 February 1986

PRIME MINISTER

EC (Budget)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will set out in a statement the conclusions on the imposing of strict budgetary discipline on the European Economic Community which was agreed at the meeting of the European Council at Fontainebleau; and if she is satisfied that these limits and disciplines are being adhered to.

The Prime Minister: A copy of the budgetary discipline text, as adopted by the Foreign Affairs Council on 4 December 1984 is available in the Library.

As my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Treasury told the House on 3 February at column 43, the most important element in budget discipline, the agricultural guideline, has been fully respected in the 1986 budget as adopted by the Parliament. The non-obligatory spending totals in the Budget are, however, incompatible with the Council's budget discipline conclusions. The Council and individual member states, including the United Kingdom, are challenging the budget as adopted by the Parliament before the European Court.

European Assembly

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister why she agreed to references in Community law to the European Assembly being altered to the European Parliament in the European Act.

The Prime Minister: The European Act follows current usage in the Community. Whatever terminology is used, the nature of the institution is unchanged.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will set out in a statement the additional rights, entitlements and privileges which will be given to the European Assembly in consequence of the European Act.

The Prime Minister: Under a new co-operation procedure, an absolute majority of the Members of the European Parliament will be able, in certain areas, to propose amendments to Commission proposals. It will be for the Council to decide whether to accept such amendments. The European Parliament will also have the right of assent to new accessions and new association agreements.

EC (Health and Safety)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister why the United Kingdom withdrew its reserve in relation to majority voting on health and safety directives by the Council of Ministers; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: As I made clear to the House on 5 December 1985 in my statement on the Luxembourg European Council, the United Kingdom reserve on qualified majority voting in respect of the proposed EC treaty amendment on working conditions was entered because we wished to avoid unfair burdens being imposed on small and medium-sized businesses. That aim has been secured through the inclusion in the treaty text of a specific provision protecting the position of such undertakings, thus enabling the United Kingdom reserve to be lifted.

Cabinet Office

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister with whom ministerial responsibility lies for disciplinary action against civil servants in the Cabinet Office.

The Prime Minister: I am Minister with departmental responsibility for the Cabinet Office; I am assisted in the day-to-day discharge of this responsibility by the Minister of State, Privy Council Office. Disciplinary powers are exercised, in the Cabinet Office as in other Departments, by the permanent head of the Department.

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if she will list the activities of the Cabinet Office for which she doe not have ministerial responsibility.

The Prime Minister: I have departmental responsibility for all of the activities of the Cabinet Office, with the exception of the Civil Service Commissioners who have certain independent responsibilities under Orders in Council.

European Union

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to the answer of 5 December, Official Report, column 437, if it is the policy of Her Majesty's Government to transform relations amongst member states of the EEC into a European union; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Our policy is unchanged. The phraseology used by my hon. Friend appears in the Preamble to the Single European Act which itself refers back to the Stuttgart Solemn Declaration of 1983.

Leak Inquiries

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister in what publication the rules and procedures of a leak inquiry are contained.

The Prime Minister: None. For each inquiry, the procedure is suited to the needs and circumstances of the case.

Fisheries

Dr. Godman asked the Prime Minister what co-operation there is between the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the DAFS in monitoring the additional demands made on the fisheries protection services by Spanish and Portuguese accession.

The Prime Minister: There is full co-operation, including frequent meetings between the two fisheries Departments, to discuss the deployment of fisheries protection resources in response to enforcement needs. In addition, both Departments co-operate closely with the authorities in France and the Republic of Ireland on the surveillance arrangements.

Westland plc

Mr. McNamara asked the Prime Minister if she will list all contacts during 1984 and 1985 between Her Majesty's Government on the one hand and (a) Lord Aldington and (b) any other representatives of Westland plc on the other.

The Prime Minister: In 1984 and 1985, as before and since, there were very numerous contacts between Westland and Government departments, especially the Department of Trade and Industry, the sponsor Department for the company, and the Ministry of Defence, its most important customer. It would be impracticable to list these contacts.

Privatisation

Mr. Hickmet asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement about the effects on the British economy since 1979 as a result of the Government's privatisation programme; and what future effects she expects.

The Prime Minister: Privatisation, through exposing former state-owned companies more fully to the disciplines and opportunities of the market, and reducing political interference, improves the efficiency of businesses that are crucial to our overall economic performance. As such, it forms an important part of the Government's overall strategy for long-term economic growth.

The privatisation programme is also promoting the widening of share ownership, further reinforcing the enterprise culture that is essential for economic success.

Since 1979 12 major companies, comprising some 20 per cent. of the state commercial sector, have been privatised. By the end of this Parliament, a further 20 per cent. should have been transferred to the private sector.

Mr. Hickmet asked the Prime Minister if she will list the countries whose Governments have asked the United Kingdom for information or help in formulating their own privatisation policies.

The Prime Minister: The success of the United Kingdom's privatisation programme is internationally recognised. A number of overseas Governments and Members of Parliament have approached Government Departments here, as well as City institutions, privatised companies and other bodies, to ask about our privatisation experience. It would not be practical to list all the Governments who have made these inquiries, as no central record is kept.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel

24. Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate how many people will be employed from Wales on the construction of the Channel tunnel; in which industries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: It is for the Channel Tunnel Group-France-Manche to decide, subject to European Community rules, how to award contracts for construction of the Link and for the supply of materials. I know it is CTG-FM's intention to invite bids from companies throughout the United Kingdom. No doubt the business will go to those which are most competitive.

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration has been given to the possible involvement of private capital in developing rail services to serve the Channel tunnel.

Mr. David Mitchell: Channel fixed link shuttle rail services will be financed and operated entirely by the private sector. I would welcome any proposals from BR for the involvement on a commercial basis of private capital in the provision of through train services.

Vehicle Relicensing

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the plans he has for improved vehicle relicensing facilities.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Following an agreement I concluded with the chairman of the Post Office last year, an extra 500 sub-post offices will be added to the vehicle relicensing network over the period to the middle of 1988. This will give a total of over 3,500 post offices which can be used for vehicle relicensing. In addition motorists who are not in possession of a licence renewal reminder form or a registration document will shortly be able to relicense at the Post Office. Steps are also being taken to tighten up the security of this transaction. Motorists will then be able to use post offices for virtually all vehicle relicensing transactions.

Radioactive Materials (Transportation)

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now take steps to collect information on the movement of nuclear and other radioactive materials; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The regulations which cover the transport of radioactive materials require adequate protection to be built in to the containers used, so that the materials could not present a significant danger, even in the event of a severe accident. Safety is not therefore dependent on special routeing. No useful purpose would be served by collecting information on the movement of individual consignments.

Marine Pollution

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to publish the report on counter-pollution measures to protect marine and bird life from sea and shore pollution from shipping.

Mr. Ridley: I have no plans to publish a report on counter-pollution measures to protect marine and bird life from sea and shore pollution from shipping. If the hon. Member is referring to the promised report on counter-pollution measures taken following the grounding of the Bridgeness off the Pembrokeshire coast in June 1985, then I refer him to the answer of 5 December 1985 at columns 304-5. As promised in that answer, a copy of the report has been placed in the House Library.

Road Accidents

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many motorists' deaths occurred on the M1, M6 and M3 between June 1984 and June 1985.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Following is the information:

Deaths on motorways M1, M3 and M6 July 1984 to June 1985

	M1	M3	M6
Pedestrians*	6	2	1
Motor cyclists	3	0	2
Car occupants	24	4	27
Light goods vehicle occupants	4	1	3
Heavy goods vehicle occupants	5	0	5
TOTAL	42	7	38

* Includes drivers or passengers of motor vehicles who had left their vehicle and who were standing or walking when hit by a vehicle.

Leeds (Traffic Problems)

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made initiating a study of traffic problems east of Leeds following his decision on the A1-M1 link; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I hope to make a further statement soon.

Stansted Airport

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the list he has received of highway improvements schemes from the Hertfordshire and Essex county councils relating to the expansion of Stansted airport, together with the estimated costs when they are available to him; and if he will indicate his response to the request that these schemes should be funded by additional capital allocations to the councils concerned.

Mr. Ridley: The councils have provided the following lists with their estimates of costs:

	£ million
a) Hertfordshire (dual carriageway unless stated)
A120 Puckeridge to Little Hadham	7·78
A120 Little Hadham to Bishop's Stortford	4·98
A120 Bishop's Stortford Bypass	5·97
Bishop's Stortford SW distributor—(single carriageway)	3·20
A414 Stansted Abbots to Harlow (Eastwick)	5·98
A414 Harlow (Eastwick) to A1184	6·00
Total	33·91
b) Essex
New bypass of Takeley requiring amendments to the airport road system and extension to the Great Dunmow bypass	16·00
Widening of Great Dunmow bypass	1·50
Widening from Great Dunmow to Rayne or provision of second carriageway (costed option)	10·00
M11/B1383 interchange at Quendon	3·00
New single and dual carriageway from A1184 to M11 (Harlow link)—estimate for single carriageway	6·00
Widening of A120 from B1383 to M11	1·50
Total	38·00

We will meet representatives of both Councils to discuss these and other proposals. I do not speculate on the outcome. We shall take into account any proposals for capital expenditure on local roads when the Councils submit their Transport Policies and Programmes for future years.

Operator Licensing System

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning the 'O' operator licensing system.

Mr. David Mitchell: Several aspects of the PSV operator licensing system were debated during the passage of the Transport Act 1985. On the goods side the department is currently considering representations on the proposed changes to the arrangements for charging fees, and also responses to the review of the environmental provisions which came into effect in June 1984.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to alter the regulations concerning the 'O' operator licensing system.

Mr. David Mitchell: Various changes in the PSV operator licensing system will be made by statutory instruments during this year as part of the implementation of the Transport Act 1985. On the goods side, the Department has recently consulted interested parties on amendments to the regulations which would affect the basis on which fees for operator licences are charged.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Motoring Convictions

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the police maintain records of minor motoring convictions following disqualification.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The police do not maintain records of minor motoring convictions.

Prisoners (Accommodation)

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria were used in deciding the amount of double cell accommodation to be built into Woolwich and Bicester prisons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: In relation to Woolwich prison, I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question by the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) on 5 December at column 320. The design for Bicester prison is based in part on the Woolwich design, and similar considerations apply.

National Reporting Centre

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how often he met the chief constable in charge of the national reporting centre throughout the dispute between the National Union of Mineworkers and the National Coal Board.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The president of the Association of Chief Police Officers has control of the centre ex officio. My right hon. and learned Friend the then Home Secretary met the two chief constables who were successively president of ACPO during the period of the dispute on a number of occasions.

Auld Committee

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many days the Auld committee on Sunday trading sat for; from how many witnesses it received oral evidence; from how many witnesses it received written evidence; and what was the total estimated cost of the inquiry.

Mr. Waddington: I regret that not all this information is readily available. I shall write to the hon. Member.

Immigration

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current waiting time for persons holding British overseas citizenship who do not have an automatic right of abode but have applied, for instance, on quota systems, for the right of abode, broken-down by each country of application.

Mr. Waddington: Certain British overseas citizens are eligible for admission to the United Kingdom under the special voucher scheme introduced in 1968. A British overseas citizen who meets the requirements of this scheme may be issued with a special voucher, which does not confer on the holder a right of abode in the United Kingdom but enables him to come to this country for immediate settlement.

In India, applicants for special vouchers who were interviewed at the end of 1985 had waited eight years but current estimates suggest that those now applying will have to wait for about four years as the number of applications lodged has declined in recent years. In East Africa applicants for special vouchers were interviewed within 1½ months and there are no queues elsewhere.

Police (Discipline)

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many times the right of appeal against the internal disciplinary system in the police forces has been exercised (i) for members of the regular constabulary and (ii) for members of the special constabulary for each of the past three years.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Appeals were received from members of police forces dealt with for offences against discipline as follows:

Year	Number
1983	*76
1984	†76
1985	*71

* Including eight withdrawn before determination.
† Including nine withdrawn before determination.

There is no formal discipline code for special constables and therefore no procedures for appeals to the Secretary of State.

Motorway Accidents

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how precisely police forces record the location of accidents involving the deaths of motorists on motorways; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that the police record the location of cars involved in accidents on motorways by reference to the numbered marker posts situated at 100 m intervals along each carriageway. Photographs are also normally taken in fatal accident cases.

Neighbourhood Watch

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report the proportion of the population of each police authority area in England covered by neighbourhood watch schemes.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information required is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Visitors

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department takes to ensure that persons admitted to the United Kingdom as visitors leave the United Kingdom upon the expiry of their leave to enter.

Mr. Waddington: The conditions on which persons are admitted to the United Kingdom as visitors require them to leave the country before their period of leave expires, save where an application is made for an extension of stay or change of immigration status.

The embarkation of some visitors is confirmed by reference to the record on the current computer system and those who overstay their leave are liable to prosecution or to the other enforcement action for which provision is made in the Immigration Act 1971.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reports have been published by the Animal Experimentation Advisory Committee since 1979.

Mr. Mellor: In 1979 the advisory committee published a report on the LD50 test. In 1981 it published a report on the framework of legislation to replace the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876.

Military Aid to Civil Power

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the mechanism whereby military personnel are mobilised in aid of the police for exercises such as those at Heathrow and for other public order duties;

(2) to whom the police apply when seeking assistance from the military; and whether an application from a chief constable or Commissioner of Police is required to be considered by or supported by any independent individual or body prior to the request going forward.

Mr. Giles Shaw: A decision to request the deployment of military units to Heathrow is taken at a senior level in the Metropolitan police. The request is made to the Home Office where it is considered in consultation with other interested Government Departments. If no objections are raised, the police are given authority to proceed with the detailed arrangements and the Ministry of Defence authorise the deployment of the military units.

As to public order matters, the police have the primary responsibility for maintaining the peace. A chief officer of police who required reinforcements in dealing with public disorder would seek them first from other chief officers. Under long-standing arrangements, the deployment of service men to assist the police, as a measure of last resort, would require the approval of Ministers of the Crown.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what section or department inside the Home Office is specifically responsible for military aid to the civil power; and how many people are employed on such work.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Home Office aspects of this subject are dealt with by the police department. No one is employed full time on it.

Sinsemilla

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to the extent of the availability and illicit consumption of the drug sinsemilla, a derivative of the cannabis plant; what steps he proposes to take to control the incidence of this drug; if he will call for reports from chief constables as to the numbers of prosecutions of persons alleged to be dealing in this drug or to have exhibited posters offering it for sale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have no evidence at present that sinsemilla is available on any significant scale in the United Kingdom. As a form of cannabis it is already controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 and there are adequate powers to deal with persons who deal in it or who offer it for sale. My right hon. Friend has no plans, in the short term, for calling for special reports from chief constables, but we shall ensure that the Home Office drugs inspectorate monitors the situation.

WALES

Training

13. Mr. Gwilym Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he is satisfied with the number of training places in Wales in the current year and the number planned for 1986-87; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Yes. This year the Manpower Services Commission expects that around 10,200 adults will start on training courses. The provisional planned figure for next year is around 14,000, which represents a three-fold increase since 1984-85. The two-year YTS will commence in April and 27,000 young people are expected to participate in 1986-87.

Community Programme

14. Mr. Grist asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he is satisfied with the operation of the community programme in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Yes. At the end of December some 12,090 people were employed on the community programme in Wales and the Manpower Services Commission are confident of filling the 20,000 places allocated to Wales by June of this year.

Wales Tourist Board

15. Sir Anthony Meyer asked the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received regarding the proposal by the Trade and Industry Committee that the Wales tourist board should be abolished.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I have received letters from two local authorities and two town councils; and the Wales tourist board has responded to my invitation to comment on this report. I also took note of the questions and comments of members of the Select Committee on Welsh Affairs when I appeared before them on 29 January.

A5 (Traffic Flows)

16. Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about projected traffic flows along the A5 on Anglesey after the completion of the A55 dual carriageway and the roll-on roll-off deep-water berth in Holyhead.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I have received representations about future traffic flows on the A5 in Anglesey from my hon. Friend and from the Holyhead town council.

Primary Schools

17. Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many primary schools in Wales have (a) fewer than 50 pupils and (b) 50 pupils or more; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: 354 and 1,442 respectively.

Farm Incomes

18. Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average per capita income of self-employed farmers in Wales in each of the years 1980 to 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Data showing net incomes of self-employed farmers are not available. Data showing net incomes on full-time farms for the period up to 1982-83 are published in "Farm Accounts in Wales", copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Figures for 1983-84 and 1984-85, which are the latest available, are given in press notices issued by the Welsh Office, copies of which I am sending to the hon. Gentleman.

Sir Raymond Gower asked the Secretary of State for Wales by what proportion farm incomes have fallen during each of the past two years (a) in Wales and (b) in the area of the Vale of Glamorgan council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: For Wales it is estimated that average farm incomes fell by 4 per cent. between 1982-83 and 1983-84 and by 10 per cent. between 1983-84 and 1984-85. These latest estimates are based on the farm accounts of a sample of farms. Separate figures are not available for the area of the Vale of Glamorgan council.

Advance Factories (New Quay)

19. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to build advance factories in New Quay, Ceredigion, during the next five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No provision is made for advance factory building in New Quay in the 1986-87 construction programme of the Development Board for Rural Wales which I approved last month. Two factories are to be built in Ceredigion, both in Aberystwyth. Building programmes for the years after 1986-87 have yet to be determined.

Hill Farmers

20. Mr. Harvey asked the Secretary of State for Wales what measures are being taken to safeguard the livelihoods of marginal hill farmers in Wales after the 43 per cent. fall in agricultural incomes last year.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The net farm income of hill and upland farms in Wales for 1985-86 is now forecast to decline by much less than the 43 per cent. national figure. The Government have already taken action to safeguard the livelihoods of farmers in hill areas by significantly increasing the hill livestock compensatory allowances for 1986 and by granting fodder aid in those areas most severely affected by last summer's poor harvest.

Social Services (Expenditure)

21. Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he takes to ensure the adequacy of standards and even distribution of resources in the community care, health and social services sectors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: My right hon. Friend has increased the financial resources for the Health Service in Wales to record levels. To ensure that these resources are used effectively to improve patient care he has implemented the Griffiths report on the management of the NHS.

The provision of personal social services is the responsibility of individual local authorities.

Teachers (Dispute)

Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Wales what meetings he has had since Christmas with the teaching trade unions in Wales to discuss the teachers' pay dispute; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: None. Responsibility for teachers pay rests with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science.

Urban Programme

22. Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will indicate the level of resources allocated to the urban programme since 1979.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Resources allocated in Wales to the urban programme, which since 1982 has also included the urban development grant scheme, have increased from £7·1 million in 1979-80 to £29 million in 1986-87, or by 144 per cent. in real terms. The total allocated since 1979-80 is £148 million.

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the urban development grant projects approved by his Department during 1985, stating for each project the total amount of grant, the percentage of grant comprising the total cost of the project, the name of the public or private sector participants within each project, and the cost from public funds for each new job created within each project.

Mr. Mark Robinson: A list of all projects approved for urban development grant in Wales and which are completed, currently under way, or have yet to commence has been placed in the Library of the House. This contains, for each project, a brief description, the name of the sponsoring local authority and private sector participant(s), the total amount of grant awarded and the estimated total development cost.

Seven projects were approved in the calender year 1985, of which two were approved-in-principle only and are subject to further negotiations on the precise level of grant. For the remaining five just over £9·5 million of urban development grant will bring forward a total investment of around £52 million. The average estimated public expenditure per new job to be created in commercial, industrial and mixed projects is £5,047. This ignores jobs retained, temporary jobs and the other social, economic and environmental benefits.

Cervical Screening

Mr. Coleman asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average length of time taken in National Health Service laboratories in Wales to process and diagnose cervical smears.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information is not collected by the Welsh Office. In January informal inquiries of Welsh health authorities indicated that the time taken for test results to be notified varied between 48 hours and nine weeks of the test being taken. Apart from one laboratory, all were processing them within the eight weeks recommended by the joint NHS-Welsh Office working group on cervical cytology screening services in Wales, as the maximum time.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Buildings

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give details of the surveys his Department is carrying out into school buildings; and if he plans to publish the results.

Mr. Dunn: The Department is seeking the help of local education authorities in carrying out a sample survey of school building improvement needs. The sample comprises about 1,000 county and controlled primary and secondary schools in England. The survey, which has been developed in consultation with the local authority associations, seeks information on the scale and nature of work which might be necessary to bring the schools in the sample to defined standards of educational adequacy and physical condition. Copies of the Department's circular letter on the survey and of the survey questionnaire and notes of guidance have been placed in the Library. My right hon. Friend will inform the House of the outcome of the survey.

ILEA Schools (Admission of Police)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to the answer given to the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland, on 30 January, Official Report, column 571, what information he has as to the willingness of Quinton Kynaston school, St. John's Wood, NW8, to admit the police.

Mr. Chris Patten: I understand that the school does admit the police and that a number of visits are currently being planned.

Japanese and Russian Language Teaching

Mr. Holt asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many universities in the United Kingdom offer Japanese and how many Russian; and how many students are studying one or other, or both.

Mr. Walden: There are 28 universities in the United Kingdom which are offering degree courses in October 1986 in Russian language and studies and four which offer Japanese. In 1984, the latest year for which student numbers are available, there were 530 full-time undergraduates studying Russian language and studies. The numbers studying Japanese are not collected separately but are included within a group of 546 studying Oriental, Asian and African languages and/or studies.

Teachers (Dispute)

Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he intends to take to seek to resolve the teachers' pay dispute in Wales.

Sir Keith Joseph: As I said in my statement on 3 February, at column 29, I welcome the provisional agreement reached at ACAS which holds out the promise of a settlement of the 1985 dispute, a return to normal working in the schools in England and Wales and constructive negotiations on pay, pay structure, duties and conditions of service. I hope that we shall soon see progress in negotiations which will justify the release of the additional resources which the Government have set aside for an increase in teachers' pay.

University Staff

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what meetings he has had with the Committee of Vice Chancellors and Principals, the Association of University Teachers and other groups concerning proposals to review the system of academic tenure in universities.

Mr. Walden: My right hon. Friend discussed the Government's intentions to limit academic tenure with the Committee of Vice chancellors and Principals in October 1984 and with the Association of University Teachers in January 1985. Both bodies have been invited to comment on the detailed proposals for legislation published on 9 December last.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many individuals would be affected by the proposed changes in the system of academic tenure for university lecturers.

Mr. Walden: The proposed limitation of academic tenure, as opposed to any amendment of provision for dismissal for "good cause", will apply only to those appointed after a future date yet to be specified, and to existing staff on promotion. It is therefore not possible to identify the numbers that will be affected.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has made any recent estimate of the degree to which university academic staff salaries are comparable to those on offer in industry to individuals of similar qualification and experience; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: No. The Government continues to believe that the prime determinants of pay levels should be the employers' ability to pay and the need to recruit, retain and motivate staff of the right quality. We noted in our Green Paper on higher education that national undifferentiated pay scales may not always enable institutions to attract staff whose skills are in most demand elsewhere and suggested that the pay structure in the universities should reflect to a greater extent the differential supply of, and demand for, abilities in different subjects.

Students (Maintenance Allowances)

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consideration he is currently giving to the introduction of a national system of maintenance allowances for students undertaking approved courses in schools or colleges beyond the period of compulsory education.

Mr. Chris Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, North-East (Mrs. Short) on 29 November at column 689.

School Examinations

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the costs which will fall upon local education authorities as a result of the proposed implementation of the new GCSEs; and if he will give (a) the proposed examination fee, (b) the revised cost for equipment, stationery and text books, and (c) the financial implications for staffing costs in schools as a result of the new examination syllabuses.

Mr. Chris Patten: The general criteria for the GCSE provide that syllabuses and methods of assessment should not make unreasonable demands on human or financial resources. The Government's expenditure plans should allow authorities to make appropriate provision for the GCSE provided that they take advantage of the scope for efficiency savings and contain their costs. The GCSE examining groups have not yet determined examinations fees for the GCSE.

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if the new GCSEs will meet the educational and academic standards now available in the GCE and CSE examinations.

Mr. Chris Patten: Yes.

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if the planned introduction of the new GCSEs in 1988 will be influenced in any way by the consultative and preparatory process involving teachers who are currently involved in dispute with their employers.

Mr. Chris Patten: As my right hon. Friend has recently confirmed, the Government do not intend to postpone the introduction of the GCSE. A national training programme, intended to help teachers with their preparations for the new examination courses, is now well under way.

Curriculum Development

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the total number of advisers and other non-teaching staff employed (a) by his Department and (b) by local education authorities on curriculum development for each year from 1975 to 1986; and what was the total cost by year.

Mr. Chris Patten: Although the Department funds a variety of curriculum development work, officials are not themselves directly involved in carrying it forward. Her Majesty's inspectors of schools do engage in and support curriculum development by such means as their programme of short courses for teachers and participation in in-service training activities arranged by local education authorities. They also stimulate such work through their publications, inspection reports and day-to-day contacts with the education service. Information is not available to quantify or to cost the amount of time spent on these various activities. Nor is information available centrally in respect of the work of advisers and other non-teaching staff employed by local education authorities.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

European Assembly

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Attorney-General why Her Majesty's Government have decided to take action against the European Assembly in the European Court under article 173 of the treaty of Rome which provides the court with jurisdiction over the actions of the Council of Ministers and the Commission; and if he will make a statement.

The Solicitor-General: In its application to the European Court of Justice, the United Kingdom, in common with the views shared by the Council and the other Member states bringing actions against the European Assembly, contends that, despite the apparently restrictive wording of Article 173 of the Treaty establishing the European Economic Community and Article 146 of the Treaty establishing the European Atomic Energy Community, those provisions on their true construction extend to Acts of the European Assembly. The United Kingdom also relies upon Article 38 of the Treaty establishing the European Coal and Steel Community, which expressly confers jurisdiction on the European Court to declare an act of the Assembly to be void. As the budget of the European Communities covers expenditure of all three Communities, the application refers to jurisdictional bases in each of the three treaties.

Leak Inquiries (Immunity)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Attorney-General whether the immunity granted in a leak inquiry pre-empts any possible decision by the police to institute a prosecution.

The Attorney-General: If and to the extent that I authorise the grant of immunity from prosecution, its practical effect is to preclude prosecution by any other person or authority, including the police. The exact nature and extent of the immunity granted in any particular case will depend on the facts of that case.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Southern African Development Co-ordination Conference

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the extent and disbursement of, and expenditure on, United Kingdom aid to the Southern African Development Co-ordination Conference.

Mr. Raison: British aid provided under the auspices of the Southern African Development Co-ordination Conference amounts so far to £1,568,000 in terms of actual expenditure. It has been spent on transport and communications projects, a fisheries study, and training awards. We have, however, pledged a total of £22 million primarily for regional transport projects.

ENERGY

NCB (Enterprise) Ltd.

Mr. Baldry asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the latest activities of NCB (Enterprise) Ltd.

Mr. David Hunt: At the end of January 1986, NCB (Enterprise) Ltd. had committed £7·1 million assisting 311 projects to create 4,412 job opportunities. Additionally, at the end of December 1985 just under £1 million had been committed to assist 45 enterprise agencies.

Energy Savings Opportunities (Exhibition)

Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will arrange for an exhibition of energy savings opportunities in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. David Hunt: I have arranged that there will be an exhibition on energy savings opportunities in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 3 March to Friday 7 March, which I have agreed to open at 4.30 pm on the Monday.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list in the Official Report the governmental agencies to which his Department gives grant aid which in turn provide financial support for voluntary bodies and organisations, and the size of the grant so given in the last financial year for which figures are available.

Dr. Boyson: The information for the financial year ended 31 March 1985 is:

Total grant paid by agency to voluntary bodies

Sponsoring Department	Agency	£
Northern Ireland Office	Probation Board for Northern Ireland	623,000
Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland	Northern Ireland housing Executive	23,901

Sponsoring Department	Agency	£
Department of Economic Development	Local Enterprise Development Unit	1,600,000
Department of Education for Northern Ireland	Arts Council for Northern Ireland	2,161,300
	Sports Council for Northern Ireland	300,829

Matrimonial and Family Provisions Act 1984

Mr. J. Enoch Powell asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to publish proposals for a draft order applying to Northern Ireland the provisions of the Matrimonial and Family Provisions Act 1984.

Dr. Boyson: It is the Government's intention to publish proposals in the near future for the implementation in Northern Ireland of Law Commission reports Nos. 112, 116 and 117.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the arrangements to monitor the implementation of the Government's equal opportunities policy in the Northern Ireland Civil Service; and what are the figures for the composition of the Northern Ireland Civil Service in terms of religion, sex and disability.

Dr. Boyson: I announced on 4 December 1984 the publication of an equal opportunities policy statement which proclaimed and emphasised the commitment of the Northern Ireland Civil Service to equal opportunity for all its staff on the basis of ability, qualifications and aptitude and without regard to religion, sex or any other irrelevant factor.

A comprehensive monitoring system has now been set up by the Department of Finance and Personnel. It is generally accepted that the nature of the management arrangements for the school where the civil servant was educated is the best proxy for determining a person's religious affiliation in Northern Ireland and this information is now held on the computer for just under 95 per cent. of the non-industrial Northern Ireland Civil Service and, within that figure, for 99 per cent. of general service grades in post at 1 January 1985. It was sought by questionnaire supplemented by reference to personal files, and was validated by the issue to all staff of transcripts of the information. As new recruits join the Civil Service, the appropriate information will be added to the data base.

For the purpose of monitoring, "Protestants" are defined as those who were educated in a school attended mainly by Protestant pupils, "Roman Catholics" as those who were educated in a school managed by the Roman Catholic Church and attended mainly by Roman Catholic pupils, and "unknown" as staff who were educated outside Northern Ireland or whose school management type was either undefined or unknown. At this stage of the exercise, disabled staff have been defined as those who are or were at some stage of their careers recorded as registered disabled persons.

A preliminary analysis of the database gives the global composition of the Northern Ireland Civil Service in percentage terms as follows:

	Male	Female	Total
Protestant	30·2	28·2	58·4
Roman Catholic	14·7	18·0	32·7
Unknown	6·0	2·9	8·9
TOTAL	50·9	49·1	100

Note: 1·2 per cent. of this total are disabled.

This analysis is not directly comparable with that previously produced by the Fair Employment Agency for Northern Ireland in its report on the Northern Ireland Civil Service because, for example, it includes some 1,600 staff in ancillary and related grades who were excluded from the Fair Employment Agency's investigation, the proportion of "unknown" is considerably less, and religious affiliation has been based mainly on more accurate information about schooling.

It is intended to analyse the data in considerably greater detail and to produce later in the year a report which will include information similar to that contained in the Fair Employment Agency's report, e.g. disaggregated by Department, broad salary bands, and age, and which will so far as possible provide comparisons with the data in the Fair Employment Agency's report.

Benefits

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of claimant couples with children in receipt of (a) family income supplement, (b) unemployment benefit, (c) supplementary benefit and (d) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit for the latest available year in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

Benefit	Number of claimant couples	Latest available date
Family income supplement	11,541	31 December 1983
Unemployment benefit	3,570	8 November 1984
Supplementary benefit	33,332	31 December 1983
Unemployment benefit and supplementary allowance	24,752	31 December 1983

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of lone parent claimants in receipt of (a) family income supplement, (b) unemployment benefit, (c) supplementary benefit and (d) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit for the latest available year in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The information requested in respect of unemployment benefit is not available. The rest of the information is as follows:

Benefit	Lone parent claimants	Latest available date
Family income supplement	1,725	31 December 1983
Supplementary benefit	14,693	31 December 1983
Unemployment benefit and supplementary allowance	139	31 December 1983

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of claimants in receipt of (a) unemployment benefit, (b) supplementary benefit and (c) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit excluding lone parents, couples with children and pensioners for the latest available year in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

Benefit	Number of claimants	Latest available date
Unemployment benefit	22, 265	8 November 1984
Supplementary benefit	73,900	7 December 1983
Unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit	2,500	7 December 1983

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of claimants in receipt of (a) sickness benefit, (b) invalidity benefit pension, (c) industrial disablement benefit and (d) non-contributory invalidity pension and housewives' non-contributory invalidity pension or (e) severe disablement allowance for the latest available year in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The number of claimants in receipt of the benefits listed, at the latest available date, is as follows:

Benefit	Number of claimants	Latest available date
Sickness benefit	9,901	27 December 1985
Invalidity benefitpension	38,287	27 December 1985
Industrial disablement benefitpension	5,185	30 September 1984
NCIP, HNCIP or severe disablement allowance	11,841	27 December 1985

Single Payments

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of single payment awards to the rate per 1,000 claimants in each office in Northern Ireland to (a) persons under pensionable age not required to register for work, (b) persons under pensionable age required to register for work and (c) persons over pensionable age for the latest available year; and what is (i) the rate per 1,000 claimants and (ii) the average payment to persons in each of the categories listed.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows in respect of 1985:

Social Security Office	Number of single payments			Rate per 1,000 claimants for supplementary benefits
	Under pension age not required to register	Under pension age required to register	Over pension age	Under pension age not required to register	Under pension age required to register	Over pension age

* Data incomplete due to industrial action.

1. The rate of single payments of supplementary benefit per 1,000 claimants in Northern Ireland in 1985, based on the average number of claimants in the year, was 1,434.

2. The average single payment paid to persons in Northern Ireland in 1985 who were:

(a) under pension age and not required to register for work was £115·85;

(b) under pension age and required to register for work was £116·75;

(c) over pension age £108·98.

Pensioners

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of claimant pensioners (a) aged over 80 years and (b) aged between 60 and 79 years in receipt of (i) retirement pension, (ii) supplementary pension and (iii) retirement pension and supplementary pension for the latest available year in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

Number of Pensioners

Benefit	Over 80	Aged 60-79	Latest available date
Retirement Pension	*37,616	†171,802	30 November 1985
Supplementary Pension	12,430	41,124	7 December 1983
Retirement Pension and Supplementary Pension	11,695	35,810	7 December 1983

* Includes 3,375 Non-contributory Pensioners.
† Includes 51 Non-contributory Pensioners.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Inland Revenue (Cash Limit)

Mr. Gregory asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether any changes are proposed in the cash limit for the Inland Revenue.

Mr. Moore: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary supplementary estimate, the cash limit for class XIII vote 6 will be increased by £21,900,000 from £858,715,000 to £880,615,000. This is to cover, in part, some necessary additional expenditure on computers that will be offset by savings in later years and, in part, the cost of overtime associated with an initiative, announced by the Department on 12 November 1985, to reduce arrears of work in local tax offices. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not therefore add to the planning total of public expenditure.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. David Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the tax treatment of payments under the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Moore: A number of representations about the tax treatment of the enterprise allowance have been received.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will set out in tabular form, for each year since 1969 to the latest now available, identifiable public expenditure by programme in each standard region of England and in Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales expressed (a) in total cash terms and (b) in cash terms per head of population.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Malone) on 22 February 1985 at column 606 which gave figures back to 1979-80. I shall arrange for more recent data to be published in the Official Report as soon as it becomes available. However, this will only cover identifiable public expenditure in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland; total public expenditure figures for regions within England are not available. Figures going back to 1969 are not available.

Police Officers (Rent Allowance)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether it is the practice of the Inland Revenue to seek to raise an assessment on grant paid to police officers by police authorities to compensate for tax on rent allowance paid in the previous year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I can confirm that the grant to which the hon. Member refers is chargeable to income tax and is assessed accordingly.

Capital Movements

Mr. Shore asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what was the capital outflow from the United Kingdom in each year since 1978 to (a) the United States of America and (b) the countries of the EEC, excluding Spain and Portugal; and what was the capital inflow to the United Kingdom from these countries for the same period.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The figures available for capital transactions between the United Kingdom and the EC as a whole (excluding Spain and Portugal) over the period 1978-1984 were published in table 12.1 of the 1985 CSO publication "United Kingdom Balance of Payments" (the Pink Book). Figures for transactions with individual countries, including the US, are available only in respect of direct investment (other than by oil companies) and are published in tables 3.1 (outward) (as amended) and 4.1 (inward) of the 1983 HMSO "Business Monitor MA4, Overseas Transactions". Both publications are available in the House of Commons Library.

Tax Investigations

Mr. Hickmet asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how Inland Revenue or Customs and Excise inspectors carry out in-depth investigations into the tax affairs of companies, businesses or schedule D taxpayers;

(2) how many companies went into liquidation, businesses ceased trading and schedule D taxpayers were declared bankrupt following in-depth Inland Revenue or Customs and Excise investigation, stating what proportion that was of those companies, and so on assessed for further tax in each of the years since 1979;

(3) how many in-depth investigations into companies, businesses and schedule D taxpayers the Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise have carried out where they have gone back up to 10 years for each of the years since 1979 to date; and how many such investigations revealed that further tax was payable giving the total figures involved in each year;

(4) how many companies, businesses and schedule D taxpayers following an in-depth investigation by the Customs and Excise or Inland Revenue were given the choice to pay a lesser sum over a period of time or contest the full sum before the commissioners, giving the sums involved;

(5) why, in in-depth investigations by the Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise, the onus is placed on the taxpayer to show that further tax is not payable;

(6) what administrative directions set out how the Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise exercise their powers to carry out in-depth investigations into the tax affairs of companies, businesses and individuals paying tax under schedule D, after audited accounts have been submitted; and if he will state up to how far back such investigations normally go;

(7) what proportion of directors of companies or businesses or schedule D taxpayers who were assessed as liable to pay further tax after an in-depth investigation used professional legal or accountants' assistance in their dealings with the Inland Revenue at the time of agreeing to pay further tax.

Mr. Moore: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Sinsemilla

Mr. Terry Fields asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps are being taken by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise to facilitate the detection and to prevent the importation into the United Kingdom of the drug Sinsemilla; what quantities of the drug have so far been impounded at ports of entry; how many people have been found to have the drug in their possession on entering the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The importation of Sinsemilla, a term describing a seedless cannabis plant, is prohibited under Section 3(1) of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 and Her Majesty's Customs and Excise enforce this prohibition as for all other prohibited drugs. The detection, prevention and investigation of drug smuggling is a top priority of the Board of Customs and Excise.

Separate records of Sinsemilla seizures are not kept because it is a form of herbal cannabis.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Poland (Foreign Debt)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Polish Government concerning proposals for the rescheduling of its foreign debts.

Mr. Renton: Proposals for the rescheduling of Polish foreign debts are considered by official creditors on a multilateral basis. Agreements were reached last year on restructuring official debts falling due in the period from 1982 to 1985. Discussions continue on future rescheduling arrangements. The United Kingdom signed a bilateral rescheduling agreement with Poland on 30 November 1985 covering debts falling due in the period 1982-84.

UNESCO

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he had with his partners in the Council of Ministers of the European Community before the United Kingdom left the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation; and what views they put to him.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend had no formal collective discussions about UNESCO with Community colleagues in the period immediately preceding our decision not to rescind our notice of withdrawal from the organisation.

However, there were exchanges at official level and some colleagues sent messages to express the hope that Britain would remain within the organisation to my right hon. and learned Friend.

Hong Kong

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent visit of the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Mid-Sussex (Mr. Renton) to Hong Kong.

Mr. Renton: I paid a brief visit to Hong Kong on 23 and 24 January following my visit to China between 18 and 23 January. During my stopover in Hong Kong I held useful discussions with the Governor, the Executive Council and the Unofficial Members of the Executive and Legislative Councils.

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the People's Republic of China has made any objections concerning further democratic reform in Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: There will be a review of the further development of representative government in Hong Kong in 1987. Decisions on any further developments must await the outcome of that review. The Joint Liaison Group discussed recent changes in Hong Kong's political system at the group's second meeting between 26 and 29 November 1985. The group's proceedings are confidential, but the atmosphere of the discussions was friendly and co-operative.

Philippines

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on relations with the Philippines following the recent elections;

(2) what arrangements Her Majesty's Government have made to obtain information about the conduct of the recent election in the Philippines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We attach importance to our relations with the Philippines, as a member of the Association of South-East Asian Nations and a country of considerable strategic importance. Together with our European Community partners, we expressed the hope that the election would be held in accordance with the law and the constitution. The situation is still very confused, but we are concerned at the widespread allegations of electoral fraud.

East Germany (Compensation for British Citizens)

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress he has made in negotiating with the East German Government compensation for British citizens whose property was appropriated by the Nazis prior to 1945.

Mr. Eggar: We held a plenary session of talks about these claims which arise mainly for the period post 8 May 1945 with the German Democratic Republic in London in March 1985. Good progress was made at that meeting and a programme of work was agreed to help speed up the remainder of the negotiation. Most of that work is now well in hand. We hope to hold further meetings with the German Democratic Republic this year.

South Atlantic Islands Development Corporation Limited

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 27 January, Official Report, column 369, what further information he has as to the nature and the directors of the two European legal entities referred to in that answer.

Mr. Eggar: None.

ENVIRONMENT

Community Programme

Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what underspend is anticipated in urban aid community programme aid in 1985-86; how much he expects Bradford to be offered in additional community programme funds; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 18 October 1985 that authorities in Yorkshire and Humberside would receive £2·25 million out of an extra £15 million which was being allocated to inner-city authorities in England. Bradford subsequently made a bid for some of those additional resources but key information about the proposed schemes is still awaited. The amount to be offered will depend upon the quality of the projects submitted and the city council's ability to use extra capital resources before the end of the current financial year.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Arnold asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out in the Official Report the rate support grant paid or to be paid to Stockport metropolitan district council in each of the years from 1976-77 to 1986-87, inclusive, in real terms.

Mrs. Rumbold: The rate support grant figures for the metropolitan district of Stockport are shown below in constant 1984-85 prices:

(1) 1976-77 to 1980-81

	£ million (1984-85 prices)
1976-77	80·2
1977-78	73·9
1978-79	72·1
1979-80	66·6
1980-81	65·4

(2) 1981-82 to 1986-87

	£ million (1984-85 prices)
1981-82	51·8
1982-83	47·2
1983-84	45·7
1984-85	43·7
1985-86	39·1
1986-87	*(42·6)

* Settlement estimate.

The figures for 1976-77 to 1980-81 are not comparable with those for 1981-82 to 1986-87 because:

(i) they comprise the needs, resources and domestic elements whereas from 1981-82 onwards the figures comprise block grant and domestic rate relief grant;

(ii) grant in support of services provided by metropolitan county councils was paid to the districts up to 1980-81 and to the counties thereafter.

The 1986-87 figure includes block grant in respect of responsibilities inherited from the Greater Manchester county council.

The figures for 1976-77 to 1982-83 are final entitlements; for 1983-84 and 1984-85, block grant entitlements are based on provisional outturn information; for 1985-86 and 1986-87 they are based respectively on the council's budget and the expenditure estimate used for the rate support grant settlement.

The figures have been expressed in constant prices by using the GDP deflator.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the rate support grant paid or payable to the London borough of Waltham Forest in each year from 1979-80 to 1986-87 in (i) cash and (ii) real terms expressed in 1979-80 prices.

Mrs. Rumbold: The rate support grant figures for the London borough of Waltham Forest are shown below:

	Cash £ million	1979-80 Prices £ million
(1) 1979-80 and 1980-81
1979-80	46·7	46·7
1980-81	54·4	45·8
(2) 1981-82 to 1986-87
1981-82	54·6	41·8
1982-83	61·0	43·7
1983-84	65·5	44·9
1984-85	64·8	42·6
1985-86	65·1	40·7
1986-87	(71·2)	*(42·6)

* Settlement estimate

The figures for 1979-80 and 1980-81 are not comparable with those for 1981-82 to 1986-87 because they comprise the needs, resources and domestic elements whereas from 1981-82 onwards the figures comprise block grant and domestic rate relief grant.

There were other changes which affect the figures for 1981-82 onwards, making meaningful comparisons difficult. Until 1981-82, grant in support of GLC and Metropolitan police expenditure was paid to London boroughs; in 1982-83 this was still the case for Metropolitan police but GLC grant was paid direct; from 1983-84 grant was paid direct to both the GLC and the Metropolitan police.

The 1986-87 figures includes block grant in respect of responsibilities inherited from the GLC.

The figures for 1979-80 to 1982-83 are final entitlements; for 1983-84 and 1984-85, block grant entitlements are based on provisional outturn information; for 1985-86 and 1986-87 they are based respectively on the council's budget and the expenditure estimate used for the rate support grant settlement.

The cash figures have been converted to 1979-80 prices by using the GDP deflator.

Water Supplies

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on what research is being carried out by the water research centre into the increasing discoloration of water supplies in certain parts of the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten: As the causes of discoloration are known, no research is being carried out on this by the water research centre. However, the Yorkshire water authority — studying what particular factors may have given rise to recent increases in discoloration in their area. Improved methods for removing colour from water are being developed, for example, by the Yorkshire water authority, which is installing a pilot plant using a novel process to treat highly coloured, soft water. Its performance will be monitored and evaluated by the water research centre.

Prefabricated Reinforced Concrete Houses

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date his Department received a reply from Birmingham city council to the circular letter from his Department to local authorities of 18 February 1983 concerning prefabricated reinforced concrete houses.

Sir George Young: Birmingham city council first responded to my Department's letter on 11 May 1983. The information it supplied was amended and updated in subsequent letters of 9 June 1983 and 10 December 1984. I understand that the matter is still being pursued and that further information will be forwarded in due course.

Recycled Paper

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of the total paper used annually by his Department is recycled paper; and what savings the use of this paper represents in cash terms and as a proportion of the total expenditure on paper by his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: A total of 11 tonnes of recycled paper has been ordered for letter-headed notepaper and matching envelopes and about half has been distributed. Figures for total paper consumption are not readily available and percentages and costs cannot be given.

Annual savings in cash terms are currently in the region of £5,500.

Water and Sewerage Law

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) on what date he received the working party report on water and sewerage law;

(2) which association or bodies were represented on the working party on water and sewerage law;

(3) when he expects to make a statement on his policy towards the conclusion of the working party report on water and sewerage law.

Mr. John Patten: The working party comprised officials from my Department, members of the water industry nominated by the Water Authorities Association and the Water Companies Association, and one outside member with local authority experience. I received a report on their findings on 19 December. As mentioned in the White Paper "Privatisation of the Water Authorities in England and Wales" (Cmnd. 9734), a consultation paper on the Government's proposals for reform of the law will be published shortly.

Defective Housing

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in finding an approved method of repair for Reema and Tarran pre-cast concrete houses under the Housing Defects Act 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I understand that a repair system for Reema houses is now being appraised by PRC Homes Ltd. and that a repair system for Tarran houses is to be submitted for appraisal shortly. Individual local authorities may have already accepted repair methods for these types outside the PRC Homes Ltd. scheme, but information on this is not available.

Grants

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all the urban development grant projects approved by his Department during 1985, stating for each project the total amount of grant, the percentage the grant comprised, the total cost of the project, the name of the public or private sector participants within each project, and the cost from public funds for each new job created within each project.

Sir George Young: Lists of all projects approved for urban development grant are regularly placed in the Library of the House; an updated version was placed there last month. These contain for each project the total amount of grant, the private sector investment, the names of the sponsoring local authority and of the private sector participant, and a brief description of the project. It is not the practice to release further details of individual schemes. Fifty-seven projects were approved in the calendar year 1985; these involved total investment of £127 million brought about by £27 million of urban development grant and other public funds.

The average estimated public expenditure per new job to be created in commercial and industrial schemes approved in 1985 is £5,300; this ignores jobs retained and other benefits, such as derelict land reclaimed.

Animal Furs

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department has taken to control or prohibit the import of animal furs on conservation grounds.

Mr. Waldegrave: Imports of animal furs from endangered species are controlled under the 1982 European Council Regulation (3626(82)) which implements the convention on international trade in endangered species of wild fauna and flora, and under the Endangered Species (Import and Export) Act 1976.

Liverpool Philharmonic Hall

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will agree to the transfer of the Liverpool philharmonic hall to a charitable trust adequately funded; and if he will seek the support of the local authorities in providing that funding.

Mr. Tracey: I will answer this question shortly.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to promulgate the terms for compensation for financial detriment to Greater London council staff who take up employment with successor authorities at a lower rate of remuneration as a result of the abolition of the Greater London council on 31 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Gainsborough and Horncastle (Mr. Leigh) on 13 November 1985 at column 167. The regulations giving effect to the government's decisions on compensation for redundancy and financial detriment to staff affected by the Local Government Act 1985 were laid before Parliament on 7 February. My Department is sending copies of the regulations, together with explanatory notes, to all the local authorities affected and to other interested parties. I am arranging for copies of the notes to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 51, when he expects to have completed his consideration of the Greater London council's application for consent under section 7 of the Local Government (Interim Provisions) Act for a grant to the Asha Women's Group; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Consent to this grant was refused on 5 February.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 52, when he expects to have completed his consideration of the Greater London council's application for consent for Hounslow West station car park; and if he will make a statement;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 141, when he expects to have completed his consideration of the Greater London council's application for consent to funding for Wyke House hostel, Weymouth, Dorset; and if he will make a statement;

(3) pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 341, when he expects to have completed his consideration of the Greater London council's application for consent to the disposal of Wilton's music hall, Graces alley, London E1; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Consent has been given to these applications.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, column 52, when he expects to have completed his consideration of the Greater London council's application for consent to a grant to the Polytechnic of Central London for a study of decentralisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Consent to this application has been refused.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 21 January, Official Report, column 141, when he expects to have completed his consideration of the Greater London council's application for consent to the upgrading of computers for the welfare benefits project.

Mr. Tracey: Consent to this application, and to others from the Greater London council involving expenditure totalling £3·444 million in connection with the council's welfare benefits project, has today been refused.

The Government have recognised the value of past efforts to encourage the take-up of welfare benefit. Nonetheless, decisions on the future of this project are best left to the borough councils with whom statutory responsibility for local social services lies.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 341, when he expects to have completed his consideration of the Greater London council's application for consent to the disposal of Kings Reach, Stamford wharf, wall and walk; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 341, when he expects to have completed his consideration of the Greater London council's application for consent to the disposal of 50-52 King street, Southall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: Consent to this application has today been refused.

The council sought consent to acquire a new 15-year lease on these premises and to grant a lease to Southall police monitoring group at a peppercorn rent. Such an arrangement would impose financial liabilities upon the council's successors and their ratepayers without any regard to their wishes.

Mr. Shore asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated rate support grant payment to the London borough of Tower Hamlets for 1986-87; and how much of this sum is payment in lieu of services formerly provided by the Greater London council.

Mr. Waldegrave: If the London borough of Tower Hamlets budgets in line with our settlement assumption of £120·208 million, which is about 3·5 per cent. higher than its budget for 1985-86, it will receive £71·184 million in block grant, including payments from the London rate equalisation scheme of just over £10 million. Domestic rate relief grant will be £2·971 million and the estimated total of RSG will therefore be £74·155 million. This is about £46·8 million higher than the current entitlement for 1985-86, of which about £42 million is due to the abolition of the GLC.

District Heating (Newcastle)

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has concerning the Byker district heating scheme in Newcastle upon Tyne; and what discussions he has had with the local authority concerning the scheme.

Sir George Young: My Department has some information on the Byker district heating scheme resulting from a study commissioned by the Building Research Establishment in the middle of last year. We have had no recent discussions with the local authority concerning the scheme.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if increased expenditure by local authorities as a result of the introduction of GCSEs will be subject to rate penalties.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to my hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Education's answer to the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright) on 28 January 1986, at column 435. If a local authority chooses to increase its expenditure, the normal grant rules will apply.

"Faith in the City"

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his recent discussions with the Archbishop of Canterbury and other leaders of the Church of England on the subject of the report of the Archbishop's commission "Faith in the City"; and what further plans he has for future meetings on the subject.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I met the Archbishop of Canterbury on 28 January to discuss the report of his commission on urban priority areas — "Faith in the City". I welcomed the commission's report as a constructive analysis of the challenges facing Church and state in urban areas. We did not have a detailed discussion of all the many recommendations in the report, but agreed that, while there might be differences on some parts of the analysis and some of the remedies, there was close understanding on many of the main issues. In particular, we agreed that we must find ways to involve the people living in the cities in creating the sorts of communities and environments in the areas in which they want to live and work. I offered the assistance of my Department in following up the work of the commission in identifying areas suitable for neighbourhood action, and in exploring the potential for joint action through Government initiatives and the proposed Church urban fund.

Superstore (Slough)

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce his decision on the planning application in respect of the proposed superstore development at Cippenham in Slough.

Mr. Tracey: An announcement will be made within the next few days.

SCOTLAND

Security Firms

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce legislation to licence security firms operating in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: No. The Government's policy on this matter was outlined in the reply which my hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Home Office gave to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 20 January at column 10.

Grants

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the urban development grant projects approved by his Department during 1985, stating for each project the total amount of grant, the percentage the grant comprised, the total cost of the project, the name of the public or private sector participants within each project, and the cost from public funds for each new job created within each project.

Mr. Ancram: Urban development grant is available only in England and Wales. In Scotland, the Scottish Development Agency operates an analogous local enterprise grants for urban project—LEG-UP—scheme, under which financial assistance is given normally on the basis that part or all of the support from public funds should be repaid in due course.

For reasons of commercial confidentiality it is not our practice to provide information on individual projects in the precise form requested. I have, however, arranged for a list of projects approved in principle in 1985 to be placed in the Library.

In total, offers of asistance amounting to some £6·9 million were approved in 1985, representing 18·3 per cent. of the estimated total cost of supported projects. The estimated cost from public funds per new job expected to be created in all commercial and industrial projects is £3,600. This assumes that all the approved assistance is taken up and none repaid, and excludes from consideration any jobs retained or construction jobs created.

Council House Sales

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many homes in Scotland formerly owned by the public sector had been sold to private owners by 31 December 1985; and of these how many were sold in the year ended 31 December 1985.

Mr. Rifkind: Some 77,000 homes formerly owned by housing authorities have been sold to sitting tenants and to other private individuals during the period 1 April 1979 to 30 September 1985. Of these some 10,700 were sold between 1 January and 30 September 1985. The information available to the Department for the final quarter of 1985 is still incomplete.

Housing Associations

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what sum has been paid by his Department to support housing associations in each of the last six years for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Housing Act 1974			Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968		Finance Act 1965	Total
	Housing Association Grant	Revenue Deficit Grant	Hostel Deficit Grant	Claims under Section 9	Section 10	Corporation Tax Grant
1979-80	35,527,847	482,255	348,689	—	24,136	81,982	36,464,909
1980-81	50,602,731	1,202,262	116,289	—	20,208	62,948	52,004,438
1981-82	82,417,509	1,305,949	59,767	—	54,996	61,740	83,899,961
1982-83	104,176,001	1,023,628	131,447	222	10,762	108,949	105,451,009
1983-84	115,749,586	542,314	181,101	180	712	318,450	116,792,343
1984-85	127,678,262	283,858	122,074	480	8,141	405,297	128,498,112

In addition grants totalling £10,000 were paid during the period 1979-85 under the urban aid programme. Further details are not available.

Housing association grant is a capital grant paid on the completion of projects. The figures include payments made under the subsidy arrangements in force prior to the introduction of HAG.

Revenue and hostel deficit grants have been paid to offset associations' eligible revenue deficits; while certain specialist associations have had the costs of staff training assisted under section 9, and other activities under section 10, of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968. The tax grants were paid to offset associations' liability for corporation tax.

Housing

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of local authority revenue budget has been made up of housing support grant in each of the last six years for which figures are available.

Mr. Rifkind: For each year since 1980-81, the percentage of district and islands councils' housing revenue account budgets made up of housing support grant is as follows:

	Per cent.
1980-81	37
1981-82	25
1982-83	16
1983-84	11
1984-85	9
1985-86	7

1980-81—1984-85. Local authority returns to Scottish Development Department.

1985-86—Rating Review (August 1985), published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy, Scottish Branch.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of total housing resource allowance paid to Scottish local authorities in each of the last six years for which figures are available was paid in the form of housing support grant.

Mr. Rifkind: In addition to housing support grant, central government payments to local authorities for housing purposes include Exchequer contributions towards improvement and repair grants and environmental improvements, payments to match local authorities' expenditure on homes insulation grants, and grants for the provision of sites for travelling people. The following table shows housing support grant as a percentage of these total payments.

	Per cent.
1980-81	93·9
1981-82	90·0
1982-83	82·8
1983-84	63·8
1984-85	55·0
1985-86*	49·5

* Figure for 1985-86 is an estimate and includes housing support grant payable to authorities in terms of the Housing Support Grant (Scotland) Variation Order 1986, laid before the House on 13 January 1986.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many homes in Scotland were defined as being in sub-tolerable standard in (a) at the most recent date for which figures are available, (b) in 1966 and (c) in 1976.

Mr. Rifkind: Estimates based on local authority returns of the numbers of dwellings in Scotland below the tolerable standard in 1968, 1976 and 1985 are shown in the table. Figures for 1966 are not available.

Estimates number of dwellings below the tolerable standard

Year	Number
December 1968	250,000
December 1976	156,000
March 1985	63,000

Highlands and Islands Development Board

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the expenditure of the Highlands and Islands Development Board in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what percentage of that expenditure has been met from (a) Government grant and (b) profit released on investments made by the Highlands and Islands Development Board in each of these years.

Mr. Rifkind: The gross expenditure and the proportion met from grant-in-aid is as follows:

Year	Gross expenditure £ million	Proportion met from grant-in-aid Per cent.
1980-81	23·7	84
1981-82	27·3	84
1982-83	32·7	84
1983-84	38·1	82
1984-85	42·1	82

The other information is not available in the form requested. The balance of the board's expenditure in each year has been met from receipts comprising loan interest and capital repayments, dividends from shares, rent, and the proceeds from the sale of assets.

Mr. Dewar asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if any guidelines are issued by his Department concerning the distribution of profits made by the Highlands and Islands Development Board from investments realised during the course of a financial year; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether his Department has insisted on the return of profits made by the Highlands and Islands Development Board in any year since the board's inception; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given on 7 February 1986 to the hon. Member for Ross, Cromarty and Skye (Mr. Kennedy) by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Industry and Education at column 275.

Hypothermia

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Dundee, East of 29 January, Official Report, columns 549-50, he will give figures for deaths from hypothermia for the years 1981, 1982 and 1983, respectively, broken down by age group and month of the year.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is as follows:

Forestry

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the statutory and non-statutory bodies to which the Countryside Commission for Scotland's recent draft forestry policy document has been given.

Mr. Ancram: The consultation undertaken by the Countryside Commission for Scotland in relation to its draft forestry policy document is a matter for decision by the commission without reference to my right hon. and learned Friend. I am, therefore, asking the chairman of the commission to write to the hon. Member on the matter as soon as possible.

EMPLOYMENT

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Paymaster General if former Greater London council staff made redundant as a result of the abolition of the council on 31 March will be able to claim unemployment benefit even if they are not provided with redundancy notices by the London Residuary Body on that date.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The absence of a redundancy notice will not prevent staff made redundant from claiming unemployment benefit. Any claims made will be decided by independent adjudicating authorities. Statutory redundancy payments do not affect entitlement to unemployment benefit but the authorities will have to consider, among other issues, whether or not any payments described as redundancy payments include wages in lieu of notice, since unemployment benefit cannot be paid in addition to wages.

Youth Wages

Mr. Haynes asked the Paymaster General what evidence he has of the extent of the correlation between the level of youth wages and the level of unemployment.

Mr. Lang: There have been a number of studies in recent years which indicate that the employment prospects of young people have been adversely affected by high level of earnings relative to adults. These include:

Hart P. E.—"Youth unemployment and relative wages in the United Kingdom. A survey of recent econometric evidence". NIESR discussion Paper No. 70.

Merrilees W. and Wilson R. — "Disequilibrium in the labour market for young people in Great Britain". Warwick University, Manpower Research Group Discussion Paper No. 10.

OECD — "Do relative wage levels affect youth employment" Chapter V, OECD "Employment Outlook" 1984.

Rice P. — "Juvenile unemployment, relative wages and social security in Great Britain". University of Sussex, Department of Economics (Mimeo) 1984.

Wells W. —"The relative pay and employment of young people". DE Research Paper No. 42.

East Midlands

Mr. Leigh asked the Paymaster General how much Manpower Services Commission money is currently spent in the east midlands.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: In the period 1 April to 31 December 1985, the Manpower Services Commission spent £67,119,000 directly through its accounts offices in Derbyshire, Leicestershire, Nottinghamshire and Lincolnshire. This includes administration costs and expenditure on the community programme which is administered by the Manpower Services Commission on behalf of the Government. There was additional expenditure in these areas on programmes funded centrally by the Manpower Services Commission but the sums involved could only be identified at disproportionate cost.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Bellingham asked the Paymaster General what steps he plans to take to better publicise the enterprise allowance scheme.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission launched a national marketing campaign on 13 January to increase the awareness amongst unemployed people about the enterprise allowance scheme. The campaign will use both national and regional advertising and will last until March 1987.

Mr. Alton asked the Paymaster General how many people in total have been assisted by the enterprise allowance scheme in the north-west.

Mr. Trippier: The total number of entrants to the enterprise allowance scheme in the north-west region at 31 December 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, is 23,510.

Sheltered Employment Schemes

Mr. Irving asked the Paymaster General what is the average weekly remuneration for those employed in (a) sheltered workshops and (b) sheltered industrial group schemes at the latest convenient date.

Mr. Lang: I regret that the information in the form requested is not available. I shall be writing to my hon. Friend to explain the position.

Mr. Irving asked the Paymaster General how many places are available in (a) sheltered workshops and (b) sheltered industrial group schemes in England and Wales; and what proportion of these places is filled by mentally ill people at the latest convenient date.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is given in the following table:

	Remploy (31 September 1985	Sheltered Workshops (31 March 1985)	Sheltered Placements (31 December 1985)*
Employees in England and Wales	7,842	4,573	1,537
Total employees in Great Britain	8,916	5,554	1,663
Proportion who are mentally ill and mentally handicapped in Great Britain	21%	†	48%
Of which mentally ill	7%	†	6%

* Formerly Sheltered Industrial Groups.

† Firm information is not available about the proportions in sheltered workshops but the Manpower Services Commission believes that they are likely to be broadly in line with the proportions employed by Remploy Limited.

Licensing Systems (Review)

Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Paymaster General what progress has been made in taking forward the recommendation in the White Paper, "Lifting the Burden" Cmnd. 9571, to review the effect on business of the wide variety of different licensing systems.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The enterprise and deregulation unit has today written to business organisations, local authority associations and others to seek their views on the extent and the nature of the burdens placed on businesses and enforcing authorities as a result of the licensing requirements imposed by central government. We are inviting views by 19 March. A second stage of the review, which the Unit will discuss in advance with local authority associations, will examine those licensing requirements imposed by local government and the burdens imposed by local Acts of Parliament.

Payment of Bills

Mr. Wallace asked the Paymaster General whether he has any plans to institute a code of practice on late payment of bills to small firms.

Mr. Trippier: I intend to publish practical guidance prepared in conjunction with industry representatives on this subject. Its aim will be to help purchasing and supplying organisations to ensure that bills are paid on time.

Unemployed Persons

Mr. Freeman asked the Paymaster General what recent research he has commissioned into the willingness and ability of those temporarily unemployed to find work outside their existing travel-to-work area.

Mr. Lang: I have commissioned no recent research of this kind. The Manpower Services Commission has conducted a number of internal evaluations of schemes, such as the employment transfer scheme, whose aim is to improve geographical labour mobility.

Racial Discrimination

Mr. Dubs asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on the nature and extent of racial discrimination in employment.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Research studies over recent years have shown that the ethnic minorities in Britain continue to suffer racial discrimination in employment. The Policy Studies Institute report "Racial Discrimination —17 Years After the Act" published in 1985 concluded that racial discrimination in employment remained as common as it was a decade ago with at least a third of employers discriminating against black job seekers. The PSI publication "Black and White Britain" published in 1984 showed that people of Asian and West Indian origin at work tended to have jobs with lower pay and lower status than those of white workers. The 1984 labour force survey showed that unemployment rates were generally much higher for the ethnic minorities than whites with similar characteristics such as age group and level of qualification. These findings reinforce the Government's commitment to the removal of racial discrimination and the promotion of effective equal opportunities in employment regardless of race.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Watts asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report travel-to-work areas with an unemployment rate of 8 per cent. or less and the number of unemployed persons registered at each jobcentre in such areas.

Mr. Lang: The following table shows those travel-to-work areas which, on 9 January 1986, had an unemployment rate of 8 per cent. or less. Jobcentre boundaries do not coincide with travel-to-work areas; moreover registrants at jobcentres do not distinguish the unemployed from employed people seeking a change of employment.

Unemployment rates for travel-to-work areas—January 1986

Travel-to-work area	Unemployment rate—per cent.
Winchester and Eastleigh	5·5
Crawley	5·9
Clitheroe	6·0
Aylesbury and Wycombe	6·5
Basingstoke and Alton	6·6
Aberdeen	6·7
Shetland Islands	6·8
Cambridge	6·9

Slough	7·1
Tunbridge Wells	7·3
Bury St. Edmunds	7·4
Heathrow	7·7
Oxford	7·9
Malton	8·0
Reading	8·0

Mr. Watts asked the Paymaster General how many unemployed persons have been registered voluntarily at jobcentres (a) for up to three months, (b) for between three and six months and (c) for more than six months at the latest available date.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not available. Analysis of registrations at jobcentres by duration is not carried out. Moreover figures of registrants at jobcentres do not distinguish the unemployed from employed people seeking a change of employment.

Mr. Watts asked the Paymaster General if he will list in the Official Report those travel-to-work areas in which his Department has identified a significant shortage of skilled labour.

Mr. Trippier: My Department does not collect information identifying significant shortages of skilled labour. The Manpower Services Commission does conduct a survey of those vacancies at jobcentres that have remained unfilled for more than two months. The results provide an indication of areas of skill shortage both geographically and by occupation. The latest survey was completed in September 1985 and I will write to my hon. Friend again shortly when results by travel-to-work area have been prepared.

Mr. Alton asked the Paymaster General whether information on the previous occupation of the unemployed, their skill levels and their potential for skill upgrading is made available to the Manpower Services Commission and to local education authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Information on the previous occupation for the unemployed has not been available from the claimant count since October 1982. However the annual labour force survey collects information on the previous occupation of people looking for work who have been out of employment for less than three years but only at regional and national level. This information is made available to the Manpower Services Commission. It is also available to the local education authorities on request.

The survey does not provide information on skills levels or the potential for skills upgrading for the unemployed, and my Department has no other information on these topics at the present time.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Paymaster General if he will list by postal code areas the numbers of (a) men and (b) women unemployed in the York constituency for 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986 in January of each year.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not available. Postal code areas cannot readily be linked to constituencies, which are defined in terms of wards. However, figures for local authority wards from June 1983 are available in the Library.

Regional Manpower Strategy

Mr. Alton asked the Paymaster General whether there is a regional manpower strategy formulated between the Manpower Services Commission and his Department for each region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: MSC regional directors and employment managers formulate training and employment plans for their region in line with the overall strategy in the MSC corporate plan, which is approved by the Secretary of State. I am satisfied with these arrangements.

Local Economic Initiatives

Mr. Alton asked the Paymaster General what framework there is for consultation between local authorities and his Department concerning the development of local economic initiatives.

Mr. Clarke: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Wages

Mr. Nellist asked the Paymaster General by what percentage boys' and girls' wages have changed relative to adult wages since May 1979.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to my hon. Friend's reply on 29 October 1985, at column 405, which gives the latest available information.

EC (Employment Statistics)

Mr. Shore asked the Paymaster General how many United Kingdom nationals were, at the latest convenient date, in full-time employment in the countries of the EEC, excluding Spain and Portugal.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is given in the following table, at the latest available date for each country. There is no information on the numbers in full-time as opposed to part-time employment.

United Kingdom nationals: Employees in employment in other EC countries

Parental Leave Directive

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Paymaster General if the draft parental leave directive falls within the area of jurisdiction to which majority voting will apply following the signature of the Single European Act on 17 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: European proposals relating to the rights and interests of employed persons, which include the fraft directive on parental leave, will continue to require unanimous agreement in the Council of Ministers.

The Government continue to oppose the draft directive on parental leave. We believe that the matters with which it deals are best dealt with between employers and employees according to their priorities, needs, circumstances and what they can afford. We see no case for a regulation on the issue imposing identical arrangements on all businesses in all sectors of industry. We have pointed out, in the European Council, that implementation of the directive would add to employers' costs and increase the administrative burdens on them, thereby damaging the prospects of growth in employment for men and women.

Radar Equipment (Accidents)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Paymaster General how many accidents have occurred as a result of work with radar equipment in each year since 1980.

Mr. Trippier: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Visual Display Units (Accidents)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Paymaster General how many accidents have occurred as a result of work with (i) visual display units or (ii) cathode ray tubes in each year since 1980.

Mr. Trippier: This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Skilled Workers

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Paymaster General what representations he has received from the Confederation of British Industry about the shortage of skilled workers; and what steps he has taken to encourage more firms to employ apprentices in engineering and other industries.

Mr. Trippier: My ministerial colleagues and I are in regular contact with the Confederation of British Industry about a wide range of issues. We have not received any direct representations from the confederation specifically in respect of skill shortages.

Employers have the prime responsibility for ensuring that they recruit the number of apprentices which they will need in order to meet their future requirements for skilled workers. The Government make a significant contribution through YTS funding which already enables a substantial amount of initial skills training to be carried out. This financial support will be increased from April, when YTS is extended from one to two years.

Community Industry Scheme

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Paymaster General if he has any plans to harmonise the disposable incomes of young persons engaged in the community industry scheme, on the one hand, and on YTS in its proposed second year, on the other.

Mr. Lang: I have no present plans to do so.

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Paymaster General if he is satisfied with the level of recruitment of young persons into the community industry scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Yes. In the last twelve months, 9,278 young employees have entered the scheme. During that time community industry maintained an occupancy rate of almost 97 per cent.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Sittings

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will publish in the Official Report in tabular form for each of the past five parliamentary Sessions, and for the current Session to date (a) the number of days that the House of Commons sat, (b) the total number of hours sat, (c) the average daily hours of sitting, (d) the longest time of any one sitting, (e) the number of parliamentary questions (i) oral and (ii) written and (f) the number of divisions.

Mr. Biffen: The information requested is as follows:

	Session 1980-81	Session 1981-82	Session 1982-83	Session 1983-84	Session 1984-85	Session 1985-86 to 31 January 1986

Select Committee on Procedure

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will publish in the Official Report those recommendations from the Procedure Committee that have been implemented since 1956; and what was the date of each such implementation.

Mr. Biffen: The information is not readily available. I shall, however, write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will publish in the Official Report a list of reports issued by Procedure Committees for each Session since 1956.

Mr. Biffen: The information is as follows:

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Plant Closures

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give information on the number of United Kingdom plants which have closed down since the beginning of 1979 in the manner of his answer of Wednesday 6 June 1984 to the hon. Member for Coventry, North East; and what is the number of jobs that have been lost since 1979 in the plants in question.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The latest information available indicates that 742 foreign-owned manufacturing plants in the United Kingdom with more than 10 employees have closed since 1 January 1979.

Since the beginning of 1979 a total of 124,653 jobs have been lost in the closures of all foreign-owned manufacturing plants which employed more than 10 people.

Machine Tools

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the outcome of the continued monitoring referred to in his reply to the hon. Member for Coventry, North East, 17 February 1983, Official Report, column 203, of the import penetration by Japanese machine tool builders of the computer numerically-controlled lathes and machining centres market.

Mr. Alan Clark: The position in terms of numbers is that for computer numerically-controlled lathes the Japanese share of the United Kingdom market has fallen since 1981-82 while the share of the United Kingdom has risen. For CNC machining centres the Japanese share of the market rose sharply between the late 1970s and 1981-83 and fell abruptly in 1984 while the share of the United Kingdom, having fallen, recovered in that year. I understand that discussion between the Japan Machine Tools Builders Association and the Machine Tool Trades Association about Japanese import penetration of the United Kingdom market have continued.

Beef and Cereals

Sir Adam Butler asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give (a) the total tonnage of cereals imported into the United Kingdom from sub-Saharan Africa in each of the last five years, (b) the total tonnage of cereals imported into the United Kingdom from Ethiopia in each of the last five years, (c) the total tonnage of cereal substitutes imported into the United Kingdom from sub-Saharan Africa in each of the last five years, (d) the total tonnage of cereal substitutes imported into the United Kingdom from Ethiopia in each of the last five years, and (e) the total tonnage of beef imported into the United Kingdom from Ethiopia in each of the last five years; and whether there are any plans for such imports in the current year.

Mr. Alan Clark: Any future imports are dependent on conditions of supply and demand. These imports would be at the discretion of individual traders, not Her Majesty's Government.

The information relating to past imports which can be supplied within limits of cost is as follows:

Weight million tons

	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985 (Jan-Nov)

Computer Security

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will identify the advisers on matters of computer security referred to in the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State's letter of 4 November 1985 to the hon. Member for Hammersmith.

Mr. Butcher: Our advisers are the Communications-Electronics Security Group which is part of GCHQ.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will identify and place in the Library the reports received by his Department on the risks of electromagnetic radiation to computer security.

Mr. Butcher: The most recent and publicly available report on this subject is "Electromagnetic Radiation from Video Display Units: An Eavesdropping Risk?" by Winn van Eck, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Export Controls

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will place in the Library a full list of items, the export of which are subject to control, specifying the grounds in each case.

Mr. Alan Clark: A full list of items subject to export control is given in schedule 1 to the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1985 (SI 849), a copy of which is in the Library.

Implements of Torture

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many export licences were applied for in each of the last three years regarding specially-designed implements of torture; how many countries were involved; and how many such applications were granted.

Mr. Alan Clark: It has been the practice of successive Governments not to make public such information about export licences.

Leather Footwear (Exports)

Mr. Freeman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what were the exports of the leather footwear industry for the last available 12 months.

Mr. Alan Clark: Leather footwear to the value of £113 million was exported in the 12 months to December 1985.

Regional Aid

Mr. Maclean asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to review the workings of regional aid with particular reference to the qualifying areas based on the new travel-to-work areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The administration of the revised regional assistance schemes introduced in November 1984 is closely monitored. I propose to review these aspects by the end of the year.

Telegraph Poles

Mr. Murphy asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take action to seek to prevent British Telecom erecting telegraph poles in south Hatfield.

Mr. Butcher: British Telecom's powers to erect telegraph poles are governed by the telecommunications code set out in schedule 2 of the Telecommunications Act 1984, though British Telecom's licence limits the application of these powers in the case of conservation areas, national parks and the like. It is not my right hon. Friend's intention to propose changes.

Research and Development

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the gross and per capita expenditure of his Department on industrial and commercial research and development allocated (a) to industry, (b) to universities and colleges and (c) in total between 1975 and 1985; what information he has on comparable figures for (a) the United States of America, (b) West Germany, (c) France and (d) Italy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The available information is given in the following table. Data for years prior to 1980-81 can be provided only at disproportionate cost. Information on Government spending on research and development from international sources is not subdivided according to individual Government Departments.

Expenditure on research and development in science and technology by the Department of Trade and Industry

Consumer Statistics

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to the percentage of total purchases of cutlery in 1985 which were imported and as to the corresponding percentages in 1980 and 1975; and what equivalent information he has in respect of electric toasters, built-in electric cookers, food mixers, footwear, sports equipment, music centres, dishwashers, washing machines, cars, electric razors, typewriters, photographic films, fountain pens, petrol engines below 10 horse power and textiles and knitwear.

Mr. Butcher: Reliable information on import penetration is not available for individual products. The following table shows imports as a percentage of home demand for activity headings, groups or classes of the standard industrial classification (1980) where these agree broadly with the categories required. Figures for 1975 and 1985 are not currently available: annual data for 1978 and 1984 are given instead.

*Import penetration

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many applications for regional selective assistance have been received by his Department from firms based in the Cannock and Burntwood constituency.

Mr. Peter Morrison: There have been eight applications totalling £473,627 for regional selective assistance in the Cannock and Burntwood constituency since the new policy was introduced on 29 November 1984.

Concorde

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish in the Official Report a statement on the contribution to the accumulated development costs of Concorde made by the revenues from the operation of the aircraft in the three most convenient recent years.

Mr. Pattie: No direct contribution to accumulated development costs has derived from the in-service operating revenues of the aircraft. However, British responsibility for the in-service support of Concorde was transferred to British Airways on 1 April 1984, at which time the airline made a total payment of £16·5 million to the Government in respect of the Government's stock of Concorde airframe and engine spares and the agreed proportion of the airline's estimated aggregate surplus on its Concorde operations to that date.

Suits (Imports)

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action his Department proposes to take to control the level of importation of men's cheap suits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Imports of men's suits from a number of state trading and developing exporting countries are subject to quantitative restrictions under bilateral arrangements. I have recently received representations from the United Kingdom industry about the very low prices of imports from one state trading country in particular, and my Department has already drawn this to the attention of the European Commission.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people are employed by his Department's north-west office.

Mr. Peter Morrison: On 1 February a total of 223 people were employed on a permanent or casual basis at the Department's north-west regional office at locations in Manchester, Liverpool and Bootle.

Land Rover

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assurances he has sought from General Motors about the security of the jobs of the employees at Land Rover in Solihull.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement my right hon. Friend made on 3 February 1986 which outlined the undertakings that we would require before any arrangement with General Motors would be acceptable to the Government. The GM worldwide distribution network particularly in the United States of America also offers the opportunity for substantial and early additional sales of Land Rover products thereby enhancing job prospects in Solihull.

Overseas Companies (United Kingdom Acquisitions)

Mr. Shore asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on the identities of those public quoted companies in the United Kingdom acquired by the United States of America, Japan and EEC companies in each year since 1978.

Mr. Howard: The available information on the nationality of overseas companies which acquired United Kingdom industrial and commercial companies is published in "Business Monitor MQ7" (table 5). A further breakdown showing the number of such companies acquired by United States and Japanese companies is as follows:

Number of United Kingdom Industrial and Commercial companies acquired by foreign companies

	Total	Residence of acquiring company
		EC	United States of America	Japan	Other
1979	6	3	2	—	1
1980	23	6	11	—	6
1981	75	14	22	—	39
1982	29	4	13	—	12
1983	24	3	12	—	9
1984	28	1	14	2	11
1985*	25	5	9	2	9

* Provisional.
Note: Excludes banking, insurance and oil companies.

In addition the Office of Fair Trading will receive information on the identities of bidding and target companies and will consider proposed mergers and takeovers which fall within the provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1973. Many proposed mergers do not take place.

Imperial Tobacco

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what factors will affect his decision on whether to refer the Hanson Trust's takeover bid for Imperial Tobacco to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Howard: The Secretary of State will take his decision in accordance with his statutory responsibilities, and in the light of the Director General of Fair Trading's advice. He will therefore take into account all the relevant circumstances.

Steel

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a table showing the total volume of exports and imports of steel over the most recent annual period for which figures are available and comparable figures for each of the previous 10 years, showing the percentage of steel imports in each year which came from the EEC.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The following is the information:

United Kingdom trade in steel industry products

	Exports	Imports	Percentage of United Kingdom imports from EC countries
	Million tonnes	Million tonnes	Million tonnes
1975	2·98	3·72	70
1976	3·52	4·09	64

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the Commission of the EEC last proposed a reduction in the number of integrated steel plants in the United Kingdom; and what proposals were then made about long-term structure of the United Kingdom steel industry.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The European Commission has never made any such proposals.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to how many persons were employed in the steel industries of each member state of the EEC at the most recent date for which figures are available; and what percentage reduction this represents by comparison with a comparable date in 1978.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The following is the information:

Total labour force employed on ECSC activities

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the number of staff employed in the regional office network of the Export Credits Guarantee Department;

(2) if he will make a statement on the implications for the Export Credits Guarantee Department's regional office network of the management review of the Export Credits Guarantee Department;

(3) if it is his intention to strengthen the regional office network of the Export Credits Guarantee Department;

(4) how many inquiries there were from local exporters concerning export credits insurance in each of the Export Credits Guarantee Department regional offices in 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Export Credit (Fraud)

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement concerning his plans to deal with fraud in export credit.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Export Credits Guarantee Department is constantly on the alert for fraud and has recently set up a unit to co-ordinate the Department's policy and investigate particular cases, work which was previously handled by separate parts of the organisation.

Engineering Companies

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to how many engineering companies went out of business during 1985.

Mr. Howard: Information on companies going out of business classified by industry is available only in respect of compulsory and creditors' voluntary liquidations. In Great Britain there were 1,056 compulsory and creditors' voluntary liquidations of companies classified to the metals and engineering industries (classes 22 and 31-37 of the standard industrial classification) during the period January to September 1985.

Kleinwort, Benson Ltd

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what moneys have been paid to Kleinwort, Benson Ltd by his Department in the last seven years; and for what services.

Mr. Peter Morrison [pursuant to his reply, 5 February 1986, c. 164]: As far as payments to Kleinwort, Benson Ltd on the privatisation programme are concerned, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Financial Secretary to the Treasury on 5 February 1986 at col. 186.

Kleinwort Benson has undertaken no other work for this Department during the present Administration.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the grounds upon which recovery of an overpayment of supplementary benefit may be waived.

Mr. Major: As a general rule, steps are not taken to recover an over-provision of supplementary benefit which is wholly due to official error, but otherwise full recovery is sought. Generally the right to recover overpayments is decided by the independent adjudicating authorities. When determining the extent and method of repayment, the individual circumstances of the person required to repay are taken into account by the Secretary of State. Careful consideration is given to various factors, such as the person's age, health, domestic and financial circumstances. Where repayment would cause undue hardship or could not be cost-effectively pursued, recovery may very exceptionaly be waived.

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the numbers in receipt of supplementary benefit for each category in the social security offices serving the York constituency for May 1979, June 1983 and the most recent month for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: The York constituency is covered for social security purposes by the Department's office at York, although its boundaries are not conterminous with the constituency.

The table shows the number of people receiving supplementary benefit from that office for each category at May 1979, May 1983—the nearest figures available, and December 1985—the latest figures available.

	May 1979	May 1983	December 1985
Non-unemployed persons under pension age	2,259	2,763	3,796
Unemployed persons	1,488	4,426	5,992

Social Security Reform

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in what ways, other than those generally applicable to social security recipients, the position of unemployed people will be changed by his proposals for social security.

Mr. Newton: Under income support, unemployed claimants will receive a personal allowance based on age and marital status. In addition, extra weekly help will be available to unemployed families with the introduction of the family premium. This will be payable to all those with children, on top of the personal allowance and the rates for individual children. There will also be a higher earnings disregard of £15 were couples have been unemployed for two years or more.

Exceptionally Severe Weather

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services in which local office areas a period of exceptionally severe weather has been declared in the current winter.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) on 23 January 1986 at column 308.

Single Payments

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report comparable statistics on the total amount paid out in single payments to claimants in different areas, based on the smallest convenient geographical areas, and on the most recent convenient dates.

Mr. Major: I am arranging for a table, showing the total amounts paid out in single payments by each of the Department's local offices during the year ended 9 April 1985, to be placed in the Library as soon as possible.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give, for the most recent month for which information is available (a) the number of single payment awards as a rate per 1,000 claimants and (b) the average single payment to (i) persons under pension age not required to register for work, (ii) persons under pension age required to register for work and (iii) persons over pension age for each social security office.

Mr. Major: This information is not immediately available but will be obtained as soon as possible.

NHS (Pay)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of the increase in the health service index (a) since 1978 and (b) since 1979, is attributable to the nationally determined movement in the rates of pay to National Health Service employees.

Mr. Hayhoe: The contribution of pay settlements to movements in hospital and community health services pay and prices is determined both by the proportion of HCHS expenditure spent on pay, and by the extent of the pay increases themselves. Between 1978-79 and 1984-85, the latest year for which informaton is available, the HCHS pay and prices index rose by 97·6 per cent., and the index of HCHS pay rose by 99·3 per cent. Between 1979-80 and 1984-85, the HCHS pay and prices index rose by 64 per cent., and the index of HCHS pay rose by 65 per cent. About three quarters of the increase in the HCHS pay and prices index can be attributed to movements in the HCHS pay index.

Domestic Service Advice Notes

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will re-issue to health authorities the series of domestic service advice notes, particularly those concerning cleaning frequencies, management of domestic services and quality control.

Mr. Whitney: There are no immediate plans to re-issue the domestic service advice notes.

Hospitals (Cleaning Standards)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what guidance has been issued by his Department since 1980 on the maintenance of standards of cleaning in hospitals.

Mr. Whitney: The domestic supervisors training kit was issued in 1980. Since then, our circular HC(83)18 on competitive tendering said that standards required should be clearly specified when going out to tender, and the specimen contract for domestic services, issued with DA(83)40, provides a framework for such specifications.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will place in the Library his recent confidential letter to regional health authority chairpersons containing advice on the strictness of controls on the quality of cleaning in hospitals.

Mr. Whitney: The chairman of the National Health Service management board wrote to regional health authority chairmen on 3 January 1986 giving further advice to assist health authorities to obtain maximum benefits from the competitive tendering policy. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

NHS (Private Contractors)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will place in the Library for each tendering exercise, material showing the price of the winning tender, together with costs credited and debited to the in-house and commercial tenders for monitoring, overheads, capital and so on, and the below the line redundancy and early retirement costs.

Mr. Whitney: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social services whether it is Her Majesty's Government's policy that all affected National Health Service staff should be informed of the price of the winning tender following a tendering exercise, together with cost credited and debited to the in-house and commercial tenders for monitoring overheads, capital and so on, and the below the line redundancy and early retirement costs.

Mr. Whitney: Health authorities are expected to keep staff interests informed on competitive tendering issues as circular HC(83)18 makes clear.

NHS Staff (Early Retirement)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether he will advise health authorities to make known to (a) all tenderers, (b) all affected National Health Service staff and (c) his own Department the full costs of early retirement following each tendering exercise; and if he will place this information in the Library;

(2) what new factors have led his Department to change its advice in relation to the full costs of early retirement following a tendering exercise;

(3) on what grounds it has been decided that the full costs of early retirement should not be considered by health authorities when comparing tenders for the provision of ancillary services.

Mr. Whitney: When appraising tenders, health authorities need to compare the costs which would occur during the period of the contract. To include costs which might occur after that without having regard to probable continuing savings would be misleading. It was necessary to amend our advice to make this clear. It would not be helpful to advise health authorities to consider and make known the full cost of early retirement in the way requested.

Linen Rental

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will detail the experience that leads his Department to advise that linen rental can often prove cost effective.

Mr. Whitney: Significant use is being made of linen rental by hospitals abroad and by private hospitals in this country.

Health Authorities (Departmental Advice)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the difference in status and authority between a departmental circular to health authorities and advice such as that offered in December 1985.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will clarify the advice issued to health authorities in December 1985 to ensure that they do not understand paragraph 6 to mean that less information should be collected about the standards achieved by contractors.

Mr. Whitney: We do not consider this will discourage health authorities from collecting necessary information.

Laundry Services

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) on what grounds has it been decided that tenders should be sought whenever capital investment of £250,000 or more for laundry services is being examined;

(2) what new factors have led his Department to change its guidance in relation to the level of capital investment for laundry services above which tenders should be sought.

Mr. Whitney: Under our previous guidance a health authority could spend up to £500,000 on its laundry without going out to tender for this service. We have concluded that this limit is too high to ensure that health authorities are getting the best value for money in their laundry services. So they have now been asked to go to tender to test that the most cost effective solution is adopted before any capital expenditure of over £250,000 on laundry schemes.

Residential Homes

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people presently live in residential care; of these, how many live in (a) voluntary homes, (b) private homes, and (c) local authority homes; and for each category how many residents are on supplementary benefit.

Mr. Whitney: Information is not available centrally in precisely the form requested. The latest comparable data are given below.

England: Residential care homes registered under the Registered Homes Act 1984 and comparable local authority homes—31 March 1985 (provisional)

	Residents
Voluntary	*36,000
Privately run	*70,000
Local authority	121,000
	227,000

* In the case of homes for the mentally disordered we are able to give figures only for those residents who are supported by local authorities.

In Great Britain on 31 December 1984 42,000† people in voluntary and privately-run homes (including nursing homes) were in receipt of supplementary benefit and additionally 35,000† residents of residential care homes and comparable local authority homes were supported by both supplementary benefit and by local authorities.

†Provisional figures only.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many (a) voluntary and (b) private residential care and nursing homes have closed down following the introduction of the Supplementary Benefit (Requirements and Resources) Miscellaneous Provisions Regulations 1985.

Mr. Whitney: The information is not available centrally.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services for each year since 1980 for which figures are available how much each local authority has spent on payments towards residential care in voluntary and private sector homes.

Mr. Whitney: The available figures cover payments for services provided by voluntary organisations and registered private persons. The following table gives figures for England for the years 1980-81 to 1983-84; 1984-85 national figures are not yet available. Tables showing individual local authority figures will take a little longer to compile and I will let the right hon. Member have a further reply, including 1984-85 figures where available, as soon as possible.

In addition some local authorities make general contributions to voluntary organisations whose activities may include the provision of residential care. Any such contributions are not included in the table.

	£ million cash
1980-81	119
1981-82	135
1982-83	144
1983-84	146

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) which organisations Ernst and Whinney have met in compiling their report on residential care;

(2) when he expects Ernst and Whinney to report on their survey of residential care.

Mr. Newton: Ernst and Whinney conducted a sample survey of about 1,300 homes in England, Scotland and Wales on the basis of a questionnaire backed up in some cases by interviews. About 450 have responded. I understand that discussions have also been held, in the process of designing and conducting the survey, with local and national organisations including, for example, the interested trade associations such as the National Confederation of Registered Rest Homes Association and leading charities. These were held either at Ernst and Whinney's request or at that of the bodies concerned. We expect Ernst and Whinney's report in the next few weeks.

Mr. J. Lowry

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will indicate what progress concerning Mr. J. Lowry of 62 Parkhill Avenue, Rusholme, Manchester has been made since the letter to the hon. Member for Stretford from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Social Security of 20 December 1985; and whether he will make it his policy to seek to resolve the matter before 21 February.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to the letter which my noble Friend sent to him on 5 February about the developments in Mr. Lowry's case.

Dr. A. J. Blowers

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will reappoint Dr. A. J. Blowers for a further term of office as chairman of the West Surrey and North East Hampshire district health authority.

Mr. Hayhoe: I will let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the approximate turnover of staff in grades of clerical assistant and clerical officers, respectively, in social security offices open to the public covering the Brent, East constituency, together with maximum and minimum rates of turnover naming the offices concerned.

Mr. Major: I shall let the right hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Post Offices (Services)

Mr. Patchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what advice he has received from the consultants appointed by him to advise on the scope for the transfer of services provided on his behalf by Post Offices to other institutions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: No such consultancy exercise has been commissioned. I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the recent survey carried out on attitudes to methods and frequency of payment of benefit. The conclusions of the survey are now being studied.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list for each quarter from 1 January 1982 the average level of direct deduction from supplementary benefit for fuel bills for claimants who are consumers of the North Eastern electricity board or consumers of the North Eastern gas board.

Mr. Newton: The information is not available in the form requested. The table shows the average level of all deductions for electricity and gas, for England, Scotland, Wales and Great Britain respectively. Figures are for December 1981, 1982 and 1983 (the latest available).

Average deductions for fuel

Mr. Walters asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will introduce a scheme to enable letters and outstanding invoices from individual creditors to be forwarded to supplementary benefit claimants who have moved to an address unknown to those creditors;

(2) what guidelines are given to local office staff as to their response to individual creditors who are unable to trace debting customers in receipt of supplementary benefit.

Mr. Major: All information held by the Department about individuals, including their addresses, is confidential and staff are instructed not to release the information without authority. The rationale for this policy is that this informaton is obtained and held solely for the purpose of maintaining national insurance contribution records and administering social security benefits. For this reason I do not believe it would be right for the information to be used to assist creditors to recover debts.

Hospitals

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average catchment area, defined both in terms of geographical area and in terms of population, served by a district general hospital in (a) the south-east region and (b) the whole country.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information she seeks. Information on the extent and population of catchment areas served by district general hospitals is not collected centrally. The hon. Member may wish to write to the chairmen of the regional health authorities in which she has a particular interest. They may be able to provide the information requested.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report for the years 1983, 1984 and 1985 (a) the number of hospitals with maternity and gynaecological services without a special care baby unit and (b) the number of hospitals with maternity and gynaecological services without paediatric cover.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have such information as can be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost as soon as possible.

North-Western Regional Health Authority

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1), pursuant to his answer of 4 February, Official Report, columns 143-4, what were the difficulties in securing suitable nominations for a member of the North-Western regional health authority from a trade union background; what steps he took after October 1984 to overcome these difficulties; how many nominations he received after October 1984 from the North-West trade union congress and individual trade unions, and when; what formal response he made to those nominating bodies; and why he has not appointed any of those nominated;

(2), pursuant to the answer of 4 February, Official Report, columns 143-4, why the previous member with a trade union background was not reappointed to the North-Western regional health authority; when he expects to make an appointment to the vacant post; and what criteria he will use in making such an appointment.

Mr. Hayhoe: I will let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Benefits

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the number of claimants in receipt of (a) unemployment benefit, (b) supplementary benefit and (c) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit excluding lone parents, couples with children and pensioners for the latest available year in Scotland;

(2) what was the number of claimant couples with children in receipt of (a) family income supplement, (b) unemployment benefit (c) supplementary benefit and (d) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit for the latest available year in Scotland;

(3) what was the number of lone parent claimants in receipt of (a) family income supplement, (b) unemployment benefit, (c) supplementary benefit and (d) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit for the latest available year in Wales;

(4) what was the number of claimants in receipt of (a) unemployment benefit, (b) supplementary benefit and (c) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit excluding lone parents, couples with children and pensioners for the latest available year in Wales;

(5) what is the number of lone parent claimants in receipt of (a) family income supplement, (b) unemployment benefit, (c) supplementary benefit and (d) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit for the latest available year in Scotland;

(6) what was the number of claimant couples with children in receipt of (a) family income supplement, (b) unemployment benefit, (c) supplementary benefit and (d) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit for the latest available year in Wales;

(7) what was the number of claimants in receipt of (a) unemployment benefit (b) supplementary benefit and (c) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit, excluding lone parents, couples with children and pensioners for the latest available year;

(8) what was the number of claimant couples with children in receipt of (a) family income supplement, (b) unemployment benefit, (c) supplementary benefit and (d) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit for the latest available year;

(9) what was the number of lone parent claimants in receipt of *(a)*family income supplement, (b) unemployment benefit, (c) supplementary benefit and (d) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit for the latest available year.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the number of claimants in receipt of (a) sickness benefit, (b) invalidity benefit pension, (c) industrial disablement benefit and (d) non-contributory invalidity pension and housewives' non-contributory invalidity pension or (e) severe disablement allowance for the latest available year in Wales;

(2) what was the number of claimants in receipt of (a) sickness benefit, (b) invalidity benefit pension, (c) industrial disablement benefit and (d) non-contributory invalidity pension and housewives' non-contributory invalidity pension or (e) severe disablement allowance for the latest available year in Scotland;

(3) what was the number of claimants in receipt of (a) sickness benefit, (b) invalidity benefit pension, (c) industrial disablement benefit and (d) non-contributory invalidity pension and housewives' non-conributory invalidity pension or (e) severe disablement allowance for the latest available year in England and Wales.

Mr. Major: The information for the latest years for which annual statistics are available is set out in the following table. The figures derive from a computer analysis of statistical returns. Those for severe disablement allowance indicate that the figure given in the reply by my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security and the Disabled to the hon. Member for Dunfermline. West (Mr. Douglas) on 29 November 1985 at columns 714-15, for October 1985, which was based on a clerical count, was under-estimated.

	England and Wales	Wales	Scotland
Sickness benefit*	295,000	26,000	43,000
Invalidity benefit*	630,000	88,000	102,000
Industrial disablement benefit†	170,000	20,000	16,000
Severe disablement allowance‡	220,000	19,000	32,000

* As at 2 April 1983.
† As at 30 September 1983.
‡ As at 30 March 1985.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the number of claimant pensioners (a) aged over 80 years and (b) aged between 60 and 79 years in receipt of (i) retirement pension, (ii) supplementary pension and (iii) retirement pension and supplementary pension for the latest available year in Scotland;

(2) what was the number of claimant pensioners (a) aged over 80 years and (b) aged between 60 and 79 years in receipt of (i) retirement pension, (ii) supplementary pension and (iii) retirement pension and supplementary pension for the latest available year in Wales;

(3) what was the number of claimant pensioners (a) aged over 80 years and (b) aged between 60 and 79 years in receipt of (i) retirement pension, (ii) supplementary pension and (iii) retirement pension and supplementary pension for the latest available year.

Mr. Major: The information requested is given in the table.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he received the interim report of the expert working party on breast cancer screening; when he expects to place it in the Library; and when he expects to receive the full report.

Mr. Hayhoe: The interim report of the working group on breast cancer screening was received on 8 January and was placed in the Library on 6 February. The final report is expected later this year.

Non-dependant Deductions

Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he has any plans to amend the relevant regulations to remove the requirement for a young person on a community industry scheme to pay for a full non-dependant deduction from parents' housing benefit; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has any plans to link the level of non-dependant deductions to the level of income of the non-dependant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The future arrangements mentioned in the White Paper for non-dependant deductions are still under consideration.

Registered Homes Tribunals

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has laid down any guidelines about the composition of each registered homes tribunal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The Registered Homes Act 1984 requires that a registered homes tribunal shall consist of a chairman appointed from the legal panel and two other members from the panel of experts. The chairman and the legal panel are appointed by the Lord Chancellor and the expert members and panel of experts by the Lord President of the Council. No person is qualified for appointment to the legal panel unless he possesses legal qualifications considered suitable by the Lord Chancellor. Members of the panel of experts have to have had experience in social work, medicine, nursing, midwifery or such other experience as the Lord President considers suitable.

Heating Additions

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which housing estates in Scotland are currently designated as hard to heat for the purpose of supplementary benefit claimants receiving estate rate heating additions; what are the current criteria for designation; and how many households in Scotland are currently in receipt of estate rate heating additions.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farm Workers

Mr. Cohen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how the average earnings of British farm workers compare with their counterparts in Germany, Holland and France.

Mrs. Fenner: The most recent published information on the comparative earnings of agricultural workers in the United Kingdom, West Germany, the Netherlands and France relates to 1982 and is shown in the table. Results for 1984 are expected to become available shortly.

Sheep Worrying

Mr. Crouch asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will institute an inquiry into the loss of sheep killed by stray dogs; and if he will consider introducing measures strengthening the penalties against the owners of these dogs;

(2) what compensation is payable from public funds to sheep farmers who suffer loss of sheep killed by stray dogs.

Mrs. Fenner: The loss of sheep and other livestock killed by dogs is a matter of concern to the Government. Livestock worrying is an offence under the Dogs (Protection of Livestock) Act 1953, and the maximum fine on the owner or handler of a dog found worrying livestock on agricultural land was raised in 1984 to £400. The Animals Act 1971 makes the keeper of a dog which kills or injures livestock responsible for the damage and liable to a claim for compensation, and under the same legislation farmers may shoot a dog if there is no other way of preventing it attacking their stock.

The problem of worrying is well understood, and I do not believe there are grounds for an inquiry. However, I am aware that the legislation must be supplemented by a vigorous campaign of education, publicity and advice. My Department is contributing to this by continuing its successful publicity campaign launched in 1984. I would be glad to enlist my hon. Friend's assistance in this campaign, and will be sending him the Department's material on the subject.

Less Favoured Areas

Mr. Speller asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the average delay in settling appeals on less favoured areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: Appeals against the exclusion of land from the less favoured areas have to be considered against a number of criteria. Checks on the first of these, land quality, are already under way but will take some months to complete given that approximately 11,000 representations have been received. Appeals which satisfy the land quality test will then have to be assessed against economic and demographic criteria before any case is put to the Commission for adjustment of the United Kingdom's LFA line.

We shall be notifying appellants over the coming months whose land fails the land quality test. They will then have the opportunity to make representations to a regional panel.

Feed-quality Cereals

Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department is sponsoring into industrial uses for feed-quality cereals.

Mr. Gummer: There is already a large existing body of knowledge on this topic, and I believe that it is more appropriate for further research to be sponsored by the industry rather than the Government. My Department, therefore, sponsors no such research.

Poultry

Mr. Hancock asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether regulations governing poultry factories specify the extent of access by staff to the shackle line up to the point of entry into the scald tank to make certain that no poultry enters it alive;

(2) whether regulations require poultry processing factories to have adequate ventilation and humidifying equipment in the poultry enclosures;

(3) whether regulations on stunning equipment used in poultry slaughter require use of visual or audible warning devices to indicate failure of equipment.

Mrs. Fenner: Regulation 8(1)(b) of the Slaughter of Poultry (Humane Conditions) Regulations 1984 requires that adequate provision be made for action to be taken for removing birds from the slaughterline if necessary.

Regulation 5*(c)* requires the provision of adequate ventilation for birds awaiting slaughter.

Supplementary guidance on access to the slaughter line, on control of humidity and on the responsibility of management to ensure that stunning equipment is at all times in good working order is to be included in a code of practice to be made under section 3A of the Slaughter of Poultry Act 1967.

Mr. Hancock asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether any regulations require the staff of poultry slaughterhouses to be licensed.

Mrs. Fenner: It is proposed to make regulations to require the licensing of those engaged in the stunning and slaughter of poultry.

Mr. Hancock asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what regulations govern the maximum permitted time that poultry is allowed to be transported between farm and slaughterhouse.

Mrs. Fenner: There are no regulations governing a maximum time that poultry may be transported between farm and slaughterhouse. However, both the Conveyance of Live Poultry Order 1919 and the Transit of Animals (General) Order 1973 protect the welfare of poultry in transit by regulating the conditions under which they may be transported.

Surplus Food

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the sales of surplus food at special low prices proposed by the European Commission to be financed by the £2,000 million special fund will be subject to the agreement of the management committee.

Mr. Gummer: The European Commission has the responsibility for measures disposing of stocks of agricultural products held in public intervention. It is usual for Commission measures for stock disposal to be put to a management committee for its opinion.

However, the Commission has made no proposals for a special fund to finance stock disposals.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the proposal by the European Commission that agricultural spending in 1986 should be further increased by £500 million and that a special fund of £2,000 million should be established for surplus disposal.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Nimrod Patrols

Dr. Godman asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why his Department has decided to mount extra Nimrod patrols over the south-western approaches, as announced on 19 December; if Her Majesty's Government have decided to replace the Nimrods with civil aircraft; and if this is a temporary measure as a result of Spanish accession to the European Economic Community.

Mr. Gummer: Since 1 January 1986, the frequency of Nimrod patrols over the south-western approaches has been increased temporarily to ensure that, during the settling-in period following Spanish accession, Spanish vessels fishing in that area comply fully with Community conservation and control measures.

The replacement of Nimrod aircraft with civilian aircraft has been decided, as my right hon. Friend said in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Wealden (Sir G. Johnson-Smith) on 14 November 1985, at column 280, because the aerial surveillance task can be carried out more effectively by using aircraft of a lighter type.

Monofilament Gill Nets

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he intends to introduce any measures to prohibit the carriage of monofilament gill nets on fishing vessels in English and Welsh inshore waters.

Mr. Gummer: No. These nets may be legitimately used in English and Welsh coastal waters to catch a variety of fish species.

Agricultural Workers

Mr. John asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of farms in the United Kingdom employ (a) one to five persons, (b) five to 10 persons and (c) over 10 persons; and what are the equivalent figures for Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and each of the standard regions in England.

Mrs. Fenner [pursuant to her reply, 24 January 1986, c. 343]: The information requested is presented in the following tables.

THE ARTS

Government Funding

31. Mr. Murphy asked the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on the increase of Government funding for the arts since 1979.

Mr. Luce: Total central Government expenditure on the arts and libraries programme will have increased by nearly 25 per cent. in real terms between 1979-80 and 1986-87. This figure includes the additional central funding following the abolition of the GLC and metropolitan county councils; excluding that, the real increase over the period will have been about 11 per cent.

Expenditure

32. Mr. Buchan asked the Minister for the Arts what is the expected change in local authority expenditure and total expenditure on the arts between 1985-86 and 1986-87, both in cash and real terms.

Mr. Luce: Central Government expenditure on the arts and libraries programme is planned to rise between 1985-86 and 1986-87 by nearly 18 per cent. in cash and by over 12 per cent. in real terms. The Government's planning totals for local authority current and capital expenditure on libraries and museums have increased by 13 per cent. in cash and by 8 per cent. in real terms over the same period.

Individual and Corporate Contributions

33. Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Minister for the Arts what plans he has to encourage individual and corporate giving to the arts.

Mr. Luce: The business sponsorship incentive scheme has already proved very successful and I am continuing it with an increased budget of £1·75 million for 1986-87.

Various tax incentives already encourage individual and corporate giving, but we shall continue to look for ways of improving the situation.

Arts Council

34. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts when he last met the chairman of the Arts Council; and what was discussed at that meeting.

Mr. Luce: I met the chairman and secretary-general of the Arts Council on 4 February and we discussed arts matters of mutual concern.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts how much has been (a) budgeted and (b) spent by the Arts Council for consultants' fees arising out of abolition of the Greater London council.

Mr. Luce: No separate budget was prepared; but I understand that approximately £14,000 has been spent, to date, on fees for two consultants.

Sadler's Wells

35. Mr. Freud asked the Minister for the Arts whether he will make direct funding available to Sadler's Wells; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: No. Funding is a matter for the Arts Council; but I know that the council is concerned to see that its clients, notably the Sadler's Wells royal ballet, can continue to use this historic and much loved theatre. The council has announced today that it will hold a meeting on Friday 14 February with Sadler's Wells and the three companies that regularly use the theatre. This is to discuss the possibility that the companies should be given additional funds to enable them to pay economic levels of rent. In that way the Arts Council would make a substantial contribution to keeping the theatre open.

I applaud this initiative, and I hope and believe that a scheme on these lines, combined with other fund-raising efforts as appropriate, will enable the main stage of the theatre to remain open.

I understand that there is also a separate plan to open a new community studio during 1986-87. No doubt Sadler's Wells will be discussing this with the Arts Council and the relevant successor authorities.

South Bank

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts what information he has as to what services in the South Bank arts complex are due to be contracted out.

Mr. Luce: As the South Bank announced in November 1985, it will be contracting out cleaning services, security and some maintenance.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts (1) what was the full cost to the Arts Council of the fact finding visits abroad made by Mr. Richard Pulford and Mr. Ronald Grierson in preparation for assuming responsibility for the South Bank arts complex; and which countries were visited;

(2) what reason was given by the Arts Council for the salary difference between the posts of director of arts co-ordination and general director (administration) on the South Bank;

(3) if he was consulted over the salaries being offered for the Arts Council's new posts of director of arts co-ordination, controller of marketing and resources, controller of touring and controller of planning.

Mr. Luce: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Museums and Galleries

Mr. Evennett asked the Minister for the Arts whether the Government have completed their consultations on a new system for handling the income generated by national museums and galleries; and what financial provision will be made for these in 1986-87.

Mr. Luce: Consultations on the basis outlined in my predecessor's statement on 26 July 1985 have confirmed the need, which was recognised in unanimous recommendations earlier from the Education, Science and Arts Select Committee, for a greater incentive for the national museums and galleries both to maximise their receipts and to use them more effectively. In my view such an incentive entails two main changes:

i. forecast receipts should no longer be specifically netted off against total Estimate requirements to provide a net grant; and ii there should be a reasonable facility to carry over unspent moneys at the end of the financial year.

I believe that, in order to effect these changes within existing conventions, it would be necessary to convert the method of financing from direct vote provision to grant-in-aid. I therefore propose to consult the Public Accounts Committee on this, and also the Treasury and Civil Service Select Committee and the Education, Science and Arts Select Committee. Subject to their views, I would propose to make this conversion from the financial year 1986-87 for the nine national museums and galleries for which I am responsible, so that the institutions could derive the earliest possible benefit from the change. The main Supply Estimates will initially be presented to Parliament on the existing direct vote basis. Implementation of the changes would entail presenting revised Estimates to Parliament in the summer.

Under the new arrangements, the Government would not now propose to determine the grant-in-aid as a given percenage of each institution's assessed running costs, as foreshadowed in the statement of 26 July 1985. In the light of the representations which the museums and galleries have made, the size of the revised grants in 1986-87 would, instead by settled starting from each institution's net vote provision (excluding revotes) for running costs in 1985-86. The former proposal would have involved reducing the grants of some institutions and increasing those of others in order to produce a uniform percentage to be financed by the Exchequer with inequitable results; the method now envisaged avoids the need for that adjustment.

The cash levels of grant-in-aid would be increased as appropriate in future years without any further adjustment to reflect forecast changes in receipts for those years. At the end of each financial year the institutions would be able to carry over unspent moneys equivalent to up to two per cent. of the annual grant and up to 10 per cent. of their annual receipts. Arrangements would be made to enable them to transfer part of their receipts to endowment funds if appropriate for the financing of long-term projects. The system of revotes of unspent surplus receipts from previous years would no longer be necessary, and would cease upon the introduction of grant-in-aid.

The purpose of these proposals is not to replace public by private funding, but to provide an opportunity for a larger growth in the total funding available to the national museums and galleries than would otherwise be possible. The institutions and their trustees will need a firm basis on which to make their plans. It is the Government's intention that there should be no further change in the method of settling their grants for running costs for at least three years, and that an adequate period of notice should be given of any intention subsequently to introduce such a change. During that period no institution, however much it earns, would have its grant-in-aid affected on that account.

Revised grants-in-aid for 1986-87 should be announced after completion of the consultations with the parliamentary committees. They would differ somewhat from the provision to be initially in the Supply Estimates, due partly to the changed treatment of receipts and revotes, and partly to my intention to allocate virtually the whole of the available resources to increases in the institutions' baselines. I would however reserve the right in future years to allocate part of the available total selectively in response to any special needs, as appropriate. The provision which I propose for 1986-87 on the existing direct vote basis is summarised below and is within the arts and libraries programme total given in the Public Expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702). Within the sum of £57·8 million for 1986-87, about £8·2 million is being devoted to purchase grants for which the basic provision (excluding revotes) continues at the cash levels established in 1985-86; and some £49·6 million for other net running costs, compared with £48·1 million in 1985-86.

DEFENCE

Service Widows (Pensions)

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Defence what would be the cost of paying (a) a forces family pension or (b) a service widow's minimum rate pension to all widows of service men irrespective of the date of their marriage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: On (a), the cost of paying a forces family pension to all widows of post retirement marriage irrespective of their date of marriage is now estimated at around £13 million a year. This is only a broad indication of the additional order of costs drawn from the current cost of widows pensions and general population statistics on the age of marriage. On (b), without specific data on the marriages of service men after retirement, which is not available, it is not possible to estimate the cost of the award of pensions in this category. Of course such a change, if implemented would have to apply throughout the whole of the public service, and not only to the armed forces, which would naturally greatly add to the cost. The Government have no plans to introduce pensions for the widows of those service men and others who retired before 6 April 1978 and married after retirement.

Service Personnel (Housing)

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Defence what steps are being taken to enable service men and women to be assisted with home purchase during their service, or at the time of retirement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The MOD has for many years operated a scheme to give advances of pay to armed forces personnel to assist them with house purchase. Recovery is on an interest-free basis. Subject to certain conditions this advance is available either during their service (RN/RM) or near the time of retirement (Army/RAF). More recently the Government introduced in 1983 a new scheme which gives service personnel a discount of 30 per cent. on the purchase price of surplus married quarters. The Government have also allowed time in service accommodation to count towards the qualifying period for discount on the purchase of local authority and new town houses under the right to buy scheme. Although we keep the position under review, no further improvements are planned at present.

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the rights of service personnel to obtain rented municipal housing at the end of their service; if he has any plans to extend or amend these rights; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The allocation of council housing is the responsibility of local authorities. Members of the armed forces who are approaching the end of their service and wish to rent council housing must register with local authority housing departments in the normal way.

A joint circular from the Department of the Environment and Welsh Office has been sent to all local authorities in their areas to acquaint them with the special circumstances which should be taken into account when considering applications from ex-service personnel against their normal criteria. The Ministry of Defence can issue a "Certificate of cessation of entitlement to occupy a Service quarter and of impending homelessness" which gives local authorities as much early warning as possible of a need to rehouse a service family.

I have no plans to ask my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment or my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales to depart from current arrangements.

Research Expenditure

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department will spend on research in the current financial year.

Mr. Lee: I refer my hon. Friend to table 3.1 of the "Statement on Defence Estimates 1985, Volume 2" (Cmnd. 9430-11).

AOR Royal Fleet Auxiliaries

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce his decision on the contract to build the first of class AOR Royal Fleet Auxiliaries.

Mr. Garrett asked the Secretary of State for Defence which shipbuilding company has been successful in obtaining the contract to build an auxiliary oil replenishment vessel for the Royal Navy.

Mr. Lee: Tenders for the design and build of the first two new auxiliary oiler replenishment vessels are currently being evaluated. No decisions have been taken on the size and timing of orders.

Research and Development

Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for Defence what position Britain holds in the table of amount spent on defence-related research and development compared to other North Atlantic Treaty Organisation countries, including France.

Mr. Lee: NATO does not publish figures in the form requested. However, some comparative estimates for certain nations, based on material provided by the OECD, were published in Economic Trends, No. 382, August 1985, page 84, table 3.

Details of United Kingdom expenditure on defence research and development in recent years are set out in table 3.2 of the "Statement of Defence Estimates 1985" (Vol. 2) (Cmnd. 9430 II).

Low-flying Aircraft

Mr. Ashton asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints his Department received in 1985 about low-flying aircraft.

Mr. Lee: The number of inquiries and complaints received in 1985 about low flying was 4,206.

Defence Systems (Collaboration)

Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the European countries involved in collaborative programmes with the United Kingdom in the procurement of defence systems, together with the dates of the memoranda of understanding, the proportion of work in percentage and pounds sterling terms which accrues to each country in respect of the procurement order for each system for each country; the companies involved; and what information he has as to whether any such company or its employees have been the subject of any prosecution in their own, or any other country concerning the supply of arms or ammunition to another country within the last seven years, and the countries which it is alleged were so supplied.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I will answer shortly.

W30 Helicopter

Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set out his current intentions towards air staff target 404 and the W30 helicopter.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Our requirements for support helicopters are currently under review.

Harland and Wolff

Mr. Trotter asked the Secretary of State for Defence which firms of (a) accountants and (b) consultants have been appointed to report to him since 1979 on the defence procurement implications of placing naval orders with Harland and Wolff; when they were appointed; when their reports were received; and to what extent the firms concerned had previous knowledge or experience of the affairs of the company.

Mr. Lee: None.

HMS Nelson

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide a breakdown of the cost of refurbishing the wardroom of HMS Nelson.

Mr. Lee: The latest breakdown of the cost of refurbishing the wardroom of HMS Nelson is as follows:

Wardroom HMS Nelson
Breakdown of refurbishment costs

	£'000
Repairs to stone and brickwork	378
Replacement/repairs of Mechanical Services (ie heating, plumbing, sanitary fittings)	651
Replacement of electrical services, lighting protection	267
Renewal of rainwater goods (drainpipes, gutters)	29
Roof repairs	65
Redecoration (inside and out)	63
Alterations to existing cabins (ie bringing up to Scale area and provision)	350

	£'000
General repairs (new plasterwork, floor repairs, panelling, joinery, fire doors, fire appliance re-sitings	294
Work in BARHAM Block (temporary galley)	30
Asbestos removal	8
PSA supplies items (Building and civil Engineering—fittings, furniture, carpets and curtains)	149
PSA supplies items (Mechanical and Electrical—galley equipment)	51
Contingencies (standard allowance for unforeseens, especially pertinent to old and listed buildings)	30
	£2,365K

To this figure of £2,365,000 will have to be added approximately £394,000 (VAT £299,000; inflation £95,000).

Total £2,759,000
(Rounded up=£2·8 million)

The wardroom at HMS Nelson includes associated facilities occupying some 4,085 sq metres of floor space.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what tendering procedure was used for the contract to refurbish the wardroom of HMS Nelson; and if this procedure was in line with that usually used.

Mr. Lee: The normal competitive tendering procedure in line with normal practice was used to determine the contractor for the refurbishment of the wardroom of HMS Nelson.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the cost of £2·8 million for the refurbishment of the wardroom of HMS Nelson is made up of value added tax.

Mr. Lee: The figure is £299,000.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what accommodation is available in the wardroom of HMS Nelson.

Mr. Lee: Modernisation of the main wardroom building will provide single living accommodation to scale for 15 senior officers and 51 junior officers. Additionally five senior officers and 35 junior officers are accommodated in an adjoining annex, giving a total capacity henceforth of 20 senior officers and 86 junior officers.

Naval Houses (Portsmouth)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he has any plans to release on licence any more naval houses to Portsmouth city council;

(2) if he has any plans to sell any of the houses in his Department's ownership in Portsmouth;

(3) if he has any plans to release any of the naval houses in Portsmouth to local housing associations.

Mr. Lee: Not at present.

United States Bases

Mr. Foulkes asked the Secretary of State for Defence if the ambassadors' agreement of April 1950 regulating the presence of United States bases in the United Kingdom and the subsequent administrative agreement of 1953 are both still classified documents.

Mr. Stanley: I shall answer shortly.

National Armaments Director

Mr. Shore asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the post of National Armaments Director was first established; who is the present incumbent; how often meetings take place between the British National Armaments Director and his European colleagues; and if they reach their recommendations by majority voting or by unanimity.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The position of National Armaments Director within the Ministry of Defence came into being with the establishment of the conference of national armaments directors under the North Atlantic Council in 1966. Initially the United Kingdom representative was the Chief Scientific Adviser at the Ministry of Defence, but following the creation of the Procurement Executive in 1971 and until 1985 the position was held by the Chief of Defence Procurement. However, the position of National Armaments Director was one of the responsibilities passed to the Chief of Defence Equipment Collaboration when the post was created in March 1985. The present incumbent is Sir David Perry. As regards the frequency of meetings between national armaments directors, I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the written answers given to the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood (Mr. Howarth) on 24 January at column 336-37. Discussions between national armaments directors are governed by the form in which they are conducted; decisions are reached by mutual agreement.

Civil Power (Military Aid)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence what section or department inside his Department is specifically responsible for military aid to the civil power; and how many people are employed on such work.

Mr. Stanley: No one section or Department has sole responsibility in this area. The number of those involved will vary according to what assistance is, or may be, requested.

Dockyards (Redundancy Pay)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the cost of redundancy payments for the 2,400 jobs to be lost at Rosyth and Devonport dockyards.

Mr. Lee: The previously announced reductions in manning levels of 2,000 at Devonport dockyard and 400 at Rosyth are expected to be achieved mainly through natural wastage and voluntary methods, including some voluntary redundancies and voluntary premature retirements. No redundancies are anticipated at Rosyth and we hope that only voluntary redundancy, probably fewer than 600, will be required at Devonport. The estimated cost of the average industrial redundancy payment, based on the average industrial wage and assuming 30 years service, is £11,250.

NATO Personnel (Regulations)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence to what military regulations service personnel are subject while stationed at a foreign base or joint North Atlantic Treaty Organisation base, where personnel from the host nation or any other North Atlantic Treaty Organisation force are also stationed.

Mr. Lee: United Kingdom personnel are subject to United Kingdom service law wherever they may be serving at home or abroad. They are also required to observe whatever local military regulations govern activities at foreign and NATO bases at which they are stationed.

Service Personnel

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many service personnel applied for and were granted a discharge within six months of enlistment during the years 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(2) how many service personnel submitted applications for discharge after six months had elapsed since enlistment and were turned down for any reason other than failure to follow the correct application procedure during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(3) how many requests for discharge turned down due to failure to follow the correct procedure or submit correct documentation were made prior and subsequent to the first six months of enlistment during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(4) what record is kept of applications for discharge which are incorrectly submitted;

(5) how many service personnel requested information regarding discharge during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(6) what record is kept of requests for information, both formal and informal, regarding discharge procedure and regulations;

(7) how many service personnel requested discharge (a) on reaching the age of 18 years having enlisted below the age of 18 years and (b) before their contract was due to expire, but after six months from enlistment during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(8) how many service personnel requested that their contract of engagement be shortened during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(9) how many service personnel were recorded as being absent without leave during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(10) what procedure is followed subsequent to a unit suspecting one of its personnel of being absent without leave;

(11) how many service personnel were imprisoned as a result of being found guilty of absence without leave during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(12) how many service personnel were held in a place of detention for periods in excess of 24 hours upon returning from a period of absence without leave during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(13) how many service personnel were found guilty of deliberate absenteeism but not imprisoned; and how many were not held in places of detention, on the grounds of mitigating circumstances regarding their action during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(14) how many service personnel were detained at Colchester for offences which are not punishable under civilian law during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(15) how many service personnel cases whose alleged offences were triable under civilian law were dealt with by any form of military hearing during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(16) how many service personnel were charged with an offence during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(17) how many investigations were conducted by the special investigations branch into cases of alleged homosexuality during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(18) how many service personnel were detained for periods exceeding 24 hours during investigations conducted by the special investigations branch during 1983-84 and 1984-85;

(19) how many service women were interviewed or interrogated by male investigating officers during the course of homosexual investigations during 1983-84 and 1984-85.

Mr. Lee: I shall reply in due course.

Service Personnel (Offences)

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel charged with an offence applied for legal aid during 1983-84 and 1984-85.

Mr. Lee: In the calendar years 1983, 1984 and 1985 the following number of applications for legal aid were made by Army and RAF personnel:

Year	Army	RAF
1983	221	104
1984	246	139
1985	320	148

No central record is maintained of applications for legal aid from Royal Navy personnel and this information could only be obtained with disproportionate effort.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence what record is kept of applications for legal aid made formally or informally by an accused to any military personnel.

Mr. Lee: A record is kept of each formal application for legal aid made to the appropriate Army and RAF service legal aid section. In the case of the Royal Navy, no central record is maintained of legal aid applications and this information could only be obtained with disproportionate effort. Records are not kept of informal inquiries about legal aid.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel were defended at courts martial by a qualified lawyer during 1983-84 and 1984-85.

Mr. Lee: The number of service personnel who were defended by civilian lawyers at courts-martial during 1983, 1984 and 1985 were as follows:

	1983	1984	1985
Royal Navy	2	5	1
Army	208	228	299
RAF	104	138	145

No central record is kept of the number of cases where service men are represented by service officers who are legally qualified and this information could only be obtained with disproportionate effort.

Cammell-Laird (Construction Work)

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Defence if, pursuant to the answer of 5 February, Official Report, column 183, he will state when Cammell-Laird is expected to start construction work on each of the vessels SSK-02, SSK-03 and SSK-04, respectively; and when each vessel is expected to be handed over to the Royal Navy.

Mr. Lee: Construction of SSK-02 has started and work on 03 and 04 will follow over the next three years. It is not the practice to give planned acceptance dates.

Helicopter Search and Rescue Services

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the cost to his Department of operating search and rescue services by helicopter;

(2) what is the cost of maintaining a search and rescue helicopter at HMS Daedalus at Lee-on-Solent.

Mr. Stanley: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give his estimate of the cost per hour in flight of operating a Wessex search and rescue helicopter.

Mr. Stanley: I shall answer shortly.

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department recovers any of the cost of operating search and rescue helicopter services from any other person or organisation.

Mr. Stanley: Yes. The Department of Transport is responsible for providing search and rescue services for civilians and the Ministry of Defence recovers a proportion of its operating costs from that Department.

SCOTLAND

New Towns (Population)

Mr. Robin Cook asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the projected population of the five Scottish new towns as at June 1990; and how this compares with the present population of the new towns and with the population stipulated as the trigger for winding up the development corporation, respectively.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The Registrar General does not produce projections of population for areas smaller than local authority districts. The latest available population figures for the new towns and the population stipulated as the trigger for winding up the development corporations are as set out below. As was indicated in November 1984 when the Government announced their conclusions about the winding-up of the development corporations, the dates on which the wind-up triggers are likely to be reached cannot be predicted with complete certainty although the triggers are broadly consistent with the new towns commencing wind-up at different dates in the 1990s. No development corporation is to begin the wind-up process before 1 April 1990. Because of the difficulties in predicting demographic trends the position is to be reviewed in 1989.

	Population as at 30 September 1985	Trigger population
East Kilbride	70,200	74,250
Cumbernauld	49,739	54,000
Glenrothes	38,000	43,000
Livingston	39,550	49,500
Irvine	57,500	63,000

Scottish Plant Breeding Station

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what costs have so far been incurred and what are the expected final costs involved in the transfer of staff of the Scottish Plant Breeding Station in Edinburgh to the Scottish Crop Research Institute in Dundee.

Mr. John Mackay: The gross cost of transferring staff from the Scottish Plant Breeding Station at Pentlandfield to the Scottish Crop Research Institute at Invergowrie is £230,000 to date, and is expected to rise to about £400,000 by completion of the merger. Gross capital costs incurred since the merger relate both to accommodation for transferred staff, and the development programme of the new Institute. The estimate of the capital costs already committed on projects directly related to the merger are approximately £3·3 million. Detailed project costs for further accommodation required are not yet available, but may amount to about £2 million. These figures do not take account of any savings likely to arise from the rationalisation of all provision on a single site.

Cash Limits

Mr. Corrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he proposes to make any changes to his Department's cash limits for 1985-86.

Mr. Rifkind: Yes. I intend to make changes to two of the cash limits within my responsibility. The cash limit for Vote XV:2 (Agricultural Services and Fisheries, Scotland) is being reduced by £400,000 from £66,453,000 to £66,053,000. This reduction, together with the reductions announced by my predecessor on 12 December 1985, at column 745, will partly offset increased expenditure of £14,776,000 on Vote XV:1 (Agricultural Support, Scotland) which is not subject to a cash limit and for which a Supplementary Estimate will be presented to Parliament shortly.

Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for Vote XV:15 (Education, Arts, Libraries and Social Work, Scotland) will be increased by £752,000 from £148,634,000 to £149,386,000. The increase, which is not classified as public expenditure, is required to cover additional payments to Lothian and Strathclyde regional councils for the outstanding loan debts on Napier college and Glasgow college of technology on their transfer to central institution status.

Avalanche Forecasting

Sir Russell Johnston asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the discussions with the relevant bodies to establish a better system of avalanche forecasting in Scotland to produce recommendations.

Mr. John MacKay [pursuant to his reply, 7 February 1986, c. 273]: The Scottish Office is not involved in any discussions on this matter.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Resources

Mr. Cash asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has received from police authorities about the availability of resources to the police; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: I have received representations from a number of police authorities about various aspects of police expenditure. In view of the increasing demands on the police service, particularly the need to counter drug abuse, public disorder and terrorism, I intend to increase the proportion of police expenditure met by central Government through police grant from 50 to 51 per cent. in 1986-87. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment will be making a further £22 million of block grant available in England. Under the block grant system this will ensure that all police authorities receive an increase in grant and there is no less for other authorities. This will help all police authorities in England and Wales without placing too great a burden on the ratepayers. It will enable the joint police authorities in the metropolitan areas to provide the level of service implied by their expenditure levels, and I look to them to do so. At the same time, they will be able to make precepts below the maximum levels which I have set or proposed.

Parole

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners seeking parole are kept waiting for a decision beyond their possible parole date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I regret that this information is not available. I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Martina Anderson and Ella O'Dwyer

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to transfer Martina Anderson and Ella O'Dwyer from Her Majesty's prison, Brixton, to a women's prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have no plans to transfer either woman from Brixton prison at present.

Ms. O'Dwyer and Ms. Anderson have been placed provisionally in the highest security category, category A. The only accommodation suitable for female category A remand prisoners in the London area is at Brixton, on a self-contained landing.

Stray Dogs

Mr. Crouch asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to introduce legislation to give the police increased powers for the capture and extermination of stray dogs involved in the killing and maiming of sheep; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Dogs (Protection of Livestock) Act 1953 already provides for the seizure and disposal of dogs which have been worrying livestock. The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (schedule 6, paragraph 7) has, with effect from 1 January 1986, added to police powers under the 1953 Act by providing justices of the peace with power to issue a warrant authorising the police to enter and search premises in order to identify a dog suspected of worrying sheep or other livestock.

Firearms Certificates

Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give the criteria required for issue of a firearms certificate.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Firearms Act 1968 requires a chief officer of police to satisfy himself that an applicant has a good reason for having in his possession the firearm or ammunition in respect of which the application is made, that he is a fit person to be entrusted with it and that he can be permitted to have it in his possession without danger to the public safety or to the peace.

Brixton and Wandsworth Prisons

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average time in any recent week for which figures are conveniently available for which prisoners have been confined to their cells at (a) Brixton prison and (b) Wandsworth prison.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not available and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

Merseyside Fire Service

Mr. Allan Roberts asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department why his Department has imposed a recruitment freeze, effective from 1 April, on the Merseyside fire service; and what criteria were used to determine the level of budget approved for the Merseyside fire service in relation to the figure it had requested.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No recruitment freeze has been imposed. Under paragraph 4 of the Fire and Civil Defence Authorities (Establishment, Support Services and Management Schemes) Regulations 1985 the Merseyside fire and civil defence authority will be consulted shortly about its establishment scheme for 1986-87, including what is appropriate for recruitment.

It is for the authority itself to settle its budget for 1986-87, and the maximum precept prescribed in the draft Local Government Act 1985 (Police and Fire and Civil Defence Authorities) Precepts Limitation Order 1986 should enable it broadly to maintain the existing levels of service.

Passports

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer of 3 February, Official Report, column 6, on how many occasions in each of the last five years passport officers have exercised their discretion in the exceptional circumstances described; if he will now take steps to widen this discretion to permit the issue without charge of a replacement passport where the family passport has used up less than a third of its period of validity and where it has been used on no more than one occasion; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I regret that the statistics requested are not available. We have no plans to extend the criteria on which current discretion operates.

Immigration

Mr. Lawrence asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply of 18 December 1985, Official Report, column 176, how he intends to proceed with the discussions about representations made by right hon. and hon. Members in immigration cases.

Mr. Hurd: Draft guidelines have been prepared setting out proposals for the practice to be followed in the general run of immigration cases, and a copy of the draft guidelines has been placed in the Library.

The objective of these proposals is to assist right hon. and hon. Members to carry out their responsibilities on behalf of their constituents in a way which is compatible with an effective and efficient immigration control in accordance with the Immigration Act 1971 and the immigration rules which have been approved by Parliament. The guidelines provide a facility for right hon. and hon. Members to obtain the facts relating to a decision to refuse entry quickly so that they can decide whether there is a case for making substantive representations. At the same time the guidelines seek to set sensible time scales within which representations should be made.

My hon. and learned Friend is writing to a number of right hon. and hon. Members, whom we know to be closely involved or interested in these matters, inviting their views on the guidelines proposed but the views of all hon. Members will be welcomed. The House will have an opportunity to debate the proposals before new guidelines become effective.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

"Official Report"

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what progress has been made to resolve the problems of grading, staffing and conditions of work in the Department of the Official Report.

Mr. Beith: The Commission is aware of the difficulties which have arisen in the Department of the Official Report over staffing levels, and in reaching agreement to revised grading and pay linkages.

Negotiations commenced yesterday (10 February) with representatives of Hansard editorial and reporting staff on new management proposals for dealing with these problems. It is hoped that these negotiations will lead to agreement with the one group of staff in the House with whom it has not so far been possible to reach a negotiated settlement based on recommendations made by the Board of Management following the Staff Inspector's recently completed grading review.

Mr. McWilliam asked the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, when the Official Report last had a full complement of 10 Committee Sub-Editors and 14 trained Reporters; what is the present complement; and how many are trainees.

Mr. Beith: The complement of 10 Committee Sub-Editors is regularly staffed at that level. The complement of Reporters is 17 with not more than 14 full Reporters for more than a short period. A Reporter is usually training for two years. On this basis the number of Reporters and Trainee Reporters on 1 April each year since 1979 is:

	Reporter	Trainee Reporter
1979	11	1
1980	7	10
1981	8	8
1982	7	6
1983	9	2
1984	10	5
1985	10	6
10 February 1986	10	8

It is the practice to make up the shortfall in experience and to cover for peak periods by employing freelance Reporters on a casual basis.

Departmental Staff

Mr. McWilliam asked the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what was the established complement of staff of each Department of the House in 1979 as compared with 1985, together with the percentage increase in each Department over that period of time.

Mr. Beith: The established complement of staff (full-time equivalent) of each Department of the House at 1 April in 1979 and 1985 together with the percentage increase during this period is as follows:

	1979	1985	Percentage increase
Speaker's Office	10	14	40·0
Department of the Clerk of the House	119	146	22·7
Department of the Library	118	149	26·3
Department of the Serjeant at Arms	181	185	2·2
Administration Department	60	93	55·0
Department of the Official Report	70	75	6·6
Refreshment Department	*234	235	0·41

Notes:

(i) * This figure is as at 1 April 1980, since the Refreshment Department was not previously a Department of the House.

(ii) Figures for increase in complement between 1970 and 1985 show that the percentage variations between Departments over that longer period were markedly different from those indicated in the table.

Palace of Westminster (Facilities)

Mr. Watts asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will bring forward proposals to restrict the use of the facilities of the Palace of Westminster by parliamentary delegations representing totalitarian Governments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: No.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Reform

Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what decisions he has taken following the recent consultation on the treatment of balances and capital receipts after the abolition of the Greater London council and the metropolitan county councils.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I announced some of my decisions during the rate support grant debate on 20 January. This reply confirms what I said then and deals with other issues raised by the consultation process.

The residuary bodies will be able to use the cash balances of the outgoing authorities to close the accounts of those authorities and to make compensation payments falling due to staff in the first year after abolition.

The remaining balances, including unapplied capital receipts, will in general be distributed by the residuary bodies to the boroughs or districts in each area. In the light of the views expressed during the consultation, I have concluded that the distribution should be carried out pro rata to population. In the consultation paper I proposed that as an exception to the general rule any balances attributable to the Inner London education authority, the Northumbria police authority and the Tyne and Mersey tunnels should pass to the successor authorities responsible for those operations. I have now accepted that there should be one further exception: in accordance with the wishes of interested parties locally, balances attributable to Birmingham international airport will remain with the airport undertaking.

I look to the residuary bodies, with the assistance of the outgoing authorities, to give successor authorities their best estimate of the amount of balances likely to be distributed to each successor very shortly now, to assist the rating and precepting process. The timing of the actual distribution during 1986-87 may be settled between the residuary bodies and the recipient authorities in the light of local circumstances.

Where the outgoing authorities have accumulated capital receipts which have not been used to justify additional capital expenditure under part VIII of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980, the unused spending permission will be passed on to the boroughs or districts pro rata to population, or where appropriate to the other authorities referred to above, whether or not the receipts form part of the cash balances. Further consideration is being given to the mechanics of this.

Capital receipts accruing to the residuary bodies after abolition will in general be distributed to the boroughs or districts, pro rata to housing investment programme capital allocations in the case of housing receipts and pro rata to population in other cases.

But in three cases the cash from receipts will be differently treated. Mortgage principal repayments will be retained by residuary bodies to redeem debt, in accordance with normal local authority practice. I have also decided to allow residuary bodies to use receipts from asset sales to pay for any capital expenditure needed to prepare the assets for sale, and I have so far announced that in London at least £10 million will be available from receipts to endow a new charitable trust. Boroughs and districts will still receive the spending permission associated with the receipts.

Contracts (Non-commercial Clauses)

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to seek to prohibit local authorities from inserting non-commercial clauses in contracts for the supply of goods and services.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which my hon. Friend the Minister for Environment, Countryside and Local Government gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid-Staffordshire (Mr. Heddle) on 30 October, at column 542. I understand that the Building Employers Confederation is giving serious consideration to taking action in the courts.

Housing Development (Solihull)

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many letters he received in the course of the consideration of the West Midlands county structure plan in favour of and against the housing development proposed for land near Four Ashes road, Dorridge, Solihull.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend has received 35 letters about the proposed housing development at Four Ashes. Of those, 28 opposed the proposal and seven were in favour. While recognising the strength of local feelings, my right hon. Friend accepted the independent panel's recommendation that some increased provision at Four Ashes was the least harmful way of meeting the overall requirement, especially as this involved no additional land take and no loss of green belt.

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will release Solihull council from the requirement to provide a five-year supply of land for housing.

Mr. Tracey: There is no formal provision for relaxing the requirement laid down in circular 15/84 to maintain a five-year supply of land. While the circular sets out a general policy, local circumstances must also be taken into account when applying its provisions to particular cases.

GLC (Grants)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the total value of grants made by the Greater London council to each London borough which he has approved; which individual boroughs have received the grants; and if he intends to exercise his powers under section 91 of the Local Government Act 1985 to recover any such grants which have not been authorised by him.

Mr. Tracey: The total value of financial assistance provided by the GLC to the London boroughs for which my right hon. Friend has given his consent under section 91 of the Local Government Act 1985 is as follows:

Borough	Total value (£)
Barking and Dagenham	4,398
Brent	100,000
Ealing	387,500
Enfield	27,500
Greenwich	2,166,252
Hackney	35,814
Hammersmith and Fulham	155,300
Haringey	1,846,015
Havering	49,000
Hillingdon	30,363
Hounslow	116,570
Kensington and Chelsea	26,600
Lambeth	427,465
Newham	228,000
Redbridge	216,240
Richmond Upon Thames	25,000
Southwark	61,696
Tower Hamlets	4,394,158
Waltham Forest	117,349
Wandsworth	100,000
	10,515,220

Following his announcement on 18 December, at column 219, my right hon. Friend is considering the extent to which he would wish to exercise his discretion to direct the London Residuary Body to recover the value of assistance given without his consent under the provisions in the 1985 Act. My right hon. Friend has also made clear his concern about the continuing assistance proposed to be given by the GLC to individual boroughs on a selective basis, particularly where this involves funding activities continuing beyond abolition. We take the view that, with the approach of abolition, there is in general little justification for the GLC seeking at this stage to fund post-abolition activities from ratepayers' money. Decisions as to such funding are primarily the province of successor authorities. My right hon. Friend will therefore wish to look very closely at any further applications for consent under section 91 of the 1985 Act. Where assistance is given without his consent or consent is refused, he intends to exercise his discretion under schedule 15, paragraph 2(2), to the Act to direct the London Residuary body to recover the value of the assistance from the authority concerned in every case where this appears to be justified.

Sewerage

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of houses in England are connected to the public sewerage system; how this compares with other member states of the European Community; and how this compares with the United States of America.

Mr. John Patten: This information is not held by my Department. However, I would refer the hon. Member to the November 1985 edition of "Water Facts" published by the Water Authorities Association, which gives figures for the percentage of the population connected to sewers and comparative figures for other member states of the European Community. I have today placed copies in the Library.

Local Authority Housing (Research)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the local authorities which have been invited to help with research into access to local authority housing; and what response each has given.

Mr. John Patten: The Department invited the following local authorities to help with its research project into access to local authority housing:

Manchester
Lambeth
Sheffield
Hackney
Sandwell
Islington
Southwark
Dudley
North Tyneside
Sefton
Trafford
Bradford
Basildon
Kingston upon Hull
Leicester
Langbaurgh
Nuneaton and Bedworth
Hyndburn
Woking
Wycombe
Carlisle
Wychavon
Harrogate
Leominister
South Cambridgeshire
West Somerset
Poole

Eighteen authorities have agreed to participate; Leominster and Wycombe have declined, and seven others, Islington, Southwark, Manchester, Sheffield, Basildon, Leicester and Poole, have yet to reply to the invitation.

Housing Improvement

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he makes of the employment potential of each £100,000 of (a) public and (b) private investment in housing improvement.

Sir George Young: The employment effects are approximately equal for public and private investment in housing improvement. About 70 to 75 per cent. of the cost is estimated to be spent on labour, directly and indirectly. This varies according to the nature of the work. However, assessment of the overall effects on employment potential depends on a wide range of assumptions about effects on competing expenditures, on interest rates, on exchange rates and other factors.

Voluntary Organisations

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from voluntary organisations located in Merseyside concerning their future funding; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I shall answer this question shortly.

Liverpool Philharmonic Hall

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the future of the Liverpool philharmonic hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend has received several representations about the future of the Liverpool philharmonic hall. Under the main property transfer order the hall is transferred to Liverpool city council as functional successor, but my right hon. Friend is prepared to consider the alternative of temporary transfer to the residuary body for onward transmission to a trust if this can be made financially viable, and subject to the outcome of consultation with Liverpool. I understand that there is now a good prospect of this, and officials of the Office of Arts and Libraries have therefore written to Liverpool asking the council for its views on the proposal by 14 February.

Croxteth Hall and Country Park

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the future of Croxteth hall and country park; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations about Croxteth hall and country park. Under the main property transfer order this will pass to Liverpool city council as successor authority.

Merseyside Innovation Centre

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the future of the Merseyside innovation centre; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I have received no representations about Merseyside innovation centre other than the letter from the hon. Member dated 4 February 1986.

The centre is a project with a scope beyond the Liverpool city council area. As such it is classed as a county-wide scheme and would be appropriate for consideration for funding under section 48 of the Local Government Act 1985, but the Merseyside district authorities have so far failed to agree upon the arrangements for establishing such a scheme.

Liverpool city council and Sefton MBC have submitted bids of £50,267 and £10,400 respectively under the transitional funding arrangements. These are currently being considered by my Department. The Merseyside innovation centre is also seeking other sources of future funding, and early discussions have been arranged with the EEC to look into possible funding through the European business network programme.

Liverpool Ice Rink

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the future of the Liverpool ice rink; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 6 February, at column 248, by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton).

Empire Theatre, Liverpool

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the future of the Empire theatre in Liverpool; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend has received several representations about the future of the Empire theatre. Under the main property transfer order the lease on the theatre is transferred to Liverpool city council as functional successor, but I understand that two private entrepreneurs are having discussions with the theatre trustees and with Merseyside county council about the possibility of their taking over the running of the theatre.

Merseyside (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has plans to pay an official visit to Merseyside in the near future.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I am looking forward to visiting Merseyside in May or June.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authorities were affected by the multiplier factor in the rate support grant calculations in 1984-85; and what were the changes to the multiplier in each of these local authorities for the year 1985-86.

Mrs. Rumbold: Under the "Rate Support Grant Report (England) 1984-85" multipliers other than 1·0 were determined for the following local authorities. The percentage change between the multiplier for those authorities determined under that report and under the "Rate Support Grant Report (England) 1985-86" was as follows:

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received from the Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive its list of sites for investigation as nuclear dumps; when he intends to present this list to Parliament; whether he intends to change the list or consider the case for particular places in that interim period; and what representations he is willing to receive from areas concerned about the possibility of being on that list, before it is presented to Parliament.

Mr. Waldegrave: The chairman of UK NIREX Ltd. wrote to my right hon. Friend on 8 January setting out proposals. These are currently being considered. My right hon. Friend is always willing to consider representations from hon. Members.

Liverpool Philharmonic Hall

Mr. Woodcock asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will agree to the transfer of the Liverpool philharmonic hall to a charitable trust adequately funded; and if he will seek the support of the local authorities in providing that funding.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986, c. 336-37]: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Liverpool, West Derby (Mr. Wareing).

EMPLOYMENT

Self-employment

Mr. Bellingham asked the Paymaster General what measures he plans to take to encourage self-employment.

Mr. Trippier: We are taking a number of measures to encourage self-employment. The enterprise allowance scheme which helps unemployed people to start their own businesses is to be expanded to 80,000 places for 1986-87. More resources are being allocated to local enterprise agencies to allow them to offer improved services to those who wish to start businesses. The Manpower Services Commission is refocusing its adult training programme more sharply on promoting enterprise and self-employment. The commission is also planning to increase the enterprise and self-employment elements of the youth training scheme, community programme and voluntary projects programme to encourage more people to consider self-employment.

Self-employed Persons

Mr. Yeo asked the Paymaster General what is the total number of self-employed people in Britain.

Mr. Lang: In September 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, the number of self-employed people in Great Britain was provisionally estimated to be 2,590,000.

Mr. Deakins asked the Paymaster General what is the basis of calculations for changes in the number of self-employed; and what information is available about the main types of self-employment.

Mr. Lang: The Department's self-employment estimates are obtained from the censuses of population, the latest of which was held in 1981, updated by applying proportionate changes in self-employment as estimated from a labour force survey (LFS). For periods since the date of the latest available LFS results, currently spring 1984, the estimates assume continuation of the rate of change observed in a previous period.

The estimates for years for which census of LFS data are available are analysed by industry and by region and the detailed estimates published in articles in Employment Gazette.

Other details which are available directly from the LFS include analyses of the occupation and age of the self-employed.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Paymaster General if he will give a breakdown by region of the number of individuals who have been self-employed in each of the last 15 years for which figures are available; and in each of these years what this figure represents as a percentage of the total number of individuals in paid work in that region.

Mr. Lang: The figures are contained in the following tables:

British Leyland

Mr. Dalyell asked the Paymaster General which discussions he has had with General Motors on the employment implications of the future of British Leyland, Bathgate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: None. The closure of Bathgate was proposed by the British Leyland board in its 1984 corporate plan which was discussed in detail between the Department of Trade and Industry and British Leyland. As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry told the hon. Member on 6 February, the position is unchanged by recent announcements concerning talks between British Leyland and General Motors. Discussions about possible future use of the facility are continuing locally, and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland is keeping in close touch with British Leyland and has made it clear that he stands ready to help any viable proposition.

Long-term Unemployed Persons

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General what are the objectives of his Department's policy on the long-term unemployed; how he is monitoring its effectiveness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend on 21 January at column 118. In addition, my right hon. and learned Friend announced on 12 November 1985 that the Manpower Services Commission had been asked to test two new measures to help the long-term unemployed in their search for jobs. These measures, operating since January in nine pilot areas, consist of in-depth counselling interviews at jobcentres, and a net job start allowance of £20 per week for those taking jobs earning less that £80 per week. The pilots are being carefully monitored to establish whether they should be extended more widely.

Youth Training Scheme

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Paymaster General which specific companies in the west midlands region have offered places to YTS trainees for the extended two-year programme; and how many places have been offered by each individual company.

Mr. Trippier: The information requested is listed by Manpower Services Commission training division area:

Retail Prices

Mr. Waller asked the Paymaster General what is the latest information which he has regarding the percentage change in the prices of bread, milk, beer, bus fares, newspapers and children's clothing over the period since 1974; and how the percentage change in each of these commodities compares with that for the retail prices index as a whole over the same period.

Mr. Lang: The latest available information is as follows:

Percentage Changes in Retail Prices Indices between January 1974 and December 1985

	Per cent.
Bread	242·9
Fresh milk	313·3
Beer	407·1
Bus fares	386·9
Newspapers and Periodicals	453·1
Children's clothing	164·4
Retail Prices Index—"all items"	278·9

Inner Cities (Aid)

Mr. Hancock asked the Paymaster General if he can give a list of all the cities that were considered, before the aid was given for the new initiatives, for aid to the inner city announced by his Department on 6 February.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: This is a pilot initiative, and we chose the areas because we felt they were together broadly representative of the problems faced by inner city residents. It would serve no purpose to list other areas which were not selected, even if at this stage we could recollect all those areas mentioned at some stage or other of the discussions inside Government.

Local Economic Initiatives

Mr. Alton asked the Paymaster General what framework there is for consultation between local authorities and his Department concerning the development of local economic initiatives.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986]: I am anxious that the locally based inner cities initiative which I announced to the House on 6 February should, wherever possible, operate in co-operation and consultation with the local authorities concerned. I hope to meet those local authorities soon to discuss how best to establish the necessary links.

WALES

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether any of the meetings which have taken place between officials of his Department and officials of the Commission for Racial Equality have involved matters relating to the Welsh language in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No, although at the November 1985 meeting of the Commission for Racial Equality's Welsh consultative committee, which an official of the Welsh Office attends, an official of the commission gave a brief and general account of an industrial tribunal case where the Welsh language was an issue.

Sewerage

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of houses in Wales are connected to the public sewerage system; how this compares with other member states of the European Community; and how this compares with the United States of America.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This information is not held by the Department, but figures for the percentage of the population connected to sewers and comparable figures for other member states of the European Community are to be found in the November 1985 edition of "Water Facts", published by the Water Authorities Association. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Dairy Crest, Johnstown (Closure)

Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received about the employment implications of the closure of the Dairy Crest depot, Johnstown in Carmarthen; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I have received a number of representations from individuals and organisations about the closure of the Dairy Crest plant in Johnstown. However, the closure of the plant, while regrettable, is a matter for the commercial judgment of Dairy Crest as part of a rationalisation programme to improve the productive and competitive performance of its cheese-making capacity.

NHS (Expenditure)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the percentage cumulative growth of National Health Service expenditure in each Welsh health authority in each year since 1979 (a) in retail price index terms, (b) in terms of National Health Service pay and prices and (c) after taking account of the annual growth in demand for health services arising from demographic factors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information given in the following table relates to the recurrent revenue resources made available to health authorities in the period since 1979-80. The capital resources provided to individual health authorities are subject to fluctuating programmes of expenditure, and the family practitioner services, which are demand determined, no longer fall within health authorities' responsibilities. The percentage growth figures given in each year have been adjusted for inflation using the GDP deflator, since this approach reflects the true input cost to the economy as a whole of resources provided. The use of the RPI is not considered relevant. Equally, it would be inappropriate and misleading to revalue the recurrent resources made available to individual authorities by reference to the national NHS indices of pay and prices, because the composition of individual authorities' expenditure can vary substantially from the national average.

While it is recognised that health services need to grow at present by some 2 per cent. per annum in order to meet the pressures generated by demographic changes, medical and technological advances and by Government policy objectives, this does not imply a corresponding requirement to increase expenditure by this amount. Services are developed both by increased resource provision and by greater efficiency in the use of resources. In fact, as will be seen from the following figures, recurring revenue allocations to health authorities in Wales have grown on average by more than 3 per cent. per annum since 1978-79 after adjustment by the GDP deflator, irrespective of the service development potential of the efficiency savings that have been and are continuing to be made for the further benefit of patient care.

* In the case of East Dyfed and Pembrokeshire district health authorities the growth figures relate to the period from 1982-83, at the time of the inception of these authorities.

† Recurrent resources for 1985-86 estimated on the basis of prospective growth figures likely to be released from central reserves by 31 March 1986.

‡ Recurrent resources for 1986-87 estimated on the basis of the prospective take up of growth moneys during the remainder of 1985-86 and the recurrent element of the allocated cash increase for 1986-87. It should be noted that these figures are exclusive of the growth monies earmarked for centrally funded developments in 1986-87 which will be allocated and taken up by authorities during the course of the year.

Building Workers

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many skilled building workers he estimates are (a) employed and (b) unemployed in Wales at the latest date for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Information regarding skilled building workers is not separately available.

Bronchitic Diseases

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average figure for people with bronchitic diseases in (a) Wales, (b) England and (c) the United Kingdom for the latest available date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information requested is not available centrally. The number of deaths and discharges from hospitals in Wales of people suffering from bronchitic diseases was 4,590 in 1984, the latest year for which figures are available.

Information relating to England and the United Kingdom is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health and Social Services.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average wage of Welsh farm workers; how this compares with that in England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: In the year ended September 1985 the average weekly earnings of full-time hired men in agriculture in Wales were £118·24 for 45·5 hours worked. I understand from my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food that this compares with £130·33 for 46·6 hours worked for equivalent workers in England in the same period.

Welsh Water Authority

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are currently employed by the Welsh water authority.

Mr. Mark Robinson: At 31 December 1985 there were 4,786 people employed by the Welsh water authority.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many jobs in Wales he estimates will be created by the construction of a fixed link across the English Channel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No estimate is possible at present, but, when the link is completed, the improved communications provided should create new opportunities for businesses and industry in Wales.

Water Rates

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales by how much water rates have increased in the last five years in (a) Wales and (b) the average for English authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The total increase in the average domestic water bill in Wales between 1981 and 1986 in cash terms is £37·15. The comparative figure for the English authorities is £25·09.

Public Bodies (Ministerial Appointments)

Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of all bodies to which he has made appointments since 1979.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I shall reply to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many persons he has appointed to public bodies in Wales since his appointment in 1979, either solely or jointly with other Departments; and if he will state the numbers of all political parties separately.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information requested in the first part of the question is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Records of appointees' political affiliations are not kept. In making appointments it is our policy to select the best person for the job bearing in mind all factors relevant to the post.

PRIME MINISTER

Westland plc

Q63. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister what action was taken on the night of Wednesday 8 January, when the then Secretary of State for Defence reported to her office that the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry had urged the managing director of the leading company in the British Westland consortium to withdraw in the national interest.

The Prime Minister: Westland was fully discussed by the Cabinet on 9 January with the participation of both my right hon. Friend and my right hon. and learned Friend.

Gainsborough

Q12. Mr. Leigh asked the Prime Minister if she will pay an official visit to Gainsborough.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 11 February.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 11 February.

Mr. Flannery asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 11 February.

Mr. Foulkes asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 11 February.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 11 February.

Mr. Bellingham asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 11 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I shall be addressing the National Farmers Union.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Tourism

Mr. Maclean asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what steps he is taking to bring to the attention of farmers the grants which are available to diversify into tourism; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what expertise is being developed at local level to help and advise farmers who wish to take up a grant for tourism and crafts;

(3) what expertise on tourism marketing is being developed at a local level to enable his Department's officials to make decisions on the suitability of marketing plans, as described in his Department's booklet A.I.S. 6, "Tourism and Crafts", paragraph 28;

(4) if he will make a statement on liaison between his Department and the tourist boards over the operation of his Department's new grants for tourism and crafts.

Mrs. Fenner: My Department has published a comprehensive range of advisory leaflets on grants available under the agriculture improvement scheme and has arranged for wide publicity in the national and local press and at farming conferences, agricultural shows and so on.

My Department has a team of specialist advisers on farm tourism and crafts who maintain close contacts with the tourist boards and the Council for Small Industries in Rural Areas and participate in the boards' development panels and the regional tourism steering committees of the Department of Employment.

MAFF booklet 2005—"Farmhouse and Self-catering Accommodation"—contains comprehensive information on the minimum voluntary standards recommended by the English Tourist Board. This booklet has gone to all farmers known to have an interest in tourism.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Deakins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the cost of the parliamentary answer to the hon. Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor) on 27 January, Official Report, column 404, about current European Economic Community import levies; and what extra cost would have been entailed in providing the information in the form requested.

Mr. Gummer: The cost of the parliamentary answer given was about £130. It is our custom, when appropriate, to refer hon. Members to the authoritative figures in the Official Journal, as not to do so would involve us in disproportionate cost. In this case the disproportionate cost would have arisen particularly from the large number of import levies for different presentations of imports and the conversions required.

Renewable Energy Systems

Mr. Key asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the current capital grants available to farmers for installation of renewable energy systems; and if he will list such grants by number, value and type in each year since the grants were introduced.

Mrs. Fenner: Grants have been available since 1 October 1985 under the agriculture improvement scheme for the supply and installation of straw-burning boilers and furnaces, heat pumps, heat exchangers, wind- or water-powered pumps and generators, anaerobic digestors and solar heating panels.

The rates of grant are 15 per cent. in the lowlands and 30 per cent. in the less-favoured areas.

I regret that no information is available on the grants paid so far on each type of energy-saving facility.

Agricultural Expenditure

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the proposal by the European Commission that agricultural spending in 1986 should be further increased by £500 million and that a special fund of £2,000 million should be established for surplus disposal.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986]: We have yet to see a detailed proposal for an addition of £500 million to the 1986 Community budget. It remains a key objective that the agreed financial guideline is held to. The Commission has made no proposals for a special £2,000 million fund.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Record Industry

Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest estimate of the overseas earnings of the British record industry.

Mr. Alan Clark: Information distinguishing royalties and other overseas earnings by the record industry is not available. In 1985 (provisional) United Kingdom exports of records were valued at £62 million (fob) and exports of recorded tapes for the reproduction of music were valued at £10 million (fob).

United States (Discussions)

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with the Government of the United States of America about industry and trade policies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. and learned Friend the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry visited the United States in October last year to discuss a range of issues with members of the United States Administration, and my hon. and learned Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for corporate and consumer affairs visited the United States last November to discuss issues relating to the provision of financial services. Officials in this Department have also had discussions with their United States counterparts.

National Weights and Measures Laboratory

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his reply of 29 January to the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds, Official Report, column 534, what has been the percentage change in real terms in the salary bill of the national weights and measures laboratory over the period 1979 to 1985.

Mr. Howard: The salary bill of the national weights and measures laboratory expressed in real terms (that is, based on movements in the retail price index) has increased by 12·5 per cent. over the period 1979-85.

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what savings he expects to achieve in the labour costs and overheads of the move of the national weights and measures laboratory from Chapter street to Teddington; and to what extent these will be reflected in lower charges to weighing machine manufacturers for pattern examination.

Mr. Howard: Both labour costs and overheads are expected to reduce following the move of the national weights and measures laboratory to Teddington, but the extent of these savings is not yet known. Fees for pattern examination will be set to recover fully the costs incurred in carrying out the work.

Weighing Machines

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the income his Department received in each of the years since 1979 from charges made on weighing machines and scale manufacturers for the inspection and certification of new machines offered for type approval.

Mr. Howard: Information is not readily available in the form requested to distinguish between scale and weighing machine manufacturers and other manufacturers. However the totals for all types of equipment are:

Total income from new submissions and variants

1979-80	32,618
1980-81	88,795
1981-82	112,207
1982-83	137,290
1983-84	222,486
1984-85	209,774

Implements of Torture

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to prohibit the export of specially designed implements of torture and the export of items where there is reasonable cause to believe that they may be used, directly or indirectly, as implements of torture; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: It would not be practicable to control exports of the large range of items in common use which might also be misused as implements of torture. However, it is not our policy to allow the export of items which in our view have a specific application in this field.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what control he exercises over the export of specially designed implements of torture.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have powers under the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1985 to control the export of certain items which are specially designed to be used for repressive purposes.

Daya Nuclear Plant

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry why officials of banks involved in the financing of the Daya nuclear power plant have been required to sign a declaration under the Official Secrets Act.

Mr. Butcher: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Systime plc (Takeover)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will refer the proposed takeover by DEC of Systime plc, Leeds, to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has made representations to the United States Secretary for Commerce on the trading practices leading up to the takeover of Systime plc, Leeds, by DEC Inc; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: No. The sale of part of the Systime business to DEC is entirely a commercial matter for the two companies.

British Leyland

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry at what time, on Thursday 6 February, copies of his statement to the House on British Leyland were first made available by his Department to the media.

Mr. Channon: Copies of my statement to the House on BL were made available to the House of Commons Press Gallery when I made the statement at 16.55 pm on 6 February. My press office then made the text available in response to media inquiries.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many inquiries there were from local exporters concerning export credits insurance in each of the Export Credits Guarantee Department regional offices in 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986]: The following table provides details of the number of credit limit inquiries received by each regional office of the Export Credits Guarantee Department:

Regional office	Applications January 1984 to December 1984	Applications January 1985 to December 1985
1. Belfast	1,825	2,004
2. Birmingham	22,174	22,195
3. Bristol	12,748	11,969
4. Cambridge	19,887	19,026
5. City	21,659	19,792
6. Croydon	20,519	19,950
7. Glasgow	8,591	8,886
8. Leeds	23,543	24,885
9. Manchester	17,614	18,318
TOTAL	148,470	147,025

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish in the Official Report the number of staff employed in the regional office network of the Export Credits Guarantee Department.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986]: The regional office network of the Export Credits Guarantee Department has a complement of 392 including 18 located in the Cardiff headquarters engaged in regional work.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the implications for the Export Credits Guarantee Department's regional office network of the management review of the Export Credits Guarantee Department.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986]: The implementation of the recommendations of the management review of the Export Credits Guarantee Department is still at an early stage and it is not yet possible to determine the overall impact on the regional offices. The review does recommend that certain activities currently undertaken by the regional offices should be centralised to the department's headquarters in Cardiff, but it also recommends an increased marketing effort, which is likely to require a substantial input from the regional offices. There are no plans at present to close any regional office.

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if it is his intention to strengthen the regional office network of the Export Credits Guarantee Department.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986]: The implementation of the recommendations of the management review of the Export Credits Guarantee Department is still at an early stage and it is not yet possible to determine the overall impact on the regional offices. The review does recommend that certain activities currently undertaken by the regional offices should be centralised to the department's headquarters in Cardiff, but it also recommends an increased marketing effort, which is likely to require a substantial input from the regional offices. There are no plans at present to close any regional office.

ENERGY

North Sea Oil

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Energy what studies his Department has made of the relationship between the quantity of United Kingdom North Sea oil produced and the price for North Sea oil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The price of oil on the world market, including North sea oil, is determined by the balance of demand and supply. The level of oil production on the UKCS is only one element and accounts for some 6 per cent. of world oil production. Over the last two years there has been no observable relationship between world oil prices, which have undergone major fluctuations, and UKCS production, which has been broadly stable.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Inner London Education Authority

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what investigations he has made and what conclusions he has reached concerning the cost of services to the Inner London education authority which are currently provided by the Greater London council; and what liability he expects to be placed on the Inner London education authority after 31 March next.

Mr. Chris Patten: Services costing in total some £200 million a year are provided to the present Inner London education authority by the Greater London council. In setting and redetermining an expenditure level for the new ILEA for 1986-87, my right hon. Friend considered that in general the cost of services to the new ILEA should be no greater than the cost of services from the GLC. When redetermining the expenditure level in December, he added £7·5 million to it in respect of extra costs which he expected to arise from the abolition of the GLC: these were for the most part for services which had been provided by the GLC but had not been recharged to the present ILEA.

School Governing Bodies

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science why he is unwilling to make explicit statutory provision for the representation of commerce and industry on school governing bodies.

Mr. Dunn: As I explained in answer to my hon. Friend's question on 4 February at column 116, governing bodies' proposed new duty to co-opt additional governors will serve to broaden their membership. They will be urged to secure the appropriate wider representation of the communities served by their schools. It would be inappropriate to predetermine such co-options since adequate representation of some relevant interests, such as industry and commerce, may well arise indirectly through the ordinary election and appointment of governors.

Teachers

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he plans any financial or other initiatives to promote the recruitment by education authorities of a greater number of teachers of physics and mathematics to secondary schools on the basis of salary levels higher than those currently being paid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Government have already accepted the case for an increase in teachers' pay to recruit, retain and motivate sufficient teachers of the right quality. We had the shortages of teachers in such subjects as mathematics and physics very much in mind in making our offer of additional resources for teachers' pay conditional upon a reform of the pay structure which would give employers greater flexibility to take account of the demand for specific skills and qualifications. I hope that forthcoming negotiations will soon make sufficient progress towards these objectives to justify the release of these resources. In the meantime we have sought to encourage more people to enter teacher training in these subjects, through the offer of bursaries worth £1,200 a year (tax free), to students entering one or two year courses in mathematics, physics or CDT.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ukraine (Political Prisoners)

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations have been made to the Soviet Government about their use of torture against political prisoners in the Ukraine.

Mr. Renton: We have repeatedly made clear our concern at the treatment of many individuals throughout the Soviet Union who are imprisoned or otherwise detained because of their political or other beliefs. My right hon. and learned Friend has regularly raised such issues with his opposite numbers in the Soviet Union. We shall continue to press the Soviet Union to honour its international commitments on human rights under the universal declaration of human rights, the international covenant on civil political rights and the Helsinki final act.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorist Offences (Vehicles)

Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the years 1983, 1984 and 1985 the following details (a) the number of vehicles hijacked or taken and (b) the number not recovered at the end of each year in each of the following police districts, separately: Musgrave street, Springfield road, Tennent street, North Queen street, Mountpottinger, Castlereagh, Newtownhards, Newry, Portadown, Armagh, Enniskillen, Omagh, Strand road, Coleraine, Ballymena and Antrim.

Mr. Scott: Information for the years 1983 and 1984 was given in a reply to a question from the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) on 12 February 1985 at column 105-6. The available information for 1985 is as follows:

Division	Divisional Headquarters	Vehicles taken or hijacked
A	Musgrave street	1,976
B	Springfield road	1,442
D	North Queen street	1,236
E	Strandtown	617
G	Newtownhards	137
H	Armagh	250
J	Portadown	410
K	Cookstown	75
L	Enniskillen	40
N	Strand road	274
O	Coleraine	71
P	Ballymena	321
	TOTAL	6,849

Notes:

(1) 710 vehicles were not recovered. A breakdown of this figure by division is not available.

(2) On 1 October 1983, the number of RUC Divisions was reduced from 16 to 12 and Divisional boundaries were reorganised. As a result there were no longer divisions with Headquarters at Tennant street, Castlereagh, Omagh or Antrim.

(3) Unlike previous years the totals for 1985 do not include articles of plant and machinery. In that year 149 were recorded as stolen, of which at 31 December 110 had not been recovered.

Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the cost to date of the security at the Maryfield premises of the secretariat of the intergovernmental conference;

(2) what is the cost to date of maintaining, fortifying and repairing damage to the Maryfield premises of the secretariat of the intergovernmental conference.

Mr. Tom King: The actual payments to 31 January 1986 were:

Alterations and renovations	16,000
Security works and repairs	92,000
RUC personnel	55,000
Total	163,000

Work is still in progress. No maintenance costs have yet been incurred.

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who is the head of the secretariat of the intergovernmental conference.

Mr. Tom King: Article 3 of the Anglo-Irish agreement provides that both Governments would establish a secretariat to service the intergovernmental conference. There is therefore no single head but there are joint staffs whose work is ultimately the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and the Irish Minister designated as the permanent Irish ministerial representative. It would not be appropriate for me to name members of the secretariat.

Cash Limits

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he proposes to make any changes to the cash limits for the financial year 1985-86 for the Northern Ireland Office.

Mr. Tom King: Subject to Parliamentary approval to the necessary Supplementary Estimate the cash limit for the Northern Ireland Office law, order, protective and miscellaneous services vote—class XVII, vote 1—for 1985-86 is being increased by £2,500,000 from £434,682,000 to £437,182,000 to meet additional expenditure arising from a higher level of police overtime activity and increased costs associated with recent political developments in Northern Ireland. The increase is being met from the reserve and therefore does not add to the total of public expenditure.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if it is his policy that the chairman of the Police Federation of Northern Ireland shall be prevented from representing by means of public statements and interviews with the media the federation's views on matters pertaining to the welfare and efficiency of the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to the reply, 6 February 1986, c. 251.]: The Police Association for Northern Ireland of which the Police Federation is a constituent part, is empowered to represent members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary in all matters affecting their welfare and efficiency. However, the direction and control of the RUC is a matter for the Chief Constable.

TRANSPORT

A11 (Accidents)

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents have taken place on the A11 in the village of Elveden, Suffolk, in each of the past 10 years; and how many of these have involved personal injury or death.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Accident statistics at Elveden, Suffolk on the A11 between Norfolk county border to B1106 junction are as follows:

	Fatal	Injury	Total
1979	2	5	7
1980	1	4	5

	Fatal	Injury	Total
1981	0	5	5
1982	0	5	5
1983	0	4	4
1984	0	5	5
1985	1	4	5

Data for the years before 1979 could only be achieved at disproportionate cost. Accidents which do not involve injuries are not recorded.

Rail Services (Windsor and Maidenhead)

Dr. Glyn asked the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from residents of the Windsor and Maidenhead area about the effect on rail services of the reduction in the public service obligation grant to British Rail; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: None.

Disabled People (Parking Bays)

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will specify which regulations lay down conditions for marking parking bays for disabled people.

Mr. Ridley: The conditions for marking parking bays for disabled people are laid down in the Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 1981, (SI 1981/859). Diagram 661 prescribes the upright sign to be used at parking places reserved for disabled badge holders and diagram 1028.1 prescribes a road marking to define the area of the parking bay. The marking includes the word "DISABLED" painted on the road surface. There is no specific requirement in the Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 1981 for the upright sign and the road marking to be used together.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the implications of the High Court ruling on the case of Mr. Viner of Ernstord Grange regarding the marking of parking bays; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: The Department is seeking but has not yet received a detailed report of the judgment. I shall consider the implications as soon as this is received.

Airports (Passenger Movements)

Mr. Silvester asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each British Airports Authority and local authority airport the number of passengers arriving and departing from the airport according to the area of the United Kingdom which was their original point of departure or their ultimate destination.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Information for 1984 is available in the Civil Aviation Authority publication "UK Airports" table 16. A copy is in the Library.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report a list showing the numbers of staff in his Department, categorised by the type of transport mode with which their work is concerned, and in addition categorised by the administrative division used within his Department.

Mr. Ridley: The information is provided below:

1 January 1986

Transport mode and directorate	Staff in post
Roads
Highways Policy and Programme	86
Highways Contracts, Administration and Maintenance	154
Chief Highways Engineer	279·5
Traffic and Greater London Roads	176

Transport and Road Research Laboratory	611
Total	2,468
Highways licensing, testing and taxation
Road and Vehicle Safety (driver and vehicle testing)	3,169·5
Traffic Area Offices	1,139·5
Driver and Vehicle Licensing	5,527
Freight and Bus Licensing	323
Total	10,159
Railways
Total rail	72
Air
Civil Aviation Policy	67
International Aviation	50
Accident Investigation Branch	37
Total	154
Sea
Shipping Policy	51
Marine (including Her Majesty's Coastguard)	1,137·5
Total	1,188·5
Total central administration	465
Total DTp	14,506·5

Lorries (Accidents)

Mr. Robert Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents were caused in each of the last five years by loads, portions of loads, or equipment falling off moving lorries; and if he will make a statemen on current enforcement.

Mr. Ridley: Full information is not available. The number of accidents where a dislodged vehicle load was reported were as follows:

Year	Number of accidents
1980	219
1981	241
1982	286
1983	273
1984	236

The Department has issued a code of practice advising operators on the correct securing of loads and equipment to vehicles. Enforcement of the relevant regulations is a matter for the police.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Public Expenditure

Mr. Pawsey asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing annual per capita expenditure (a) in real terms, (b) in cash terms, (c) using 1979 as a base of 100 since 1979 on (i) the National Health Service, (ii) defence, (iii) education, (iv) civil research and (v) defence research.

Mr. MacGregor: The available figures are summarised in the following tables:

(a) *Per capita expenditure in real terms United Kingdom

State-owned Companies (Bids)

Mr. Franks asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many management and management-employee bids to buy state-owned companies there have been since 1979; and how many of these have been accepted by the Government.

Mr. Moore: There have been 13 successful and four unsuccessful management and management-employee bids for state-owned companies, details of which are listed below. The role of Government Departments in evaluating bids for companies owned by nationalised industries and other public sector bodies varies according to the particular circumstances of each sale.

Successful bids

National Freight Corporation
Britflex Resin Systems Limited	(British Steel Corporation subsidiary)
Coated Electrodes Limited	(British Steel Corporation subsidiary)
Brooke Marine Limited	(British Shipbuilders subsidiary)
Swan Hunter Limited	(British Shipbuilders subsidiary)
Tyne Shiprepair Limited	(British Shipbuilders subsidiary)
Vosper Shiprepair Limited	(British Shipbuilders subsidiary)
Vosper Thornycroft Limited*	(British Shipbuilders subsidiary)
Hoverspeed Limited	(50 per cent. British Rail shareholding)
Bull Motors Limited	(100 per cent. British Technology Group shareholding)
QI Europe Limited	(51 per cent. British Technology Group shareholding)
Inveresk Research International Limited	(90 per cent. Scottish Development Agency shareholding)
Strathclyde Process Engineering Limited	(92·5 per cent. Scottish Development Agency shareholding)

Unsuccessful bids

Vosper Thorneycroft Limited*	(British Shipbuilders subsidiary)
British Transport Hotels Limited	(British Rail subsidiary)
Sealink Limited	(British Rail subsidiary)
INSAC Products Limited	(100 per cent. British Technology Group shareholding)

* Two management groups submitted rival bids for Vosper Thorneycroft.
One was successful.

Income Tax

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total Exchequer revenue derived through income tax payments by self-employed persons in each of the last 15 years for which figures are available; what is this figure as a percentage of total income tax payments in each of those years; and what was the average per capita amount of income tax paid by self-employed persons in each of those years.

Mr. Moore: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

European Community Budget

Mr. Foulkes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the proportions of the 1986 European Community budget approved by the Council of Ministers devoted to (a) agriculture guarantee, (b) agriculture guidance, (c) regional fund, (d) social fund, (e) research and investment, and (f) aid; and if he will give for each of the above categories the percentage increase in the payment appropriations for these funds over the 1985 budget.

Mr. Brooke: The information set out in the table is taken from the 1986 European Communities budget which was adopted by the European Parliament on 18 December 1985.

	Percentage share of the total 1986 Budget	Percentage increase in payment appropriations over the 1985 Budget
Agricultural Guarantee	63·1	5·3
Agricultural Guidance	2·4	15·3
Regional Fund	6·7	38·1
Social Fund	6·1	44·2
Research and Investment	1·9	11·9
Aid	3·4	9·9

The 1986 Budget includes provision for enlargement.

The Council of Ministers and individual member states, including the United Kingdom, are challenging the budget as adopted by the European Parliament before the European court.

Indexation

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in the manner of the answer given on 12 February 1985, Official Report, columns 145-46, he will update and publish the table detailing the breakdown costs or yields of reinstating the indexed 1978-79 tax regime, taking the 1985-86 income tax base.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 20 January 1985, c. 83]: If the 1978-79 income tax allowances and thresholds were indexed to 1985-86 levels by reference to the statutory formula and applied to the 1985-86 income tax base, the direct revenue effect would be an additional yield of about £6·2 billion in a full year.

The levels of the main allowances and thresholds, compared with the actual 1985-86 values, would be:

Personal allowances	Indexed 1978-79 regime £	1985-86 £
Single and wife's earned income allowance	1,875	2,205
Married man's allowance	2,925	3,455
Additional personal allowance	1,050	1,250
Aged single allowance	2,480	2,690
Aged married allowances	3,955	4,255
Aged income limit	7,700	8,800

Rate of tax (percentage)	Bands of taxable income Indexed 1978-79 regime £	1985-86 £
25	0-1,450	—
30	—	0-16,200
33	1,451-15,300	—
40	15,301-17,300	16,201-19,200
45	17,301-19,300	19,201-24,400
50	19,301-21,300	24,401-32,300
55	21,301-24,200	32,301-40,200
60	24,201-27,100	Over 40,200
65	27,101-31,000	—
70	31,001-35,800	—
75	35,801-46,300	—
83	Over 46,300	—

Investment Income Surcharge: Indexed 1978-79 regime

Bands of net investment income
Non-aged £	Aged £	Rate of surcharge (percentage)
0-3,250	0-4,800	Exempt
3,251-4,300	4,801-5,800	10
Over 4,300	Over 5,800	15

Investment income surcharge was abolished in 1984-85.

Taking the 1985-86 income tax base as given, the direct revenue effects of reinstating the indexed 1978-79 tax regime can be broken down as follows:

	Yield(+) Cost(−) £ million
Reductions in personal allowances	+3,150
Reintroduction of reduced rate band at 25p	−1,625
Increase in basic rate of 3p	+2,650
Reduction in basic rate limit of £800	+75
Changes in higher rate thresholds up to 60 per cent.	+500
Reintroduction of higher rates above 60 per cent.	+710
Reintroduction of investment income surcharge	+740
Total	6,200

In the table above, the effect of each change has been calculated on the assumption that each of the changes which precede it has already been made.

THE ARTS

Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra

Mr. Wareing asked the Minister for the Arts what representations he has received about the future of the Royal Liverpool philharmonic orchestra; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: I have received a number of letters about the orchestra's future, which is a matter for the Arts Council. I am assured by the council that the future funding of the orchestra is not in doubt.

South Bank Arts Complex

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts what was the full cost to the Arts Council of the fact-finding visits abroad made by Mr. Richard Pulford and Mr. Ronald Grierson in preparation for assuming responsibility for the South Bank arts complex; and which countries were visited.

Mr. Luce [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986]: The total cost to the Arts Council for fact-finding visits to the United States of America, Canada and Australia was £8,024, but only part of Mr. Ronald Grierson's costs were borne by the council.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts what reason was given by the Arts Council for the salary difference between the posts of director of arts co-ordination and general director (administration) on the South Bank.

Mr. Luce [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986]: The general director (administration) is the senior officer. He will be in overall charge, under the chairman of the South bank board, of all South bank activities. The general director (arts) is responsible for developing an artistic policy for the arts centre.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Cot Deaths

Mr. Galley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action in preventing cot deaths has been taken by his Department and the professions since the Knowelden report and the conference on this subject sponsored by his Department in March 1985.

Mr. Whitney: The Knowelden research was commissioned in an attempt to identify preventable causes of infant deaths. The study, which has been widely distributed, showed that a number of the deaths were in fact partly or wholly explicable, but in general no specific actions were identified that could have prevented many of the deaths certified as cot deaths. The conference confirmed these findings.

However, there were a number of more general recommendations. Some concerned maternity services and related pathology services, and the Government have already emphasised to health authorities the importance of these through the reports of the maternity services advisory committee. We have expressed to the Medical Research Council the importance we attach to the need for further research into finding the causes of infant deaths for which full post-mortems offer no explanation. We are considering ways of improving the information about cot deaths received through death certificates, and the availability of the results of coroners' post mortems to other clinicians who are investigating such deaths. We shall be looking for ways in which services in the community to the very young can be improved in the light of the consultations on the primary health care discussion document, and the review of community nursing. Finally I am aware that the British Paediatric Association, the Health Visitor's Association, and the Royal College of General Practitioners are considering in their joint working party, the points made in the report about the professional care of children under one. Separately, I understand the British Paediatric Association are considering the question of the care of sick children immediately after admission to hospital.

It would be unrealistic to expect speedy solutions to the tragedy of cot deaths but we are hopeful that continuing action of the kind I have indicated will enable progress to be made.

Information Leaflets

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what priority he is giving to translating his Department's information leaflets and claim forms into the Welsh, Greek, Turkish, Chinese, Punjabi, Bengali, Gujurati, Hindi and Urdu languages respectively; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: A selection of DHSS information leaflets and claim forms is produced in Welsh by the Department's Wales and South Western Region in response to local requirements. Also in April 1985 the Department introduced "Which Benefit", a comprehensive leaflet on social security benefit, in the Bengali, Chinese, Gujerati, Hindi, Punjabi and Urdu languages. Departmental evaluation of these projects is still in progress.

Hospital Managers

Mr. Irving asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what help he will provide to hospital managers to enable them to comply with their duties under the Mental Health Act 1983, section I 3.2 in providing patients with information leaflets and forms in their own language.

Mr. Whitney: I explained the background to this matter in my replies on 29 January to the hon. Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) at columns 560-62. I have no reason to doubt the ability of National Health Service authorities to find a means of discharging their responsibility to give the required information to any individual detained patients who do not understand English. We have no evidence of widespread difficulties, but the Mental Health Act Commission know that we are prepared to consider evidence of difficulties which might require action centrally.

Hospital Projects

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list by region, project and content, for London (a) hospital projects completed since 1979 and costing more than £1 million, (b) hospital projects costing over £1 million under construction and (c) hospital projects in design stage costing more than £1 million.

Mr. Whitney: Following is the information requested for capital schemes each costing over £2 million. There are many other smaller schemes at the various stages, but details of these are not held centrally. Health authorities have not been required to register schemes costing between £2 million and £5 million with the Department and information on this category may therefore be incomplete.

Capital schemes costing over £2 million

Generic Drugs

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will introduce regulations which provide that only generic equivalents shall be prescribed in the National Health Service for drugs that are patent expired.

Mr. Hayhoe: I have no plans to do so.

NHS (Residential Places)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he has now received a list of National Health Service residential places for National Health Service staff from each of the authorities he asked to submit plans by 31 December 1985; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing those that he has now approved for sale, together with the submission of the estimated sale values of the authority concerned.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Department is scrutinising the plans regions have submitted for the disposal of surplus residential accommodation and I have not yet approved a regional plan.

Health Authorities (Chairmen)

Mr. Harrison asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will identify the chairmen appointed for the Wakefield (Eastern) area health authority since April 1982; and if he will state what salary they received annually for that duty;

(2) if he will identify the chairmen of the Yorkshire regional health authority since April 1982; and what salary they received annually for that duty;

(3) if he will identify the chairmen appointed for the Wakefield (Western) area health authority since April 1982; and what salary they received annually for that duty.

Mr. Hayhoe: Sir William Tweddle was chairman of Yorkshire regional health authority until his death in October 1982. Mr. Bryan Askew, the current chairman, was appointed from 1 March 1983. On 1 April 1982 Wakefield (Eastern) and Wakefield (Western) area health authorities became Pontefract and Wakefield district health authorities respectively. Councillor Roy Widdowson, the current chairman of Pontefract DHA, and Sir Jack Smart, the current chairman of Wakefield DHA, were both appointed from 1 April 1982. These are not salaried appointments although chairmen are entitled to receive an honorarium or to claim financial loss allowance. The rates of honorarium payable from 1 April 1982 are as follows:

From	Annual amount payable £
1 April 1982	7,590
1 August 1983	8,122
1 January 1984	8,424
1 April 1984	8,676
1 November 1984	8,970

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. McGuire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will introduce legislation to seek to enable YTS trainees to qualify for unemployment benefit after they have completed their training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major: To receive unemployment benefit a person must satisfy two conditions. First he must have actually paid a certain amount of Class 1 contributions at some time; and second, he must have paid or been credited with enough contributions in the relevant tax year. YTS trainees receive a training allowance, not earnings, and they are not in class 1 employment. They therefore do not pay contributions but they are given credits for the training period which assist them to satisfy the second contribution condition. A YTS trainee will therefore receive unemployment benefit only if he paid enough contributions before commencing training to satisfy the first contribution condition. The Government have no plans to alter this situation. Supplementary benefit, which is not dependent on contribution conditions, is available to trainees who are unemployed on completion of their training.

Mr. Robert Banks asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the benefit to the Exchequer of reduced unemployment benefits being paid to those who undertake duties in the Territorial Army volunteer reserve.

Mr. Major: A reservist who is in receipt of unemployment benefit loses benefit of up to £5·07 for himself, or £8·21 if he has an adult dependant, for each day, other than Sundays, on which he undertakes duties in the Territorial Army Volunteer Reserve and earns more than £2. Supplementary benefit is reduced by the amount by which TA pay exceeds £32 in a month. Both benefits are withdrawn for the period of the annual camp. Information on the total amount of benefit withheld as a result of these procedures is not available.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his latest estimate of the number of children of school age for whom family income supplement is currently in payment.

Mr. Newton: At October 1985, the latest date for which information is available, there were 261,000 children aged 5 to 15 in families receiving family income supplement. There were a further 27,000 children aged 16 to 18 still engaged in full-time non-advanced education.

Allowances

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people received constant attendance allowance at the latest available date.

Mr. Newton: At 30 September 1982 (the latest date for which figures are available), 2,250 people were in receipt of constant attendance allowance.

Home Helps

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report those local authorities which imposed a minimum charge for a home help service provided to supplementary benefit claimants.

Mr. Whitney: The latest available information about local authorities in England who impose a minimum charge for their home help service is set out in columns 215 and 216 of the "Personal Social Services Statistics Actuals 1983-84" published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy, a copy of which is in the Library. No information is separately collected by the Department about such charges to supplementary benefit recipients.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will direct the Social Services Inspectorate in its review of social services provision to investigate the new role in personal care of the frail and elderly undertaken by home helps; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The social services inspectorate's inspection of home help services is concerned with the efficiency and effectiveness of those services and will include an assessment of the personal care being provided by home helps for frail and elderly people in the participating authorities.

Prescriptions

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the cost of extending free prescriptions to those whose medical condition requires continuous and repeated prescriptions beyond a three month period.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that separate figures to estimate the cost are not available.

Blind and Partially Sighted People (Register)

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he intends to publish updated statistics on the numbers of registered blind or partially sighted people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The local authority returns giving information about the numbers of people registered as blind and partially sighted which would normally have been asked for in March 1985 have been deferred until March 1986, and we plan to publish them in the autumn of this year.

In 1985-86 the BD8 return, which provides details on the causes of blindness or partial sight for new cases, has been extended, as it is in every fifth year, to cover persons of working age. The reason for the exceptional departure from the normal three-yearly cycle of registration returns is to provide a once for all check of the response rate of the form BD8 for this age group. Subsequent registration returns will revert to the normal cycle, the next one relating to the position at 31 March 1988.

Disabled People (Statistics)

Mr. Carter-Jones: asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what estimates he has of the numbers of disabled people in each category of disability for which records are kept; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: The latest available data about the number of persons registered with social services departments as physically or sensorily handicapped are set out in the table. Registration with social services departments is not a reliable guide to the overall incidence of disability, as registration is voluntary and local authorities may renew and update their records on different timescales. There is no information held centrally about the total number of mentally disordered people.

The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys is conducting on behalf of the Department a national survey of people with significant disabilities to obtain comprehensive and up-to-date information about their numbers, circumstances and needs. The results are expected to be published in 1988.

England—Number of Registered Handicapped

As at 31 March	Type of Register	Registration Category	Number of Persons Registered
1982	Blind and partially sighted	Blind	111,729
		Partially sighted	58,003
		Total	169,732
1983	Deaf and hard of hearing*	Deaf with speech	16,113
		Deaf without speech	15,722
		Hard of hearing	47,179
		Total	79,014
1984	General classes* †	Very severely handicapped	71,604
		Severely handicapped	454,411
		Other	576,535
		Total	1,102,550

* Includes persons multiply handicapped and therefore on other registers.
† But excludes persons on the Register of the Blind.

NHS (Pay)

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how regional and district health authorities are expected to find the extra cost to them of nationally determined pay settlements.

Mr. Hayhoe: Health authorities are expected to meet both service requirements and pay increases from the allocations made to them by Government and from their growing cost improvement programmes.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many exceptionally severe weather payments were made to claimants in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland in each year since 1980.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is as follows:

Single Payments of Supplementary Benefit for Extra Fuel used During Periods of Exceptionally Severe Weather

Thousands

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
Scotland	*	—	60	—	—	—
England	*	—	200	—	—	159
Wales	*	—	19	—	—	11
Total			278			170

* Not available.
Figures rounded to the nearest thousand and may not sum as a result.

Figures for Northern Ireland should be obtained from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what current weekly amounts are deducted from housing benefit for (a) heating, (b) cooking, (c) hot water and (d) lighting.

Mr. Major: The treatment of charges for heating, hot water, cooking or lighting varies between standard and certificated housing benefit cases.

Standard Cases

In standard cases, amenity charges for fuel are excluded from assistance. Gross rent is reduced by the amount of the charge or, if not known, by an amount which the local authority considers fairly attributable to the amenity.

Certified cases

In certified cases (that is people in receipt of qualifying supplementary benefit), the weekly amount deducted from rent varies according to the actual amenity charge and whether full or partial heating is provided. Where the claimant pays a charge which varies (or is subsequently adjusted) according to actual consumption, the amount of the charge is deducted from the rent. Where the claimant is required to pay a fixed amenity charge as a condition of the tenancy and the charge provides for the full fuel needs of the home, the deduction made is the actual charge subject to the following limits:

heating	6.55
hot water	0.80
cooking	0.80
lighting	0.50

Where, however, a claimant can choose to pay a fixed charge for fuel, the whole amount is deducted from the rent.

A reduced deduction is normally made where a charge is made for partial heating.

Statistics (Publication)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to publish a volume of Health and Personal Social Service Statistics for England in 1986.

Mr. Whitney: Health and Personal Social Services Statistics for England is now to be published on an annual basis. It is planned to publish the 1986 edition during the summer of 1986.

Drugs Initiative

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what proportion of the specially allocated drugs initiative money, in (a) 1984-85 and (b) 1985-86 has been allocated to the support of projects in (i) the Greater London area and (ii) inner London.

Mr. Whitney: A total of £3·6 million has been allocated under the Department's drugs initiative to projects serving Greater London, of which £0·35 million was made available for 1984-85 and £0·75 million for 1985-86. It is not possible to identify separately the proportion of the allocations which relate to inner London.

Mucodyne

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the hon. Member for Central Fife can expect replies to the questions he put in his letter to the Department in early January concerning the drug Carbocisteine (Mucodyne).

Mr. Whitney: I wrote to the hon. Member yesterday.

City Roads Drugs Project

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what financial support his Department has made available to the City Roads drugs crisis intervention project in each of the three years 1983-84, 1984-85 and 1985-86; and what contribution is intended for 1986-87.

Mr. Whitney: DHSS pump-priming funding of the City Roads drug misuse project ended in 1984-85 with a contribution of £39,600. £79,200 was provided in 1983-84.

The Department is currently considering an application under the drugs initiative for a substantial capital grant towards the renovation of City Roads' premises.

Health Authorities (Statistics)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what population figures are used by health authorities for their budgeting and planning.

Mr. Whitney: Regional health authorities are supplied by the Department with figures from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys giving mid-year population estimates and projections for each of their districts. It is, however, for regional and district health authorities themselves to decide what use to make of this and other available data in discharging their budgeting and planning responsibilities. Comprehensive information on their use of such data is not collected centrally.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what population figures are used for planning and budgetary purposes for the Portsmouth and South-East Hampshire health authority.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry that this information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may like to obtain it from the chairman of the Wessex regional health authority.

Arthritis Drugs

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his estimate of the numbers of deaths each year due to the effects of all anti-arthritic drugs.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 30 January 1986, c. 620]: Information on deaths attributed to medicinal products is available from death certificates, from reports of adverse reactions and from professional reports based on original research. However, none of these sources provides data on which to base the estimate requested by the right hon. Member.

I am advised that death certificates are a poor indicator of deaths related to medicinal products as the cause of death is usually given as a medical condition, not the effects of the medicine. Adverse reaction reports to the Committee on Safety of Medicines provide data on drug-related deaths in the United Kingdom, but for two important reasons they cannot be used to estimate total deaths caused by medicines. First, adverse reaction reports are reports of associations and do not necessarily indicate a causal relationship between the medicine and reaction. Second, the committee acknowledges that there is under-reporting of adverse reactions but the extent of this is not known.

I am not aware of any published professional research which provides an estimate of deaths caused by all groups of drugs used to treat or alleviate the symptoms of arthritis. However, I understand that, studies, made in the Nottingham area, lead to estimates that deaths from upper gastro-intestinal bleeding caused by one of the groups, the non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (but not including aspirin), may amount to over 200 a year in the United Kingdom.

The Committee on Safety of Medicines is currently undertaking a further special review of available evidence on the safety of non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs including the Nottingham study.

War Pensions

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, if, pursuant to the answer of 3 February regarding disregard on war pensions, he will list those branches of the Royal British Legion which can readily be identified as having made representations on the subject; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 6 February 1986, c. 218]: Representations from the following Royal British Legion branches have been identified:

Royal British Legion Scotland—Edinburgh and Lothian Area Council
Royal British Legion —Kenilworth branch
Royal British Legion —Firs branch, Birmingham

Regular representations have also been received from the National Headquarters of the Royal British Legion and the Royal British Legion Scotland following resolutions taken at their annual conferences.

DEFENCE

Tornado Mk2

6. Mr. Stott asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many Tornado Mk2s have been delivered to the Royal Air Force to date.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Sixteen Tornado F-2 aircraft have been delivered to the RAF to date.

Molesworth

7. Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to pay an official visit to Molesworth.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend has no immediate plans to do so.

48. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now halt building developments at Molesworth.

Mr. Stanley: No.

Visiting Forces Act

20. Mr. Corbyn asked the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received about the operation of the Visiting Forces Act.

Mr. Stanley: Since the beginning of 1985 about 35 letters have been received from right hon. and hon. Members concerning various aspects of the Visiting Forces Act. Other letters and inquiries have been received directly from the general public.

Naval Contracts (Tendering)

21. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on competitive tendering for recent naval contracts.

Mr. Lee: As I told the House on 14 January at column 913, orders were placed on 3 January for three Upholder class submarines and one Trafalgar class SSN. The order for the Upholder class submarines was awarded to CL/VSEL after a competition in which this yard offered substantially the best value for the defence budget and the order for the SSN was placed with VSEL as the only United Kingdom shipbuilder currently able to build nuclear-powered submarines.

Territorial Army

23. Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received about pay and conditions in the Territorial Army.

Mr. Lee: My Department has received a number of representations from hon. Members, the council of TAVR associations and members of the TA on a number of aspects of TA pay and conditions of service.

Procurement

24. Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest forecast of outturn for defence procurement for 1985-86.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The defence procurement vote (Class 1, Vote 2) provides for expenditure in the current year of £8,723 million. This Vote, together with the other cash-limited defence votes, constitutes the block defence cash limit which is managed as a whole. The final outturn will be contained within the block limit but it is too early to predict the precise outturn for individual votes.

26. Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the employment implications of his procurement policy.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Employment levels in the United Kingdom defence industry will depend on the success of individual firms in winning orders both at home and abroad. The Ministry of Defence's procurement programme aims to give the best value for money for the taxpayer by pursuing the twin approaches of increasing competition between suppliers and fostering collaboration with our international partners. Improvements in the competitivenes of United Kingdom firms in meeting our requirements will stand them in good stead to win foreign orders. Participation in collaborative projects can enable British firms to remain at the forefront of rapidly developing technologies where it would not be cost effective or even feasible to do so independently.

Defence Establishments (Location)

25. Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is yet in a position to announce plans for moving defence establishments to the north of England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: So far we have only been considering this question in general terms and are not yet ready to put forward specific proposals. However, all proposals will need to stand on their economic and operational merits.

Royal Naval Vessels (Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean)

27. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to cut the number of Royal Navy ships at present posted to the Persian gulf and the Indian Ocean.

Mr. Stanley: No.

Merchant Shipping (Gulf)

28. Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to initiate Royal Naval patrols to seek to prevent British merchant shipping being boarded by Iranian soldiers in international waters in the gulf.

Mr. Stanley: We maintain a Royal Navy patrol in the vicinity of the gulf. On the question of the legality of boarding vessels on the high seas, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office to my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Mr. Lawrence) on 28 January at column 428.

Battlefield Nuclear Weapons

29. Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement regarding the progress of the recently begun bilateral negotiations on the modernisation of battlefield nuclear weapons.

Mr. Stanley: I cannot add to the reply I gave to the hon. Member on 20 January at columns 90-91.

Airspace (United States Air Force)

30. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the amount of British airspace under the control of the United States air force.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Defence Procurement on 30 January at columns 627-8. USAF aircraft are not based at any RAF air stations other than those listed in his previous question.

Fearless and Intrepid

31. Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will announce when the decision on the replacement of HMS Fearless and HMS Intrepid will be made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer to the hon. Member for Jarrow (Mr. Dixon) earlier today.

Surface Fleet

32. Mr. Beith asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he plans to reduce the size of the surface fleet over the next five years.

Mr. Stanley: The ships from the RN and RFA that on present plans will be withdrawn during 1986 were given in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Northampton, North (Mr. Marlow) on 5 February at columns 183-4. The corresponding list for 1987 is:

HMS Walrus—Porpoise Class Submarine
HMS Sealion—Porpoise Class Submarine
HMS Engadine—Helicopter Training Ship
RFA Sir Caradoc—Interim Landing Ship Logistic

As I said in my reply to my hon. Friend, certain of the ships expected to be withdrawn from the active fleet in 1986 will continue to be available at standby status where they will remain declared to NATO. As for the period 1988 onwards it is not our general practice to give details of our disposal plans so far ahead; nor to give the planned acceptance dates of the new ships that will be joining the fleet over the next five years.

FH70 System

33. Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Defence what powers he has under the memorandum of understanding relating to the FH70 system in relation to any of the foreign participants supplying arms or ammunition to a country which is engaged in hostilities against British troops.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In the unlikely event of either of the other Governments participating in the FH70 programme wishing to supply FH70 guns or ammunition to a foreign country engaged in hostilities against British troops, the United Kingdom's prior consent would be required. The FH70 memorandum of understanding does, of course, refer to the supply only of FH70 guns and ammunition.

Trident

34. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest estimate of the cost of the Trident system.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer to the answer which I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike).

47. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the programme to develop the warheads for Trident is on schedule; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The programme to develop the warheads for Trident is making satisfactory progress and will fully support the Trident submarine in-service date of the mid-1990s.

Post-costing Arrangements

35. Mr. Weetch asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will undertake a review of post-costing arrangements within his Department.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Post-costing is undertaken in accordance with arrangements agreed between the Government and the Confederation of British Industry in 1968. The arrangements are reviewed by the independent review board for Government contracts at each of its triennial reviews, the latest of which was in 1984. In addition, the incidence of post-costing is considered each year by the Ministry when drawing up its programme of contracts to be post-costed. The Committee of Public Accounts was told in evidence on 18 November 1985 (Production Costs of Defence Equipment) that the Ministry intended to increase the volume of post-costing, and action to achieve that aim is in hand.

Dockyard Services Bill

36. Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received about the Dockyard Services Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: My right hon. Friend has received two letters about the Dockyard Services Bill and has had one meeting with my hon. Friend the Member for Cornwall, South-East (Mr. Hicks) at which the Bill was discussed.

Defence Budget

37. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is planning any future economies in the defence budget.

Mr. Younger: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 30 January to my hon. Friend the Member for Crawley (Mr. Soames) at column 627. We shall, of course, continue to seek economies through improved efficiency and through increased competition in equipment procurement.

Security

38. Mr. Greg Knight asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total cost to his Department, over the past three years, of increased security measures, including manpower, necessary at Ministry of Defence property as a result of the activities of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament and other protestors.

Mr. Stanley: Almost all security measures are adopted for more than one specific purpose. It is not generally possible therefore to isolate the measures taken solely for these reasons. The main package of security expenditure necessitated principally by protestors in this period was the operation to clear and fence RAF Molesworth in February 1985. The total cost of this operation was in the order of £6·5 million, although approximately half this sum was devoted to the erection of a perimeter fence which would have been required regardless of the threat from demonstrators.

Strategic Defence Initiative

39. Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is satisfied with progress of implementation of the terms of the memorandum of understanding between the United States of America and the United Kingdom on the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Yes.

51. Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made on plans for Her Majesty's Government participation in the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Since my right hon. Friend the Member for Henley (Mr. Heseltine) announced to this House on 9 December the nature of the formal governmental agreement reached with the United States on United Kingodm participation in the strategic defence initiative research programme, further progress has been made in a number of areas. the SDI participation office within the Ministry of Defence is now operational. Negotiations on administrative arrangements to enable the memorandum of understanding to be implemented are well advanced. Our officials and companies are engaged in discussions with the United States SDI Organisation to further clarify potential areas for United States funded work to be placed in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will review the implications of the strategic defence initiative for the defence of western Europe.

Mr. Stanley: I cannot add to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Ceredigion and Pembroke, North (Mr. Howells) on 22 October 1985 at columns 136-7.

Supplies

40. Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is satisfied with the delivery times and quality of material supplied to Her Majesty's forces.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Department strives constantly to improve the value for money obtained in procuring material to meet the needs of the Armed Forces. This means that we seek to obtain a better overall package including such factors as delivery times and quality as well as performance and cost.

Defence Contractors

41. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Defence what amount he has received from defence contractors in excess profits in the last three years.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The amount which has been recovered to date on contracts which were post-costed during the three years 1982-84 is £20·6 million.

Nimrod Aircraft

42. Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is considering the cancellation of the Nimrod AEW Mk III.

46. Mr. Beaumont-Dark asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is satisfied with the progress of the Nimrod contract.

Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress with the Nimrod AEW Mk II.

Mr. Younger: I refer the hon. Members and my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Members for Wrexham (Dr. Marek) and for Isle of Wight (Mr. Ross).

Youth Training Scheme

43. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the operation of the YTS within the armed services.

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress with YTS trainees in the armed forces.

Mr. John Lee: My noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Support has today announced in another place that the armed services YTS is to be expanded from one to two years in line with changes to the civilian YTS.

Since the armed services YTS started in 1983 over 9,000 applications have been received with nearly 2,700 accepted. Total intake stands at over 2,200 with some 750 currently undergoing training. About 860 participants have so far transferred to regular engagements.

Nuclear Weapons

44. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give his latest estimate of the numbers of intermediate range nuclear weapons deployed in East and West Europe.

Mr. Stanley: Information on the numbers of intermediate range nuclear weapons deployed in East and West Europe is contained in Figures 12 and 13 of Annex A of volume 1 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1985". We plan to update this information in the next "Statement on the Defence Estimates".

Defence Equipment (Exports)

45. Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to improve the export potential of defence equipment ordered by his Department.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Ministry of Defence's current procurement procedures already reflect its concern to maximise the export potential of the equipment procured to meet the needs of the United Kingdom armed forces. However, there is always scope for improvement and discussions are currently taking place within the Department to consider how this might best be achieved.

Gibraltar

49. Mr. Stanbrook asked the Secretary of State for Defence what measures apply to British and other military aircraft seeking to use Gibraltar airfield arising out of the restrictions imposed by the Spanish authorities on such use.

Mr. Stanley: Spanish prohibited airspace in the Algeciras region imposes limitations on the approach to landing and take-off manoeuvres of all military aircraft using Gibraltar. Other than this, no special measures apply to military aircraft seeking to use the airfield.

Crown Proceedings Act 1947

50. Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans for amending section 10 of the Crown Proceedings Act 1947.

Mr. Lee: I have nothing at present to add to the reply I gave to the right hon. Gentleman on 26 July 1985 at columns 876-77.

Westland plc

52. Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the comparative implications for defence policy of the latest proposals for the financial reconstruction of Westland plc.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have nothing to add to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 15 January 1986 at column 1097. As she said then, the Government's concern is to see a financial reconstruction of Westland as soon as possible which maintains a British helicopter design, development and manufacturing capability, supports United Kingdom participation in collaboration with NATO Allies and safeguards the interests of the company, its employees, and its shareholders.

The Prime Minister also said that she believed both sets of proposals put to the company could achieve these objectives and hoped that the shareholders would be able to take their final decision very shortly.

Helicopter Policy

53. Mr. Gerald Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the next meeting of the national armaments directors will take place to discuss European helicopter policy.

Mr. Norman Lamont: No meeting of national armament directors is currently planned specifically to discuss European helicopter policy.

Air Space (Radar Protection)

54. Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning radar protection of United Kingdom air space.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Major enhancements of the United Kingdom's radar capabilities are included in the substantial modernisation programme of the United Kingdom's air defences which is currently being implemented.

Defence Contracts

Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of the defence contracts placed in 1984-85 were placed by competition; and what steps he is taking to increase that proportion.

Mr. Norman Lamont: In 1984-85 the proportion of work placed in a competitive environment was 46 per cent., an increase of eight percentage points on the proportion for the previous year. A further significant increase is expected in 1985-86, and indeed for the first nine months of 1985-86 the figure was well over 60 per cent., as I informed the House on 30 January at column 1184. Regarding the steps we are taking to increase that proportion, I refer the hon. Member for the answer my hon. Friend the Member for Pendle (Mr. Lee) gave on 30 January at column 628.

Offensive Weapons Systems (Lasers)

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has taken any steps to procure evidence of the feasibility of using laser technology as offensive weapon systems.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is our practice to keep abreast of all technologies with a potential defence application.

Shipbuilding (Contracts)

Mr. Sayeed asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy, in reaching a decision on any competition between Swan Hunter Shipbuilders and Harland and Wolff for a contract for an AOR vessel, to disregard the element in Harland and Wolff's costings which he assesses is attributable to subsidies either from Government or European sources; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: The Ministry of Defence's policy is to place warship contracts, wherever practicable, by competitive tendering, and to obtain best value for money for the defence budget. Where a tenderer is publicly owned, the question whether subsidies are applied to tenders is a matter for the sponsor Department; the Northern Ireland Office in the case of Harland and Wolff.

Royal Yacht Britannia

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence if Portsmouth fleet maintenance repair base is capable of carrying out the refit work on the royal yacht Britannia.

Mr. Lee: Since HMY Britannia was last refitted at Portsmouth, the base has been restructured as a fleet maintenance and repair organisation, with a smaller work force and a change in the balance of skills. The content and spread of the work planned for the 1987 refit of the royal yacht is such that it is unlikely to be compatible with the capacity, particularly in the finishing trades, available in the Portsmouth fleet maintenance and repair organisation.

Cash Limits

Mr. John Townend asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he proposes to make any changes to current defence cash limits for 1985-86.

Mr. Younger: Yes. The following changes are being made, subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary spring Supplementary Estimate. The net effect of the changes is a small reduction in public expenditure.

£'000s

Class I	Current Cash Limits	Increase/Decrease	Revised cash limit
I. 1	6,644,742	+75,100: transferred from 1, 2, 4, and 5	6,719,842
I. 2	8,732,002	− 2,054: reduced provision
		−17,610: transferred to I. 1	8,703,338
I. 4	1,284,456	−30,000: transferred to I. 4	1,254,456
I. 5	442,800	−27,490: transferred to I. 1	415,310

The reduced provision mainly reflects surrender of VAT refunds on vehicle maintenance contracted out. The other changes are to allow for transfers within the Ministry of Defence expenditure block following the 1985 service pay settlement.

Security (Disciplinary Action)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many officers and men in the Royal Air Force have left in each of the last three years, due to the fact that their services are no longer required;

(2) how many officers and men have left the Royal Navy, in each of the last three years, due to the fact that their services were no longer required;

(3) how many officers and men have left the Army in each of the last three years due to the fact that their services were no longer required.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 7 February 1986, c. 306]: The number of commissioned officers and men who left the regular forces due to the fact that their services were no longer required were:

	1983-84	1984-85	1 April-31 December 1985
Commissioned Officers
Royal Navy	37	33	9
Royal Marines	3	4	1
Army	61	98	75
Royal Air Force	95	99	43
Total	196	234	128
Servicemen
Royal Navy	576	568	422
Royal Marines	125	171	134
Army	3,613	2,979	2,043
Royal Air Force	615	617	412
Total	4,929	4,335	3,011

Figures for commissioned male officers show the numbers whose appointment was terminated. Officers designate have been excluded.

Figures for service men include disciplinary cases, unsuitable recruits, training failures and inefficiency discharges.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many officers and men in the Royal Air Force have been disciplined for major breaches of security in each of the last three years;

(2) how many officers and men in the Royal Navy have been disciplined for major breaches of security in each of the last three years;

(3) how many officers and men in the Army have been disciplined for major breaches of security in each of the last three years.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 7 February 1986, c. 306]: A total of one officer and two soldiers in the Army have been disciplined for major breaches of security under the Official Secrets Act in the last three years. No officer or other rank in either the RAF or the RN has been disciplined under these circumstances during this period.

Collaborative Programmes

Mr. McWilliam asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the European countries involved in collaborative programmes with the United Kingdom in the procurement of defence systems, together with the dates of the memoranda of understanding, the proportion of work in percentage and pounds sterling terms which accrues to each country in respect of the procurement order for each system for each country; the companies involved; and what information he has as to whether any such company or its employees have been the subject of any prosecution in their own, or any other country concerning the supply of arms or ammunition to another country within the last seven years, and the countries which it is alleged were so supplied.

Mr. Norman Lamont [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986]: Details of collaborative defence equipment programmes in which the United Kingdom participates with other European countries are set out. The workshare is expressed as the broad percentage of work in each project which each nation should achieve under the terms of the relevant memorandum of understanding. It is not our practice to publish costing details for individual equipment projects. The companies listed are those principally involved in each project in each of the participating nations; in addition, large numbers of companies are involved in subcontract and other work.

It is not practicable to provide the comprehensive information sought on prosecutions concerning the supply of arms and ammunition. Memoranda of understanding for collaborative defence equipment projects include appropriate arrangements governing the supply of that equipment to third parties in which we naturally seek to safeguard United Kingdom interests. But each participating Government must be responsible for exercising their national export control regulations.

WALES

Hospital Schemes

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all new hospital schemes, including the anticipated number of beds, approved since May 1979, and indicate the likely opening date.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: New hospital schemes in Wales approved by the Welsh Office since May 1979 are given in the following table:

Scheme	Number of beds	Opening Date
St. Davids, Carmathen, Scheme I	90	July 1983
East Glamorgan EMI Unit	30	February 1984
Bryntirion Scheme II—EMI Ward	30	April 1984
Geriatric Ward	30	February 1985

Ystradgynlais Community Hospital	52	March 1986
Morriston Scheme II	72	Mid 1986
St. Tydfil's Day Unit and Adaptations	154	Mid 1986
Llandudno Scheme I	66	Mid 1987
Ysbyty Glan Clwyd Scheme II	146	Mid 1988
Llandough Obstetric Unit	108	Early 1989
Prince Charles Scheme II	77	Early 1991
Singleton Scheme III—Obstetric/ Paediatric Unit	188	Mid 1991
Geriatric	90	Mid 1993
General Acute Unit	30	Mid 1993
Wrexham Scheme II—Phase 1	140	Mid 1991
Phase 2	60	Mid 1994

NHS (Staff)

Mr. Pendry asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) ancillary staff, (b) maintenance staff, (c) ambulance staff and (d) nurses and midwives were working in the National Health Service for each year since 1975 expressed in absolute numbers and as a percentage of total National Health Service staff.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Whole-time equivalents for each of the required staff groups are given in the following table, expressed as numbers and as percentages of the total:

NHS Staffing in Wales

* Figures relate to 30 September.

† Maintenance staff cannot be identified separately before 1979. The figures for maintenance staff from 1979 are as follows:

	Whole-time equivalent	Percentage
1979	1,645	3·3
1980	1,648	3·2
1981	1,683	3·2
1982	1,700	3·1
1983	1,674	3·1
1984	1,698	3·1

‡ Basic weekly contract hours for nurses and midwives were reduced from 40 to 37·5 hours during 1980 and therefore whole-time equivalents before and after this date are not strictly comparable.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales when he will publish the consultation paper on the local authority capital expenditure control system in Wales which was promised in chapter 6 of the Green Paper, "Paying for Local Government." Cmnd. 9714.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The consultation paper "Review of the Local Authority Capital Expenditure Control System in England and Wales" is being sent to local authorities and other interested organisations today. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Graduates (Post-experience Courses)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any plans to grant financial assistance for post-experience courses for university graduates or students; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: I shall write to the hon. Member.

University Lecturers

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how many university lecturers have been either pensioned off or have accepted voluntary redundancy payments during the last six academic years and as to what costs have been incurred by universities as a result.

Mr. Walden: The numbers and cost of academic and academic related staff taking retirement under the UGC's redundancy compensation scheme since it was introduced in 1981-82 have been.

Year	Number retiring	Cost £ million
1981-82	1,600	35

Mathematics and Physics Graduates

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many university students graduated in mathematics and physics at universities or polytechnics in the academic years between 1974-75 and 1978-79 and between 1979-80 and 1984-85; and how many teachers have been employed to teach those subjects in secondary schools in the academic years between 1979-80 and 1985-86.

Mr. Walden: The number of first-degree graduates in mathematics and physics from universities in Great Britain and polytechnics in England and Wales between 1974-75 and 1978-79 is estimated to have been 27,000. The number graduating between 1979-80 and 1984-85 was 35,000. The number of graduates in 1985-86 is not yet available.

Information is not collected annually on the deployment of teachers within schools. A staffing survey was carried out by the Department in 1984 among a sample of maintained secondary schools in England estimated that some 41,000 full-time teachers were teaching mathematics and some 13,000 were teaching physics. There were also some 10,000 who were teaching remedial mathematics. Some of the teachers in each of these subjects were teaching other subjects as well. Physics is also taught as a component within the subject "General Science", which some 28,000 teachers were teaching in 1984.

Overseas Students

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the range of tuition fees which students from overseas have been required to pay for (a) undergraduate courses and (b) post graduate courses at universities since 1979-80.

Mr. Walden: For the academic year 1979-80 the Secretary of State for Education and Science recommended that overseas students should pay fees of £940 for undergraduate courses and of £1,230 for postgraduate courses. For subsequent years minimum fee levels have been recommended by the University Grants Committee as follows:

	1980-81	1981-82	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87
Arts	2,000	2,500	2,700	2,900	3,150	3,310	3,480
Science	3,000	3,600	3,600	3,800	4,150	4,350	4,570
Clinical years of medicine, dentistry and veterinary science	5,000	6,000	6,600	7,000	7,650	8,050	8,450

The recommended minima apply to undergraduate and postgraduate courses.

Research Projects

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many academic research projects have been financially supported by research councils and the University Grants Committee during the last seven years.

Mr. Walden: The University Grants Committee provides through recurrent, equipment and capital grants general financial support for reseach in universities. This support is not related to specific projects, but is intended to provide facilities and research activities, which can be further selectively funded by specific grants by the research councils.

The number of research grants awarded by each of the research councils to academic institutions over the past seven years is as follows:

	Number
AFRC	839
ESRC	1,790
MRC	3,272
NERC	1,119
SERC	14,892

Maintenance Grants

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the different maintenance awards which have been granted for each academic year since 1979-80; and to what extent the value of student maintenance grants has declined or increased during the same period.

Mr. Walden: The information is as follows:

Maintenance Awards Rates

Academic Year	Students living at home	Student living elsewhere than in London	Students living in London
1979-80	985	1,245	1,485
1980-81	1,125	1,430	1,695
1981-82	1,180	1,535	1,825
1982-83	1,225	1,595	1,900
1983-84	1,275	1,660	1,975
1984-85*	1,435	1,775	2,100
1985-86	1,480	1,830	2,165

* From 1984-85 maintenance grant was increased to include a flat rate element for travel.

In real terms, and after adjusting for the changed arrangements in respect of travel costs from 1984-85, the value of the "elsewhere" and "London" rates declined by 12 per cent. and that of the "home" rate by 15 per cent. between 1979-80 and 1985-86.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Cash Limits

Dr. Hampson asked the Attorney-General what change he proposes to make to the 1985-86 cash limit for class IX, vote II, Administration of Justice, Northern Ireland.

The Attorney-General: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for class IX, vote II will be increased by £355,000 from £7,403,000 to £7,758,000. The increase is required for repair costs to certain courthouses in Northern Ireland and for the procurement of alternative accommodation for the legal aid department in Belfast, both of which have been necessary following extensive damage caused by terrorist activity. The increase will be a charge to the Capital Reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planning total of public expenditure.

Social Security Appeals

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Attorney-General, for the most recent year for which figures are available (a) how many social security appeals in total were made to the commissioners, (b) how many of these appeals were made other than on a point of law, (c) how many appeals were made by women and (d) how many of these appeals were made other than on a point of law.

The Attorney-General: In 1985, 2,151 appeals were made to the social security commissioners in England and Wales. I understand from my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland that the corresponding figure for Scotland was 426 appeals. I regret the other information is not available.

ENERGY

Small-scale Electricity Generators

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will support research into the economic feasibility of the construction of modular units for small-scale electricity generators suitable for rural areas and for export.

Mr. Goodlad: My Department will consider any proposal submitted for small-scale devices. Support is currently being given towards small-scale hydro-power devices for electricity generation.

Coal Industry

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many jobs have been lost in the mining industry since March 1985.

Mr. David Hunt: Between the end of March 1985 and 25 January 1986 there was a reduction of some 31,000 in the number of men on NCB colliery books.

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many collieries have been closed since March 1985; and what is the approximate number of tonnes of capacity which have been lost as a result of these closures.

Mr. David Hunt: I understand from the National Coal Board that 24 pits have closed since the end of March 1985. Questions of mining capacity are matters for the National Coal Board.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Immigration

Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people admitted to the United Kingdom as (a) visitors and (b) on temporary admission subsequently married and sought permission to settle; and how many such applications were permitted in each of the last three years.

Mr. Waddington: I regret that information on these lines is not at present available, but arrangements have already been made which should in due course enable it to be provided in the future.

Equal Opportunities Commission

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he is undertaking, and with whom, in preparation for the appointment to the chair of the Equal Opportunities Commission which falls vacant in May.

Mr. Waddington: None. My right hon. Friend intends to invite the present chairman to serve for a further term.

Tactical Options Manual

Mr. Crowther asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken before approving amendments to the tactical options manual to ensure that operations carried out in accordance with the current manual would not give rise to any conflict with section 3 of the Criminal Law Act 1967.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The tactical options manual was prepared by the Association of Chief Police Officers and it is for it to make any amendments. The amount of force which may lawfully be used in any police operation is subject always to the overriding principle set out in section 3 of the Criminal Law Act 1967 that the police shall use no more force than is reasonable in the circumstances. What is reasonable force for the purposes of that section depends on the particular circumstances in each case.

Rape

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the average sentence imposed by criminal courts for rape during each of the last five years; and if he will indicate the trend over the same period of the shortest and longest custodial sentences imposed for the offence.

Mr. Mellor: The readily available information is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables" (for 1984, under classification 19 in vol. 2, tables S2.1(A), S2.3, S2.4 and S2.5). These figures include offences of aiding and abetting rape and attempted rape. Corresponding information for 1985 is not yet available.

Community Radio

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply to the right hon. Member for Brent, East on 30 January, Official Report, column 582, if he will name the persons and groups from ethnic minorities whom the advisory committee on community radio has met and which the committee has listed.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that discussions between members of the advisory panel on community radio, individually and collectively, and interested individuals and groups from the ethnic minority communities took place on an informal, and in some cases a confidential, basis. In these circumstances, I do not think it would be right to identify particular individuals or groups.

Cash Limits

Mr. Lightbown asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he intends to make any changes to the cash limits within his responsibility.

Mr. Hurd: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit on the Prisons Vote (class IX, vote 8) will be raised by £22,814,000 from £591,444,000 to £614,258,000. This additional provision will be used to cover the cost of acquiring, converting and bringing into use RAF Lindholme as a prison, and of other measures taken to cater for the exceptional surge in the prison population during the first half of the year. In addition, the provision will be used to make good a shortfall in the level of receipts expected to be realised from the sale of staff quarters.

The additional provision is partly offset by savings on the Central Administrative, Miscellaneous and Community Service and Civil Defence Vote (class IX, vote 7), the cash limit for which will be reduced by £9,000,000 from £306,352,000 to £297,352,000. The net increase of £13,814,000 will be charged to the Reserve and will not therefore add to the public expenditure planning total.

ENVIRONMENT

Refuse Disposal

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to enable district councils to add to the national non-domestic rate poundage proposed in "Paying for Local Government", Cmnd. 9714, an element which will reimburse the local authority for giving a commercial refuse disposal service.

Mr. Waldegrave: Local authorities currently have a duty to make reasonable charges for trade refuse disposal. This would not be affected by introduction of a national non-domestic rate.

Local Authority Employees (Rent)

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities which deduct tenants' rents from salary, when the tenant is an employee of the authority.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is not available centrally.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy towards the future role of metropolitan district councils in relation to the work currently done by the metropolitan counties in promoting local industrial or economic development initiatives.

Sir George Young: It is for the metropolitan district councils to decide whether they wish to continue promoting local industrial economic initiatives currently carried out by the metropolitan counties, following implementation of the Local Government Act 1985.

They already have the necessary powers.

Handicapped People

Mr. Hannam asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress towards further provision for handicapped people in building and access regulations.

Sir George Young: The next step is to recast the access regulations in schedule 2 to the Building Regulations 1985 into the functional form of the rest of the regulations. A draft requirement and a supporting approved document giving practical guidance are being prepared for public consultation.

When the British Standards Institution has finalised its comprehensive code of practice on means of escape for disabled people, we will be consulting publicity on extending the scope of the access requirements to a wider range of buildings.

District Auditors

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the total of legal costs incurred by district auditors over the last 10 years and the total costs of district auditors other than legal costs in identifying and certifying and dealing with losses.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Secretary of State for the Environment is no longer responsible for local authority audit. Responsibility for this was transferred to the Audit Commission in 1983. The information requested, so far as it relates to the period prior to 1 April 1983, is not available except at disproportionate expense. As to the period after the date of handover, I can only suggest that the hon. Member contacts the Audit Commission. The commission's address is: 1 Vincent Square, London SW1P 2PW.

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, since 1972, how many certificates of surcharge have been issued against local councillors by the District Audit Service; what is the total of the losses certified by district auditors over that period; how much of such losses has been recovered from surcharged councillors; and to what account surcharged receipts have been paid.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Secretary of State for the Environment is no longer responsible for local authority audit. Responsibility for this was transferred to the Audit Commission in 1983. Between 1 January 1972 and 31 March 1983, 37 certificates of loss were issued against council members by the district audit service. The total value of the certificates was £123,317. As to the number issued after 1 April 1983, the hon. Member may care to contact the Audit Commission. The commission's address is: 1 Vincent Square, London, SW1P 2PW.

Any losses recovered are payable to the local authority concerned. The other information requested is therefore not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate expense.

Voluntary Bodies

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will now announce the final allocations of grant to assist voluntary bodies affected by the abolition of the metropolitan counties and the Greater London council; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I am pleased to be able to announce our allocations of transitional grant to London boroughs and metropolitan districts. These allocations are only one aspect of the support to voluntary bodies after abolition. Transitional grant is the extra support to £20 million worth of voluntary projects which the Government are giving over and above the RSG support to abolition areas. The allocations will be followed as soon as possible by letters to individual authorities indicating which projects have been accepted as eligible for transitional grant. This will enable authorities to go ahead and confirm their very substantial spending plans — amounting to some £40 million for grants to voluntary bodies affected by abolition.

In making allocations we have taken account wherever possible of spending to replace grants paid direct to voluntary bodies by abolition authorities, even though some of these additional spending burdens are not directly supported by transitional grant.

This spending is in addition to the plans for funding county-wide groups which are now under way in most areas. In London, a budget of £27 million has already been drawn up by the boroughs for collective funding of voluntary groups. This is a very encouraging demonstration of the willingness of authorities to work together in support of the voluntary sector.

I am placing a list of allocations in the Library.

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from voluntary organisations located in Merseyside concerning their future funding; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1986]: I have received a number of representations from Merseyside voluntary organisations, particularly expressing the view that transitional grant should be made available to help local authorities on Merseyside support voluntary bodies operating countrywide. My Noble Friend the Minister of State met a representative group in Liverpool on Friday.

I refer also to the answer which I gave to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mr. Parry) on 7 February 1986, at columns 282-83.

Rate Support Grant

Mr. Hargreaves asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans for increasing the rate support grant for local authority police spending in the coming financial year.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have decided, following my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary's decision to increase the rate of police grant for 1986-87 to 51 per cent., to increase the total of block grant available by £22 million. This would increase aggregate Exchequer grant in England by about £50 million. All police authorities in both shire and metropolitan areas, will gain grant, and the table shows how much. This recognises the priority which the Government give to improving the policing of our country. No other authorities will lose grant. All ratepayers will therefore benefit from the increased grant.

	Estimated increase in police grant £	Estimated increase in block grant £	Estimated increase in police and block grant £

West Sussex	280,000	220,000	500,000
Wiltshire	250,000	100,000	350,000

These calculations assume that rate-limited authorities would have spent at rate limit and other authorities would have spent at the settlement assumption, and that the increase in police grant leads to no increase in expenditure. They assume that before the increase in the police grant police expenditure net of police grant accounted for 6·7 per cent. of shire counties' settlement spending assumption.

Local Authorities (Capital Expenditure)

Mr. Franks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the consultation paper on the local authority capital expenditure control system which was promised in chapter 6 of the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government", Cmnd. 9714.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The consultation paper "Review of the Local Authority Capital Expenditure Control System in England and Wales" is being sent to local authorities and other interested organisations today. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

TRANSPORT

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give the expenditure on transport professional and technical services by local authorities for 1985-86 based upon estimated outturn and for 1986-87 as planned.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Outturn figures for 1985-86 will not be available until the end of 1986. Local authorities do not provide separate budget figures for expenditure on professional and technical services. It is combined with net receipts from parking. The total of local authority 1985-86 budgets for the two items combined is £194 million. Recent trends suggest that in 1985-86 net receipts from parking will total about £45 million. So if local authorities' outturn is in line with their budgets, the figure for professional and technical services will be £239 million. The provision for professional and technical services in the Government's public expenditure plans for 1986-87 is £189 million.

Cash Limits

Mr. Page asked the Secretary of State for Transport what changes he proposes to make to the cash limits on class VI, votes 1 and 4.

Mr. Ridley: The cash limit for class VI, vote 1 is to be reduced by £4 million from £825,009,000 to £821,009,000 and the cash limit for class VI, vote 4 is to be reduced by £4 million from £108,945,000 to £104,945,000. These reductions will partly offset additional costs on class VI, vote 3, which are subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate. The balance of the public expenditure costs of the increase will be charged to the Reserve and will not add to the planning total of public expenditure.

The reduction on class VI, vote 1 is in respect of delayed payment of reimbursements to county councils of redundancy costs of ex-local authority staff of road construction sub-units and will not affect this year's road construction programme. The reduction on class VI, vote 4 is in respect of lower than expected costs of agency services and savings on salaries and other running costs.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Voluntary Bodies

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list in the Official Report those voluntary bodies and organisations assisted by his Department with grant aid in the last financial year for which figures are available, and the size of the grant so given.

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will outline the steps which his Department takes to ensure that grant-aid given to voluntary bodies and organisations, whether directly or indirectly, is not used for political purposes.

Dr. Boyson: All expenditure on Government grant-aid to voluntary bodies and organisations in Northern Ireland is subject to careful scrutiny to ensure that it is used for the genuine purpose of improving social, environmental or economic conditions in areas of need. There are special circumstances in Northern Ireland requiring particular care in administering grant-aid, and where it is considered that payment of grant would not be in the public interest, no grant is paid.

LEDU (Assistance)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about assistance to the Local Economic Development Unit from the youth enterprise scheme.

Dr. Boyson: The youth enterprise scheme, which is administered by Practical Action in Northern Ireland, is an excellent example of the private and public sectors pooling their resources to provide help for young people wishing to start their own businesses. The scheme is designed to create a more supportive environment for such young people by providing funding, equipment and professional advice. The Local Enterprise Development Unit, Northern Ireland's small firms agency, fully supports the initiative and is making available £300,000 over the next three years to assist the scheme on condition that this is matched on a pound-for-pound basis by the private sector.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Mink

Mr. Maclean asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the action he is taking to limit the destruction caused by mink.

Mrs. Fenner: Wild mink are not a significant agricultural pest, although they are predators of wildfowl, poultry, fisheries and game.

The Ministry provides specialist advice to occupiers and others on control methods and also loans traps free of charge.

Cash Limits

Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether it is proposed to change the cash limit on any departmental Vote for which he has responsibility.

Mr. Jopling: Yes. Following underspending on a number of services, the cash limit for class III, vote 4

(Other Agricultural and Food Services and Support for the Fishing Industry) is being reduced by £600,000 from £144,683,000 to £144,083,000 and that for class III, vote 5 (Departmental Research, Advisory Services and Administration) by £500,000 from £207,248,000 to £206,748,000. These reductions are in addition to the savings I anncunced on 12 December, at column 728, in reply to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) and together they will partly offset increased expenditure, subject to parliamentary approval, of £20,296,000 on class III vote 3 (Agricultural Support, Animal Health, Land Drainage and Flood Protection) which is not subject to a cash limit and for which a supplementary estimate will be presented to Parliament shortly. The balance of this increase not covered by offsetting savings will be charged to the Reserve, and there will therefore be no net addition to the planning total of public expenditure.

PRIME MINISTER

British Leyland

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Prime Minister what assessment Her Majesty's Government have made of the effect on (a) employment and (b) the United Kingdom manufacturing base of the possible sale of British Leyland divisions to United States companies.

The Prime Minister: The Government's aim is to secure a strong vehicle manufacturing base in the United Kingdom. Only efficient operating units producing competitive products which people at home and abroad want to buy will strengthen the manufacturing base and guarantee jobs in the long term.

EMPLOYMENT

Women

Mr. Holt asked the Paymaster General (1) how many women were in full-time employment as at 1 January in each of the years 1960, 1965, 1970, 1975, 1980 and 1985; (2) how many women were in part-time employment as at 1 January in each of the years 1960, 1965, 1970, 1975, 1980 and 1985.

Mr. Lang: The following table gives, for the December preceding each of the dates specified, the numbers of female employees in employment and of females in self employment in Great Britain. Figures are not available for January. Estimates of full-time and part-time female employees are not separately available for dates before 1971, and are available only for June between 1971 and 1977. Estimates of females in full-time and part-time self employment are not separately available.

n/a Not available.

* The Census of Employment shows 5,512 full time and 3,421 part time female employees in June 1974.

† Self employment figures prior to 1971 are not fully consistent with those for later years.

Rationalisation (Employment Effects)

Mr. Adley asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement on his assessment of the effect of rationalisation on employment.

Mr. Lang: Rationalisation which helps to improve efficiency and competitiveness helps also to generate wealth, and, ultimately, employment.

Local Enterprise Agencies

Mr. Leigh asked the Paymaster General how many local enterprise agencies have been established.

Mr. Trippier: There are currently 314 local enterprise agencies in the United Kingdom, of which 231 meet the requirements of the Finance Act 1982, which allows private sector sponsors tax relief on their contributions to such bodies.

Sunderland

Mr. Clay asked the Paymaster General what was the number of job vacancies registered at Sunderland jobcentres at the latest available date; and how many of these were (a) part-time, (b) situated outside the Sunderland travel-to-work area and (c) funded by community programme, or other special employment measures.

Mr. Lang: The number of vacancies (excluding those funded by special employment measures) registered at Sunderland jobcentre remaining unfilled on 3 January 1986 was 477, of which 53 were part-time (that is for fewer than 30 hours per week). In addition, there were 159 unfilled vacancies funded by special employment measures, of which 42 involved work for fewer than 35 hours per week.

The exact location of vacancies relating to travel-to-work area boundaries could be established only at disproportionate cost, but it is known that all vacancies registered at Sunderland jobcentre are in the Sunderland area.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what fresh proposals Her Majesty's Government intend to make on verification of nuclear tests and a comprehensive test ban treaty.

Mr. Renton: None. The United Kingdom tabled a paper on seismic monitoring for a comprehensive test ban at the conference on disarmament in July 1985. This followed two earlier United Kingdom papers. We are disappointed that these papers have not yet received due attention in what is a useful forum for discussion of these issues.

Mr. Raoul Wallenberg

Mr. Franks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has received any request from the Swedish Government for assistance in establishing the reason for the non-return of the body of Raoul Wallenberg after his reported death in a Soviet prison.

Mr. Renton: We have made it clear to the Swedish authorities that we stand ready to help them to establish with greater certainty what has happened to Raoul Wallenberg, and accordingly remain in contact with them on this subject. The Swedish Government have not, however, asked us for assistance in pursuing the particular question raised by my hon. Friend.

DEFENCE

Falkland Islands (Swimming Pool)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what cost estimates have been made for the proposed swimming pool at Mount Pleasant in the Falklands.

Mr. Stanley: If it is decided to build a swimming pool at Mount Pleasant, it is currently estimated that the cost will be somewhere between £1 million and £2 million depending upon the form of construction used and the specification.

Defence Arms Control Unit

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the funding of the Ministry of Defence defence arms control unit.

Mr. Stanley: I shall answer shortly.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Police Training

Mr. Anderson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to which countries Britain has provided training for police and special force personnel during 1985 (a) in Britain and (b) overseas; and what training is expected to be provided during 1986.

Mr. Raison: In 1985 Britain provided police training for the following countries:

(a) In Britain
Anguilla
Antigua
Australia
Bahamas
Bangladesh
Bahrain
Barbados
Belgium
Belize
Botswana
Brunei
British Virgin Islands
Cyprus
Canada
Denmark
Ethiopia
Egypt
France
Fiji
Gambia
Guyana
Gibraltar
Grenada
Hong Kong
India
Indonesia
Italy
Jamaica
Jordan
Kenya
Kiribati
Lesotho
Luxembourg
Malaysia
Maldives
Mauritius
Montserrat
Netherlands
Nepal
New Zealand
Nigeria
Oman
Portugal
Qatar
Saudi Arabia
Singapore
St. Helena
St. Vincent
Sri Lanka
Swaziland
Tonga
Tanzania
Uganda
United States of America
Vanuatu
West Germany
Yemen Arab Republic
Zambia
Zimbabwe

(b) Overseas
Anguilla
Antigua and Barbuda
Bangladesh
Bahamas
Belize
British Virgin Islands
Barbados
Cayman Islands
Dominica
Gambia
Grenada
Indonesia
Jamaica
Kenya
Kuwait
Lesotho
Malawi
Montserrat
Oman
Pakistan
Swaziland
St. Lucia
St. Kitts and Nevis
St. Vincent
Tanzania
Turks and Caicos Islands
Uganda
Vanuatu
Zambia

The training was arranged by a number of Government Departments, principally the ODA and the Home Office. Some of it was paid for by the British Government, for example under the aid programme, and some by the countries themselves.

It is not our practice to provide details of training for special force personnel.

For 1986 it is too early to say what police training is expected to be provided but the pattern is unlikly to be very different from 1985.

SCOTLAND

Sewerage

Mr. Robert C. Brown asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of houses in Scotland are connected to the public sewerage system; how this compares with other member states of the European Community; and how this compares with the United States of America.

Mr. Ancram: Information about the percentage of houses in Scotland connected to the public sewerage system is not available. It is however estimated that about 94 per cent. of the population of Scotland live in accommodation so connected. The other information requested is not held by the Scottish Development Department, but I would refer the hon. Member to the answer given yesterday by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing, Urban Affairs and Construction at the Department of the Environment.

Wages (Statistics)

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what figures he has on the number of people earning wages below supplementary benefit levels in Strathclyde.

Mr. Allan Stewart: This information is not available. Details of earnings in Strathclyde can be obtained from the "New Earnings Survey 1985", part E, available in the Library of the House, but this survey does not collect any information on household circumstances, and supplementary benefit levels cannot therefore be derived for comparative purposes.

Dementia

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the conclusions of the report on "Dementia in Scotland" produced by Scottish Action on Dementia, a copy of which has been forwarded to him.

Mr. Rifkind: I welcome the very recent publication of this report as a clear statement of what its authors see as the main needs of persons suffering from dementia and the pattern of services which they may require either at home or, where necessary, in residential care or in hospital. I shall certainly wish to give careful consideration to the recommendations addressed to me on the provision of health and social work services, finance, research and other matters.

Rates

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated income from non-domestic rates for each Scottish local authority in this financial year; and what level of uniform non-domestic rate poundage would produce the same total non-domestic rate income.

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows. The estimate is arrived at by multiplying the 1985-86 non-domestic rateable value figure for each authority by its rate poundage. The figures used are those in "Rating Review" published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (Scottish Branch) in August 1985. This estimate of rate income is overstated since relief on empty property, appeals and other factors will reduce the actual income received. On the same basis, a uniform rate poundage of 64·8p would produce the same total non-domestic rate income.

Cervical Screening

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the availability of a national cervical screening facility in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: Health boards already provide cervical cytology services in Scotland and, despite backlogs that have built up in one or two areas, these services are operating satisfactorily. There is no justification for setting up a national cervical screening facility in Scotland.

SDA and HIDB

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will detail all moneys which have been recouped from the Scottish Development Agency and the Highlands and Islands development board, respectively, for each financial year since 1980, stating in each case whether any sums involved relate to (a) profits realised through the sale of shareholdings or assets, (b) underspend from existing budgets at the time, and (c) any other sources; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: There have been no occasions on which the Highlands and Islands Development Board has paid moneys to the Exchequer. In cases where the board did not spend the budgeted amounts approved by Parliament or obtained receipts which were not used for higher than budgeted spending there would be a reduced need for payments of grant-in-aid by my Department to the board.

A similar position applies to the Scottish Development Agency in respect of expenditure and assets funded by grant-in-aid. In addition the agency may, for its industrial investment function, borrow money from the national loans fund and receive payments of public dividend capital. Repayments of NLF borrowings arise in the normal way and have been as follows:

	Principal £	Interest £
1980-81	751,721	1,321,959
1981-82	524,033	805,271
1982-83	525,727	1,088,364
1983-84	949,161	1,142,684
1984-85	3,580,015	1,197,457

The agency's Act has from the outset provided for the possibility of annual payments to the Secretary of State from the agency in consideration of public dividend capital received. No such payment has to date been made. The agency made one exceptional repayment of £532,494, in April 1980, as a consequence of a reclassification of that amount from public dividend capital to part of the agency's capital debt.

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairman or chief executive of the Scottish Development Agency; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Alan Stewart: My right hon. and learned Friend met the chairman and chief executive of the agency on Friday 17 January to discuss the agency's budgetary provision for the present financial year.

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairman of the Highlands and Islands Development Board; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and learned Friend met Mr. Cowan on 17 January 1986 to discuss budgetary provision for the present financial year.

Government Expenditure

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the Scottish commentary on the public expenditure White Paper: "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1986-87 to 1988-89", Cmnd. 9702.

Mr. Rifkind: My Department is issuing today "Public Expenditure to 1988-89: A Commentary on the Scotland Programme" which gives more information about the public expenditure within my responsibility. I have arranged for a copy to be sent to each right hon. and hon. Member representing a Scottish constituency and I shall be pleased to let any other hon. Member have a copy on request. Copies are also being placed in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

GATT

7. Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress on the proposed new general agreement on tariff and trade round.

Mr. Alan Clark: The contracting parties to GATT agreed unanimously on 28 November 1985 to set up a preparatory committee for a new round of multilateral trade negotiations. Ministers are expected to make a formal decision to launch the new negotiations at a special meeting planned for this September.

Competition Policy

11. Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he is satisfied that all sectors of business, in particular independent grocery retailers, are benefiting from his Department's policies of competition.

Mr. Butcher: The Government's competition policy is designed to create a climate in which enterprises are able to compete on the basis of their perception of the market opportunities available. This will benefit the consumer by leading to improved service and keener prices, and will make United Kingdom industry and commerce as a whole more prosperous and competitive.

General Electric and Plessey (Merger)

18. Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to receive the report of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the proposed merger of the General Electric Company and Plessey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission is due to make its report by 19 July.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

22. Mr. O'Brien asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he plans to make a statement on the current state of negotiations on the multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Negotiations in the GATT on renewal of the MFA are still at an early stage, and discussions in the Community on a mandate for the negotiations are continuing. It is too early to say whether we are likely to achieve our objectives as described by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 9 May 1985, but the Community has agreed that an extension of the MFA is needed.

33. Mr. James Lamond asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his policy towards the maintenance of an anti-surge mechanism in any renewed multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The anti-surge mechanism is one of a number of features of the present MFA which we, in conjunction with our Community partners, are examining in the negotiations on the renewal of the MFA. Our attitude to it will take account of the overall package on offer.

35. Mr. Dixon asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the Trades Union Congress textile committee concerning the renewal of the multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry met the Trades Union Congress textile committee on 24 January to discuss the renewal of the multi-fibre arrangement.

46. Mr. Haynes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to finalise the negotiating mandate in connection with the renewal of the multi-fibre arrangement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Council of Ministers agreed on 27 January that the Council should try to agree on a Community negotiating mandate before the end of February.

48. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he proposes to give special treatment to the poorest supplier countries in negotiations to renew the multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Alan Clark: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry announced on 9 May 1985, the Government are in favour of special treatment being given to the poorest supplier countries. The question of how such countries should be defined is still under discussion in the Community. In our view, the narrower the definition, the more favourable the treatment that could be given to such countries.

55. Mr. Jim Callaghan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals for social development he wants to see incorporated in any new multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I see no need to strengthen the existing references to social development in the multi-fibre arrangement.

60. Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the negotiations relating to the renewal of the multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Negotiations in the GATT on renewal of the MFA are still at an early stage, and discussions in the Community on a mandate for the negotiations are continuing. It is too early to say whether we are likely to achieve our objectives as described by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 9 May 1985, but the Community has agreed that an extension of the MFA is needed.

71. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is satisfied with progress being made in negotiations relating to the renewal of the multi-fibre arrangement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Negotiations in the GATT on renewal of the MFA are still at an early stage, and discussions in the Community on a mandate for the negotiations are continuing. It is too early to say whether we are likely to achieve our objectives as described by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 9 May 1985, but the Community has agreed that an extension of the MFA is needed.

24. Mr. Eastham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many representations he has received concerning the renewal of the multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I have received a very large number of representations from organisations representing employers and employees in the textile and clothing industries, consumers, importers, retailers, local authorities and individuals writing mainly on behalf of these interests or the development movement.

Textile and Clothing Industries

23. Mr. Stan Thorne asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest assessment of the contribution of the textile and clothing industries to total British exports.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The contribution of the textile and clothing industries to total United Kingdom exports is provisionally put at over £3 billion for 1985, representing nearly 4 per cent. of the total. These industries have maintained their percentage share of total exports in the last five years, despite strong competition in overseas markets.

68. Mr. Evans asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking to assist the British textile and clothing industries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The provision of specific Government aids to the textile and clothing industries is not permitted under present European Community policy. However, companies in these sectors can apply for assistance under the Department's national schemes of support and also through its regional schemes aimed at projects safeguarding and creating new jobs.

EC (Internal Market)

25. Mr. Ottaway asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on progress being made towards opening up the internal market within the Community.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Council adopted a number of measures in 1985 which will help remove barriers to trade in goods and services in the Community. The presidency action programme for 1986 lists more than a hundred further measures capable of adoption this year as part of the objective, agreed by successive European Councils, of completing the internal market by 1992.

Allied Lyons plc

26. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the result of his Department's consideration of the Elders IXL bid for Allied Lyons plc.

Mr. Channon: My right hon. and learned Friend, the former Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, announced the reference of this merger proposal to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on 6 December. The commission was given six months in which to report.

As I am sure my hon. Friend appreciates, it would not be appropriate for me to comment on the issues involved while the investigation is in progress.

Tin Industry

27. Mr. Hicks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action he is taking to resolve the current crisis in the tin industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Government are continuing to make every effort to secure an acceptable settlement of the International Tin Council's obligations and a return to orderly trading in tin.

65. Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current situation within the tin mining industry.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Government are continuing to make every effort to ensure a successful outcome to the present session of the International Tin Council. The priority is to secure a return to orderly trading in tin.

Rates

28. Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with the Confederation of British Industry and other employers' organisations on the effect of rates on industry's costs.

Mr. Butcher: My right hon. Friend looks forward to discussing the subject of rates with the CBI and other representative bodies, along with the level of earnings and other matters affecting industry's costs.

Steel Industry

29. Mr. James Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will meet the chairman of the British Steel Corporation to discuss the state of the steel industry.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. Friend intends to meet the chairman, as well as other leaders of major public and private sector industries, as soon as can conveniently be arranged.

Anglo-Soviet Trade Commission

30. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the work of the Anglo-Soviet Trade Commission.

Mr. Alan Clark: The thirteenth session of the British-Soviet Joint Commission met in London on 6 and 7 February. During the session there were useful discussions on matters relating to economic, industrial, scientific and technological co-operation between the two countries. On 6 February, Mr. Manzhulo, leader of the Soviet delegation, and I initialled a new long-term programme for economic and industrial co-operation for the period 1980 to 1990. This highlights a number of areas in which there are excellent opportunities for British business in the Soviet market. I am placing a copy of the long-term programme and the joint agreed communiqué in the Library.

Gainsborough

31. Mr. Leigh asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the amount of trade and industry grants given in the Gainsborough area since 1972.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Offers of regional selective financial assistance totalling £4·4 million have been made since 1 April 1982, of which £3·2 million has been paid.

Assistance under the Science and Technology Act is available nationally. Grants totalling £32,000 have been made to support innovative projects in the Gainsborough TTWA.

Gainsborough will also have been able to benefit from several other departmental schemes of assistance which have been available nationally from time to time, but records have not been kept on a detailed geographical basis.

Westland plc

32. Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement about government assistance in the future for the Westland helicopter company.

Mr. Pattie: Outstanding sums amounting to about £57 million remain to be paid to the company by my Department in launch aid and other assistance, principally in relation to the EH101 project. Westland will continue to be eligible for Government assistance in the future on the same basis as other aerospace companies in the private sector.

70. Mr. David Young asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on Government policy on the current position of the Westland helicopter company.

Mr. Pattie: An extraordinary general meeting of Westland shareholders is taking place today at which proposals for a financial reconstruction of the company are being considered.

Balance of Payment

34. Mr. Bright asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the latest balance of payments figures.

Mr. Alan Clark: In 1985, the current account of the balance of payments is provisionally estimated to have been in surplus by £3·5 billion—the sixth successive annual surplus.

Bankruptcies

36. Mr. McCartney asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will indicate how many bankruptcies there have been in the last 12 months.

47. Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the number of bankruptcies there have been in the last 12 months.

Mr. Butcher: The provisional figure for bankruptcies in England and Wales in 1985 was 6,672. Receiving orders and administration orders are included and the total is the net number of cases administered after consolidations and rescissions.

British Shipbuilders (Privatisation)

37. Mr. Maclean asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made in the privatisation of British Shipbuilders' warship building yards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: British Shipbuilders has already sold four of its warship building yards: Yarrow Shipbuilders Ltd; Vosper Thornycroft (UK) Ltd.; Brooke Marine Ltd.; and Swan Hunter Shipbuilders Ltd. Negotiations are well in hand for the sale of the others: Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Ltd., including its subsidiary Cammell Laird Ltd.; and Hall Russell Ltd.

National Economic Development Council

38. Mr. Caborn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when next he plans to attend the National Economic Development Council; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Channon: On 5 March. The agenda for the meeting has not yet been agreed.

Industrial Regeneration

39. Mr. Hoyle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to meet the Confederation of British Industry and Trades Union Congress to discuss the regeneration of British industry.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. Friend has accepted an invitation to meet the Confederation of British Industry on 26 February, when he expects to have a wide-ranging discussion. My right hon. Friend also meets both the CBI and Trades Union Congress regularly at meetings of the National Economic Development Council where matters relevant to the performance of British industry are frequently discussed.

Patents System

40. Mr. Andrew MacKay asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the operation of the patents system as it affects small businesses.

Mr. Pattie: Patent procedures in the United Kingdom are the same for all applicants and patentees whether they be large multinational companies, small businesses or private inventors.

Sir Robin Nicholson's Green Paper "Intellectural Property Rights and Innovation" (Cmnd. 9117) examined whether the existing systems for protecting intellectual property, including patents, are well suited to the national interest. It paid particular attention to the needs of small but enterprising businesses and considered whether any changes in the present systems might be of help to them.

A White Paper announcing the Government's overall response to the Green Paper will be published in the near future.

Civil Defence

41. Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects his study of the role of industry in civil defence planning to be completed.

Mr. Pattie: On current plans, it is hoped that the assessment of the essential requirements which industry could be called on to supply for civil defence purposes, and industry's capability to meet them, will be substantially complete by the middle of next year.

Manufactured Goods

42. Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will indicate the nature and size of the current deficit in the balance of trade in manufactured goods.

Mr. Alan Clark: In 1985, trade in manufactures was in deficit by £3·1 billion. At the same time, the current account as a whole recorded its sixth successive surplus.

Blank Audio Tape

43. Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has about the facilities which exist in the United Kingdom for the production of blank audio tape.

Mr. Pattie: Production facilities for blank audio tape in the United Kingdom are understood to be limited.

72. Mr. Parris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the quantity of blank audio tapes imported into the United Kingdom in each of the last five years.

Mr. Pattie: The total number of magnetic audio tapes imported into the United Kingdom in the last five years is:

	Million
1981	77·7
1982	71·9
1983	86·6
1984	81·0
1985	95·2

Note: The 1985 figure is given on a provisional basis.
Source: SITC/R2 item 898.31 (part) in the United Kingdom Overseas Trade Statistics.

Manufactures (Deficits)

44. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what deficits on trade in manufactures were experienced by the United Kingdom with Germany and Japan, respectively, in the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the 12 months from January to December 1985, the United Kingdom had provisional crude deficits in manufactures with the Federal Republic of Germany of £5·8 billion and with Japan of £3·2 billion.

Small Businesses

45. Mr. Richard Page asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on British Overseas Trade Board assistance given to promote the export prospects of smaller businesses.

Mr. Alan Clark: While assistance from the British Overseas Trade Board is available to all exporters, the board's services are generally designed to be of particular relevance to smaller exporters. In fact about 75 per cent. of firms using BOTB services have fewer than 200 employees.

54. Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of the accounting and audit requirements for small companies.

Mr. Butcher: My right hon. Friend will make a statement as soon as possible.

Trades Union Congress

49. Mr. Clelland asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he intends to meet the Trades Union Congress; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Channon: I have no immediate plans to do so, but of course I am always prepared to have such a meeting.

BSC (Phoenix 2)

50. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent discussions he has had with the chairman of British Steel Corporation regarding the progress of Phoenix 2; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. Friend has not yet had an opportunity to meet the chairman of the British Steel Corporation.

City Fraud

51. Mr. Yeo asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received regarding fraud in the City.

Mr. Butcher: The Department of Trade and Industry has received a number of representations from a variety of organisations and individuals.

Confederation of British Industry

52. Mr. Fisher asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to meet the Confederation of British Industry; and what matters will be discussed.

67. Mr. Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the Confederation of British Industry; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Butcher: My right hon. Friend has accepted an invitation to meet the Confederation of British Industry on 26 February, when he expects to have a wide-ranging discussion. My right hon. Friend also meets the CBI regularly at meetings of the National Economic Development Council. The agenda for the next meeting has not yet been agreed.

Copyright Law

53. Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received about the Green Paper relating to copyright law; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The Government have received many representations in response to the publication in February 1985 of the Green Paper "The Recording and Rental of Audio and Video Copyright Material" (Cmnd. 9445). Those making representations included copyright owners and performers; manufacturers and importers of recording equipment and blank recording tape; consumer organisations; educationists; and bodies working on behalf of the blind. Our conclusions on the issues raised in the Green Paper will be announced in a White Paper dealing with the whole of copyright law which is now in the final stages of preparation.

56. Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to publish the White Paper on recording and rental of audio and video copyright material.

Mr. Pattie: A White Paper dealing with copyright law is in the final stages of preparation. It will incorporate our conclusions in the areas of recording and rental of audio and video copyright material.

59. Mr. Wainwright asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he now expects to publish the White Paper on copyright law.

Mr. Pattie: A White Paper dealing with copyright law is in the final stages of preparation and I hope that publication will not be long delayed.

Scandinavia

57. Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's trading prospects with Scandinavia.

Mr. Alan Clark: We have excellent trading relations with the Nordic countries (Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Finland and Iceland), and United Kingdom firms delivered some £6,300 million of exports to those markets in 1985. I believe that they will offer continuing opportunities to United Kingdom exporters, and my Department and the British Overseas Trade Board are shortly embarking on a special campaign to highlight these.

Industry Year

58. Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what contribution his Department is making to Industry Year.

Mr. Butcher: The Department of Trade and Industry fully supports the designation of 1986 as Industry Year by the Royal Society for the encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce. It is contributing half the total central administrative costs of the initiative. The Department has also provided or funded secondees to help run the campaign and funded or supported Industry Year activities run by other organisations. The Department has launched new schemes for Industry Year, such as the mini-enterprise in schools project, and is linking and enhancing existing activities. Much existing departmental assistance to industry is contributing to the Industry Year objectives. Departmental Ministers are taking every opportunity to speak on the themes of Industry Year.

New Companies (Scotland)

61. Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many new companies were registered in Scotland during 1985.

Mr. Butcher: During 1985, a total of 5,417 new companies were registered in Scotland.

Manufacturing Output

62. Mr. Knox asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the most recent figure for output in manufacturing industry; and how this compares with the figure for the same month six years ago.

Mr. Alan Clark: The index of production for manufacturing industry in the three months up to November 1985 stood at 105, based on 1980 equal to 100. This is 3 per cent. lower than for the corresponding period in 1979.

Vauxhall Motors

63. Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met representatives of Vauxhall Motors, Luton; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Butcher: My right hon. Friend has not met representatives of Vauxhall Motors since assuming his duties as Secretary of State. My right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Brittan) met the chairman of Vauxhall Motors on 3 December 1985, however, for a general discussion about Vauxhall's future plans in the United Kingdom. During the meeting, Vauxhall announced plans for investment of £8·7 million at its Ellesmere Port plant, creating 600 jobs and boosting output to enable 64 per cent. of its projected 1986 domestic sales to be met from United Kingdom production. It also announced a 1986 United Kingdom content target of 60 per cent. for those vehicles.

Advanced Technology

64. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the application of advanced technology by manufacturing firms.

Mr. Butcher: In 1984, the last year for which complete outturn figures were available, investment in manufacturing industry amounted to £6·4 billion at 1980 prices and it is expected that the outturn for 1985 will be nearly £6·8 billion at 1980 prices, an increase of 6 per cent. above the level for 1984. The amount of investment in advanced technology is included in these figures but is not collected separately.

Some indication of investment in the application of advanced technology in engineering manufacture is given by a survey showing that the installed base of computers, software and hardware, for engineering was £900 million in 1985, an increase of 100 per cent. over 1984. A survey on the use of microelectronics estimated that 47 per cent. of manufacturing firms were using this technology in their products and processes in 1983.

Insurance and Financial Services

66. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek to introduce new proposals to extend competition in insurance and financial services throughout the European Economic Community.

Mr. Butcher: It is primarily for the Commission, not for individual member states, to make proposals. The United Kingdom fully supports the establishment of a genuinely common market in insurance and other financial services, and we hope that rapid progress can now be made in accordance with the decisions of the Milan summit in June 1985.

British Steel Corporation

69. Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made toward returning the British Steel Corporation to profitability; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Butcher: Excluding the cost of the miners' strike, the corporation made a profit in 1984-85, after interest and before exceptional items, of £40 million. The comparable figure for 1979-80 was a loss of £538 million. This is an impressive recovery, and the strategy announced last August points the way to sustained profitability for BSC.

I am now able to inform the house that BSCs external financing limit for 1985-86 is being increased from £360 million to £414 million. This will enable BSC to implement the decisions announced last August.

Inmos

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take any steps to prevent ownership of Inmos passing outside European hands.

Mr. Butcher: Control of Inmos now rests in the private sector with Thorn-EMI. The future ownership of this subsidiary is a matter for Thorn-EMI, not the Government.

Electromagnetic Radiation

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information is available to his Department on the risks of electromagnetic radiation to computer security identified by the Netherlands postal and telephone authority; and if he will place copies in the Library.

Mr. Butcher: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to his previous question on Monday 10 February at column 356.

Departmental Papers (Access)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether there are any restrictions on access by him to papers of previous Secretaries of State for Trade and Industry in the present Administration: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: No.

Systime plc

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will refer the proposed takeover by DEC of Systime plc, Leeds, to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1986]: The proposed takeover by DEC of part of the operations of Systime plc does not qualify under the provisions of section 64 of the Fair Trading Act for reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission. To qualify for investigation under the Act, a merger or proposed merger must either create or enhance a market share of 25 per cent. or more or involve a target company with assets of over £30 million. Neither of these criteria was satisfied in this case.

Daya Nuclear Power Plant

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry why officials of banks involved in the financing of the Daya nuclear power plant have been required to sign a declaration under the Official Secrets Act.

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1986]: Non-civil servants given access to official information are bound by the Official Secrets Act. In this case, because of the extent of Government involvement in negotiations, the sensitivity of relations with the French and Chinese Governments, and the need for close liaison between the Government and the banks, it was decided that the bankers most closely associated with the project should sign a declaration under the Act.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Inflation

Mr. Leigh asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current rate of inflation.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Over the 12 months to December 1985, the retail prices index increased by 5·7 per cent.

Interest Rates

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the implications for the economy of the recent level of interest rates.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The level of interest rates is only one of the factors affecting the economy. This year we expect the economy to continue the steady growth that we have seen for the past five years.

Mr. Bruce asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the United Kingdom's present position with regard to the level of interest rates in the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development league tables; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Interest rates in several OECD countries are higher than in the United Kingdom.

Exchange Rate

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the exchange rate.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The sterling index closed at 74·2 on 11 February 1986.

Mr. Bruce asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the effects on the economy of recent levels of the deutschmark/sterling exchange rates.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The effects of the exchange rate of any currency against the pound depend on how long that particular exchange rate is sustained, on the pattern of other exchange rates and on the reaction of prices, wages and interest rates in both countries.

Unincorporated Businesses

Mr. Watts asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the number of new unincorporated businesses which made income tax returns for the first time in respect of each of the last three financial years; and what were the related tax yields in aggregate for each of those years.

Mr. Moore: I regret that records of the returns received from unincorporated businesses are not maintained in a form which would enable those made for the first time to be distinguished.

Governor of the Bank of England

Mr. Livsey asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Governor of the Bank of England; and what was discussed.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) on 16 January 1986, at column 649.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Thurnham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received advocating the abolition of stamp duty on all stock transfers.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I have received 16 such representations.

North Sea Oil Revenue

Mr. David Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will give an approximate estimate of likely total North sea oil revenues for 1986-87 on the assumption of a crude oil price per barrel of $10, $15, $20 and $25, on the basis of an exchange rate of $1·35 to the pound; and whether he will give the same figures on the basis of $1·30, $1·25 and $1·20 to the pound.

Mr. Moore: A new forecast of North sea revenues for 1986-87 will be published at Budget time.

Education Fees

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation to make fees paid by individuals for continuing education tax-deductible; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget statement.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Board and Lodging

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what instructions he has given to his headquarters staff, division SB3C, on the administration of the new exceptional hardship exemption in the supplementary benefit board and lodging regulations; and whether he will place a copy of those instructions in the Library.

Mr. Newton: No instructions incorporating hard and fast rules have been issued for the operation of the discretionary power to which the hon. Member refers. The discretionary exemption can only be administered properly after taking account of the relevant circumstances in each individual case. Indeed, to do otherwise would be inconsistent with the legal basis for the discretion. The first consideration in every case is whether the claimant's circumstances in fact qualify him for exemption under the extensive list of exemptions specified in the regulations. Beyond that, a range of factors is considered, including the special reasons advanced by the claimant, or on his behalf, the personal circumstances of the claimant as they affect the need for board and lodging accommodation in the particular locality, the character of the accommodation concerned and any alternative options available to the claimant.

Social Security (Appeals)

Mr. Harvey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is his practice regarding intervening when a statement of grounds in an appeal under section 93 of the Social Security Act is identical to the original statement of grounds in his Department's decision, although new evidence has been presented at that appeal and although the statute requires that any opinion previously expressed is ignored.

Mr. Major: An intervention by the Secretary of State may not be made in respect of the content of a statement of grounds issued pursuant to regulation 14 of the Social Security (Adjudication) Regulations 1984. I assume that my hon. Friend has a specific case in mind, and if the details are provided I will write to him.

Mrs. Gillian Stringer

Mr. Pawsey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letters of 12 November and 2 January referring to Mrs. Gillian Stringer of Rugby.

Mr. Major: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 10 February.

Generic Drugs

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to ensure that all generic medicines are labelled with their country of origin.

Mr. Hayhoe: The inclusion of this information on labels is not considered necessary. For any medicinal product, including a generic product, to be marketed in the United Kingdom, the Department of Health and Social Security as the Medicines Act licensing authority has to be satisfied that the product is safe, efficacious and of good quality under the Medicines Act 1968. This requirement applies irrespective of the country of origin. The licensing authority also has to be satisfied that the product has been manufactured to acceptable standards under United Kingdom (or European Community) licensing arrangements.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will provide a breakdown of the number of social security claimants in Leyton and Leytonstone at the latest date for which figures are available and at the comparable date in each year since 1979 broken down by pensioners aged 80 years and over, pensioners aged 60 to 79 years, sick and disabled, one-parent families, low-paid families, unemployed families, single people, childless couples, widows and others.

Mr. Major: The London postal districts of Leyton and Leytonstone are covered by the Department's office at Leytonstone although the boundaries are not conterminous.

Figures of people receiving supplementary benefit from that office at December 1985—the latest available—and at comparable dates in the years since 1980 — the earliest available—are available only in the following form:

	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
Persons under pension age excluding the unemployed	1,295	1,514	1,773	2,097	2,527	2,594
Unemployed persons	1,483	2,814	3,421	3,642	3,765	4,084
Persons over pension age	3,545	3,620	3,625	3,316	3,016	3,301

Cot Deaths

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if any research into cot deaths is being undertaken by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The Department funded a major research project into post-neonatal mortality. The report of the study, which was co-ordinated by Professor Knowelden, was published in January 1985 and was followed by a conference to promote a full discussion of the issues raised.

No further research into the sudden infant death syndrome (cot death) is currently being funded by the Department. We are, however, pursuing a number of recommendations resulting from the Knowelden report. Details were outlined in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Halifax (Mr. Galley) on 11 February. We have also expressed our concern to the Medical Research Council about the importance of further research into finding the cause of infant deaths for which full post mortems offer no explanation.

Tobacco Advertising

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many representations he has received from the medical profession and the voluntary organisations on the voluntary agreements on tobacco advertising and health warnings; how many meetings he has had with them; and how many meetings he has had with the tobacco industry since October 1985.

Mr. Whitney: Thirty-five written representations have been received from health interests since July. Ministers have met the chairman and officers of the Health Education Council. Five meetings with tobacco industry representatives have been held at ministerial or official level since October, and further meetings are planned.

Home Help

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will include in social security benefit payments a sum to cover the costs of home help provision.

Mr. Newton: We have no plans to change the long-standing position that payments are not made where the home help is provided by a local authority. Local authorities have powers to waive charges for such provision in the case of people with low incomes, including people in receipt of supplementary benefit. There is provision in the supplementary benefit scheme to allow additional benefit for the cost of essential domestic help if it is not provided by a local authority.

Artificial Limbs

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many complaints his Department has received about ill-fitting artificial limbs for each year since 1979.

Mr. Newton: The number of complaints about ill-fitting limbs referred to Ministers is as follows:

	Number
1979	5
1980	6
1981	2
1982	3
1983	6
1984	5
1985	8

No record is kept centrally of complaints made direct to artificial limb and appliance centres.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what checks are undertaken by his Department on the standard of work carried out by prosthetists.

Mr. Newton: The supervision of prosthetic standards is one of the responsibilities of medical officers employed in the aritificial limb service in England. They allocate each patient to a particular limb contractor, and examine new limbs and sockets to ensure that they conform to the prescription and are an accurate and comfortable fit before delivery is accepted.

Frimley Park Hospital

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the average time patients have to wait for an orthopaedic operation at Frimley park hospital;

(2) what is the longest time a patient is now waiting for an orthopaedic operation at Frimley park hospital.

Mr. Whitney: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member the information he seeks. Reliable estimates for individual hospitals cannot be made from the sample information held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to write to the chairman of the West Surrey and North East Hampshire district health authority who may be able to provide the information requested.

Kidney Units

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list newly established units for the provision of dialysis for patients suffering from end stage renal disease which first treated patients in 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985 and those planned to start treatment in 1986 and 1987.

Mr. Whitney: The European Dialysis and Transplant Association received its first information on patients being accepted for treatment for end stage renal failure from the following units in the years shown:

	Unit
1982	Shrewsbury
1983	Kings Lynn
1984	Rochester
1985	Preston

We are also aware of a number of minimal care dialysis units which opened during these years but which submit information through the renal units with which they are associated. We expect that further new units will be established in 1986 and 1987, but this is a matter for the health authorities concerned.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will monitor centrally the impact of the establishment of new units for the provision of dialysis to patients with end stage renal disease in order to assess the speed with which the treatment levels in given regional health authorities can be brought into line with the guidelines set by him.

Mr. Whitney: The number of new patients accepted for treatment for end stage renal failure in each region is reviewed annually and the region's progress in meeting its agreed target is assessed; this review takes into account the numbers of patients accepted for treatment in new units.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make available to regional health authorities in England the results of the programme for the expansion of the provision of dialysis for patients with end stage renal disease in Wales.

Mr. Whitney: I understand that two subsidiary renal units were established at Carmarthen and Bangor in 1985 as part of the programme for expanding services for patients with end stage renal failure in Wales, and that the performance of these units is being evaluated over a three-year period. I will ask my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales to keep me informed of the findings of this evaluation, and will make any relevant information available to regional health authorities.

Mr. Carter-Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has information available at sub-regional level, or on a district health authority basis, on the acceptance of patients on programmes for the treatment of end stage renal disease.

Mr. Whitney: The European Dialysis and Transplant Association is able to provide information on the numbers of patients accepted for treatment for end stage renal failure by each renal unit; I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Oxford, West and Abingdon (Mr. Patten) to the hon. Member for Truro (Mr. Penhaligon) on 25 June 1985 at columns 378-82. Information is not collected on the district health authorities within which the patients reside.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) whether the quota system introduced by the Lancashire ambulance service conforms with the requirements of circular HC(78)45 on "Ambulance Services: Operational Control and Use";

(2) whether he has received any representations regarding the introduction of a quota system by Lancashire ambulance service;

(3) if he will investigate whether the Preston health authority in introducing a quota system for the Lancashire ambulance service has acted in accordance with paragraph 19 of the Community Health Council's regulations 1985 statutory instrument 304/1985, in respect of notifying community health councils in Lancashire of the substantial variation in the provision of ambulance services.

Mr. Whitney: I understand Preston health authority is trying to control unnecessary ambulance journeys. Where there is medical need for transport by the ambulance service it is being provided. This meets the requirements of HC(78)45 and does not appear to represent a substantial variation in service. We have received no representations about this.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services according to the most recent available figures how many claimants are in receipt of unemployment benefit at less than the full rate (a) by sex and martial status and (b) where married, by sex and employment status of spouse.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Single Payments

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services for the most recent year for which figures are available (a) how many attended appeals were made to the supplementary benefit appeals tribunal regarding single payments for exceptional needs, (b) how many of those appeals were decided in the claimant's favour, (c) how many attended appeals were made by women, (d) how many of these appeals were decided in the claimant's favour, (e) how many attended appeals were made by lone parents, (f) how many of these appeals were decided in the claimant's favour, (g) how many attended appeals were made by lone mothers and (h) how many of these appeals were decided in the claimant's favour.

Mr. Major: A revised statistical system for social security appeals was introduced in April 1984 and the information following is therefore in respect of the nine months period from 1 April to 31 December 1984. Information is not available on the sex or marital status of the appellant. Over the nine months period it is estimated that there were some 2·6 million decisions made on claims for supplementary benefit single payments of which some 2·1 million resulted in an award. In the same period there were 27,930 appeals heard and decided on single payment questions. The pattern of representation and attendance is shown in the table.

Social security appeals on supplementary benefit single payments

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many couples there are without dependent children where the husband is in receipt of supplementary benefit and the wife is employed 24 or more hours per week; and how many couples there are without dependent children where the wife is in receipt of supplementary benefit and the husband is employed 24 or more hours per week.

Mr. Major: It is regretted that the information is not available.

Social Security Reform

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will authorise the outside advisers who contributed to his reviews of the social security system to publish their advice.

Mr. Newton: The outside members of the review teams were appointed to advise Ministers, and it would not be appropriate for them to discuss the teams' proceedings. They are free to comment on the Government's published proposals; and the report of the housing benefit review team, which was composed entirely of outside members, has been published.

Rehabilitation Centre (Sale)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about the proposed sale, of an existing operational National Health Service rehabilitation centre in the Thames valley area to Private Medical Centres plc; why the sale of such a centre is being proposed; how many such centres exist in the National Health Service; what is the current level of demand for these services within the National Health Service; and what is the price being sought for this centre.

Mr. Hayhoe: I understand that East Berkshire district health authority will be considering options for the future of the rehabilitation centre at Farnham park shortly, but that the options currently under consideration do not include sale in the short term. The hon. Member might like to approach the chairman of the authority direct for any further information.

In England, 12 such rehabilitation centres exist, together with six miners' rehabilitation centres.

I regret that detailed information on the current level of demand is not held centrally.

Occupational Pensions

Mr. Powley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps he has taken to inform members of occupational pension schemes of their new rights under the Social Security Act 1985.

Mr. Major: Advertisements advising employees who are changing jobs that they now have the right to transfer their accrued pension benefits to a new employer's scheme, or to use them to buy an insurance policy or annuity to provide themselves with a pension, were placed in the national press from 12 January. An information sheet providing employees with further information which is available from my Department has attracted considerable interest and we have so far issued some 12,000 copies. I am placing a copy of this information sheet in the Library.

Local Offices (Brent)

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the approximate turnover of staff in grades of clerical assistant and clerical officers, respectively, in social security offices open to the public covering the Brent, East constituency, together with maximum and minimum rates of turnover naming the offices concerned.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986]: Following is the information for the year ending 31 December 1985.

Turnover is defined as those staff who leave the Department (including those who retire) change offices within the Department or are promoted within an office. The number of staff who leave the Department (including those who retire) is lower. Both sets of figures are set out in the table.

Supplementary Benefits Handbook

Mr. Terry Davis asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects that the new supplementary benefits handbook taking account of changes in benefit rates in November 1985 will be published.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 3 February 1986, c. 89]: It has not been the practice automatically to produce a new edition of the handbook each year; none was published for the years 1971, 1973, 1975, 1978 or 1981. Taking account of various factors, including the greater frequency of upratings in 1985-87, it is not proposed to publish a new edition giving the November 1985 rates. Further editions of a handbook will be considered in the light of the changes proposed in the current Social Security Bill.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Magistrates

Mr. Hardy asked the Attorney-General how many people serve as magistrates at the present time; what was the average number of sessions each served in 1985; and what were the figures five years ago.

The Attorney-General: On 1 January 1986 in England and Wales 16,133 men and 11,554 women were serving as active justices of the peace. In January 1981 the figures were respectively 15,951 and 9,484. The average attendances in 1980 and 1985 could not be ascertained except at disproportionate cost, but an estimate would be between 35 and 40 half-day sittings in each of the two years.

Witnesses (Oath)

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Attorney-General what representations have been received by the Law Officers' Department from churchmen and others concerning the proposed change in the ancient form of oath taken by witnesses before giving evidence in court; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: I have received no representations on this matter.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Dr. Cunningham asked the Paymaster General if he will give a detailed breakdown of unemployed claimants in the Copeland parliamentary constituency using the most recent figures of 9 January, analysed by sex and by the age of the unemployed and duration of unemployment.

Mr. Lang: Following is the requested information, which is available in the Library.

Textile and Clothing Industries

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Paymaster General what information he has concerning the number of people employed in the textiles and clothing industries in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available; and if he will give comparable figures for each month in the last five years.

Mr. Lang: The Department's employment statistics for the textiles and clothing industries are produced on a quarterly basis and cannot be expressed in precisely the manner required.

The latest available figures for employees in employment in the textiles (including man-made fibres) and clothing industries in Great Britain during the last five years are as follows:

Youth Training Scheme

Mr. Rooker asked the Paymaster General if, pursuant to his reply of 22 November, Official Report, column 326, he will publish the latest figures for the ethnic origins of trainees recruited to the YTS by the construction industry training board, indicating what percentage each is of the total.

Mr. Trippier: The Manpower Services Commission is currently considering the extent to which information provided by managing agents and sponsors on the ethnic group of trainees on YTS can be made available. I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as I am in a position to do so.

ENERGY

NATO

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will state the post, rank and responsibilities of the official who represents the United Kingdom on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation petroleum planning committee; how often this committee meets; and where it meets.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The post is section head, oil contingency planning, which has the rank of grade 7. The committee meets twice a year in Brussels.

PRIME MINISTER

Government Objectives

Mr. Soames asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement outlining the objectives of Her Majesty's Government for the rest of the current Parliament.

The Prime Minister: The heart of our strategy is the continued reduction in inflation as a basis for sustained economic growth, built on sound financial foundations. Our aim is to hold public expenditure broadly constant in real terms and to reduce Government borrowing and the proportion of national income taken by taxation. We will continue to pursue measures to encourage initiative and enterprise. We shall remove barriers to effective competition and to the better working of markets. We shall seek to improve incentives. We shall continue to encourage the small business sector. We shall continue to pursue further measures of privatisation in order to improve the efficiency of the industries concerned and to encourage wider share ownership. It is only by pursuing these policies that we shall secure the continued substantial growth in new jobs which has occurred since 1983.

We shall continue to uphold the rule of law. We shall pursue our proposals to tighten up the law on public order and to counter the evil traffic in drugs. We shall take all necessary action to deal with fraud. We shall introduce a comprehensive framework for the supervision of the rapidly changing financial sector.

We shall continue to encourage wider home ownership. We shall implement major reforms in the social security system. We shall continue to protect retirement pensions and linked long-term benefits against inflation. We shall also develop our proposals for a radical recasting of the system of local government finance and the eventual abolition of the domestic rate. We shall be publishing a Green Paper on the reform of personal taxation. We shall continue to seek ways of improving the educational system through the extension of parental choice and through the improvement of standards in the system. We shall continue to develop the NHS to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the service to patients. We will continue to improve the efficiency of the public services, taking Government out of those areas which are best left to others. In Northern Ireland, we shall continue to develop and build upon the Anglo-Irish agreement signed in November. We shall remain ready to listen to and consider the views of all constitutional politicians.

We shall continue to play a full and active part in the NATO alliance as the best means of preserving the peace. We shall also play a full part in the further development of the European Community.

We are well on course, but there is much left to do. I am fully confident that we will carry forward our policies to a lasting and successful conclusion.

Westland plc (Disciplinary Proceedings)

Q42. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if any disciplinary action is to be taken against (a) Mr. Bernard Ingham, (b) Mr. Charles Powell and (c) Ms. Colette Bowe in relation to their conduct during the Westland affair; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Hancock) on 31 January, at columns 639-40.

Engagements

Mr. Haynes asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 13 February.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 13 February.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 13 February.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 13 February.

Mr. Marlow asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 13 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty the Queen.

THE ARTS

Local Government Reform

Mr. Alton asked the Minister for the Arts if, in the light of the breakdown of negotiations between the successor authorities to the Merseyside metropolitan council, he will make a statement on the future of Liverpool Empire theatre and the Royal Liverpool philharmonic hall.

Mr. Luce: Negotiations about the Philharmonic Hall are continuing between the Arts Council and successor authorities. The Arts Council is discussing ways in which the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra can be so funded that it can pay an economic rent for its use of the hall. The Arts Council hopes that, with the co-operation of the successor authorities, this will enable the funding of the hall intself to be maintained.

The tenancy of the Empire theatre is to be taken over by a major leisure group and its immediate future is not in doubt.

National Maritime Museum

5. Mr. Faulds asked the Minister for the Arts what information he has on the number of visitors to the National Maritime museum who made payments for admission during the year ended 31 December 1985.

Mr. Luce: The number of visitors who paid for admission to the National Maritime museum main building or the Old Royal Observatory or both during 1985 is estimated at 453,237. This figure is based on an analysis of tickets sold, using the following conventions:

i. each family ticket sold represents four visitors;
ii. each local resident's annual ticket sold represents one visitor;
iii. each school's annual ticket sold represents 30 visitors;
iv. each of the 229,516 combined tickets sold, giving admission to the main building and the observatory, is counted as one visitor only.

In addition, it is estimated that there were around 147,000 non-paying repeat visits and free admissions during 1985.

I understand also that, for the nine months in 1984 during which admission charges operated (1 April to 31 December), the number of paying visitors estimated on the above conventions was 361,840. The corresponding figure for the same nine months in 1985 was 401,135, representing an increase of some 11 per cent.

Merseyside (Trustee Body)

Mr. Thornton asked the Minister for the Arts whether he is in a position to announce the creation and composition of the new national trustee body for Merseyside to be established under section 46 of the Local Government Act 1985.

Mr. Luce: Yesterday Her Majesty in Council was pleased to approve the order to establish the board of trustees for the national museums and galleries on Merseyside. The order has today been laid before both Houses of Parliament and will come into effect on 20 February. I have appointed to date 13 trustees, with Sir Leslie Young, CBE, DL as chairman. The other trustees are the Duke of Westminster, Mr. Nicholas Barber, Professor Robert Berry, Professor Anthony Bradshaw, Mr. George Holt, Professor Michael Kauffman, Councillor John Last, Mr. Brian Redhead, Councillor Benjamin Shaw, Mr. Garry Thomson, Lady Marina Vaizey and Sir David Wilson. Further appointments will be made in due course.

Cash Limits

Mr. Soames asked the Minister for the Arts if he intends to change any of the cash limits for which he is responsible.

Mr. Luce: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary spring Supplementary Estimate, I propose to increase the 1985-86 cash limit on class V, vote 10, (Arts, the Arts Council and other institutions, the National Heritage and the Government Arts Collection) by £520,000 from £129,677,000 to £130,197,000. The increase is required in respect of items being accepted in lieu of tax, in accordance with my predecessor's statement to Parliament on 26 July 1985. The increase will be charged to the reserve and will not, therefore, add to the planning total of public expenditure.

South Bank

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister for the Arts if he was consulted over the salaries being offered for the Arts Council's new posts of director of arts co-ordination, controller of marketing and resources, controller of touring and controller of planning.

Mr. Luce [pursuant to his reply, 10 February 1986, c. 380]: Yes. The Arts Council consulted my office about these posts and I have been kept informed of developments.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Graduates (Earnings)

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has available to him about the earnings of those with postgraduate qualifications immediately after acquiring the qualification as compared with the earnings of those with first degrees.

Mr. Walden: Detailed information on the earnings of first degree and higher degree graduates immediately after graduation is not available. Data from the general household survey over the period 1979 to 1983 suggests that men with higher degrees aged 25 to 29 earned some 3 per cent. more than those with first degrees of the same age. Numbers in this sample survey are insufficient to quote reliable estimates for actual earnings. Similar figures for women would not be reliable because of small sample numbers and the effect of part-time working.

Gordon Secondary School, Kent

Mr. John Fraser asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will publish his decision about the prospective closure of Gordon secondary schools in Gravesend, Kent.

Sir Keith Joseph: I expect to announce my decision on this proposal soon.

Teachers (Wolverhampton)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many teachers employed in secondary schools covered by the Wolverhampton education authority have left their posts during the last seven years; and if he will list the average pupil-teacher ratios in secondary schools in that area in each year during the same period.

Mr. Dunn: The numbers of teachers who left secondary schools in Wolverhampton are not readily available from central records. The pupil-teacher ratios in the secondary sector over the past seven years were as follows:

Pupil-teacher ratio within maintained secondary schools in Wolverhampton

January of each year	Pupil-teacher ratio
1979	15·6
1980	15·6
1981	15·0
1982	15·2
1983	15·2
1984	14·8
1985	14·9

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Falkland Islands

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list costs per head of health service provision in the Falkland Islands in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Eggar: In the financial year ended 30 June 1984, the latest period for which figures are available, costs of health service provision in the Falklands were approximately £134 per head.

Gulf of Sirte

Mr. Cyril D. Townsend asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards Libya's claims over the Gulf of Sirte; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We, in common with our EC partners, take the view that the Libyan claim to sovereignty over the whole of the waters of the Gulf of Sirte is contrary to international law. In a Note delivered to the Libyan authorities on behalf of the member states of the European Community on 24 September 1985 the presidency made this clear following recent Libyan regulations on merchant shipping.

SCOTLAND

Labour Statistics (Strathclyde)

Mr. Allen Adams asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many registered unemployed there were in Strathclyde in January;

(2) how many job vacancies there were in jobcentres in Strathclyde in January.

Mr. Allan Stewart: The information is available in the Library.

Teachers (Dispute)

Mr. Canavan asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about his meeting with Church leaders on 10 February about finding a solution to the teachers' dispute.

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what specific proposals were discussed with representatives of Scottish churches on Monday 10 February relating to the current teachers' dispute; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: My right hon. and learned Friend had a useful exchange of views with representatives of the Church of Scotland and the Roman Catholic Church on 10 February. He emphasised that any final package had to deal with teachers' duties and conditions of service as well as pay. He would not lay down preconditions for the outcome of the negotiations and recognised that a balance had to be struck between the aspirations of both sides if an early end to the dispute was to be found. He noted that the employers and the majority of the teachers' unions in England and Wales had been able to reach agreement on the basis of Government resources that were equally available to teachers in Scotland; and he expressed the hope that negotiations between teachers and employers would now begin on the basis of the resources available.

College Closures and Mergers

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, following the publication of the report of the Scottish Tertiary Education Advisory Council, he will give estimated figures to show the saving which would result if the Scottish Tertiary Education Advisory Council's recommendation to close further colleges of education in Scotland was implemented.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Since the report makes no specific recommendation as to which colleges might close, it does not provide any basis for estimating prospective savings.

Mr. Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will specify what savings were made by closing (a) Callender Park college of education, (b) Hamilton college of education and by the merger of Notre Dame and Craiglockhart colleges into one college.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Farmers (Financial Assistance)

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if the time scale of the payment of weather aid and hill livestock compensatory allowance remains as indicated in November 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Yes. Payment of weather aid commenced on 20 December and by tomorrow £6·6 million will have been paid out to 18,300 applicants. Hill livestock compensatory allowance payments commenced on 27 January, one month earlier than in 1985. By tomorrow, £15 million will have been paid out to 7,350 applicants.

In addition, £7·2 million was paid out in sheep annual premium to 15,000 applicants on 17 December.

Payments on such a scale in under nine weeks represent a very considerable achievement by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland, on which I commend it.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if the special weather and enhanced hill livestock compensatory allowance announced in 1985 take account of the supplement introduced in 1984 which was payable to farmers in the Highlands and Islands Development Board areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Following the announcement of new hill livestock compensatory allowances (HLCAs) for 1986, revised Highlands and Islands Development Board (HIDB) supplements were announced on 19 December 1985, at columnn 294, by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Scotland. Adverse weather aid payments are entirely unrelated to HLCAs and the rates of payment are the same within and outwith the HIDB area.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the real overall value of the special weather aid and enhanced hill livestock compensatory allowance announced in 1985 after taking account of delays in payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State announced on 28 November that the estimated value of the adverse weather aid in Scotland was £7·7 million; and that the increase in hill livestock compensatory allowances would be worth about £5 million in a full year, bringing the total value of these allowances to over £43 million. He undertook to make the weather aid payments speedily and to make an initial payment of 75 per cent. of the HLCA as soon as possible after receipt of the claims, the balance being paid after checking.

Payment of the adverse weather aid commenced on 20 December and by tomorrow £6·6 million will have been paid out to 18,300 applicants. HLCA payments commenced on 27 January, one month earlier than in 1985. By tomorrow, £15 million will have been paid out to 7,350 applicants.

The estimated value of the aid and the HLCAs to Scottish farmers remains as announced.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the National Farmers Union of Scotland on weather aid and hill livestock compensatory payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: The National Farmers Union has made representations alleging delay in making these payments. I do not accept these criticisms. Payments are being made in accordance with the announcement by my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State on 28 November. I have directed the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland to treat those payments as a matter of urgency. I am very satisfied with the progress to date and I have every confidence that it will continue.

Macaulay Institute for Soil Research

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report the names of organisations and individuals who have made representations to him against the proposal to transfer the Macaulay Institute for Soil Research from Aberdeen.

Mr. John MacKay: My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State will write to my hon. Friend supplying the information and will place a copy of his letter in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will be in a position to announce his decision on the proposed transfer of the Macaulay Institute for Soil Research from Aberdeen; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: As my hon. Friend is aware, no decision on the location of the new Macaulay institute will be taken until the results of a feasibility study are available. The study is under way and all concerned have been made aware of the need for urgency. It is not possible at this time to state a date on which a decision will be announced.

Mr. Bill Walker asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if the report of the feasibility study into the changes proposed at the Macaulay Institute for Soil Research will be made publicly available.

Mr. Rifkind: The report will be made available to interested parties.

List D Schools

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children each island and regional council had in list D schools on 31 March 1985.

Mr. John MacKay: The information is set out in the table:

Regional/Island Council	Children in List D schools on 31 March 1985
Borders	4
Central	29
Dumfries and Galloway	1
Fife	35
Grampian	35
Highland	10
Lothian	58
Strathclyde	449
Tayside	44
Orkney	0
Shetland	0
Western Isles	0
	Total 665

WALES

Research and Development

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the gross and per capita expenditure on research and development sponsored by the Welsh Office at (a) universities and colleges in Wales and (b) Welsh industries between 1975 and 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information in the precise form and for the full period requested is not readily available. Expenditure on research and development commissioned by the Welsh Office is given in the following table:

£'000

	Total	Expenditure on R & D in United Kingdom Industry	Expenditure on R & D in United Kingdom Universities and Further Education Establishments
1980-81	825	162	282
1981-82	1,628	154	262
1982-83	1,545	195	292
1983-84	1,587	18	616

Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether he is satisfied with the progress being made in each of the counties in Wales in developing a community based service for children under 16 years of age currently in mental handicap hospitals; whether he intends to review progress in this field in the light of the All Wales Strategy for mentally handicapped people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: We have recently called for reports on progress in developing community based services for children in this category from all county planning teams implementing the all Wales strategy for mentally handicapped people; and we shall consider whether any further guidance is necessary when these are received.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy that all statements currently being prepared by health authorities in Wales, consequent to Welsh health circular WHC(85)46, on their plans regarding provision for mentally handicapped people and the future of mental handicap hospitals, will be developed as an integral part of the county social services plans for implementing his all-Wales strategy for mentally handicapped people.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend's policy already encourages local authorities and health authorities to work together in planning to meet the needs of mentally handicapped people. This is reflected not only in the all Wales strategy and the preparation of county plans but also in the requirements for statements under Welsh health circular WHC(85)46.

Schoolchildren (Statistics)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has as to the number of children of school age in each county in Wales who are not currently being educated at an approved educational institution; what information he has as to the proportion in each case accounted for by the children of travelling people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The number of pupils receiving education other than at school, as at January 1985, were as follows:

	Number
Clwyd	131
Dyfed	25
Gwent	273
Gwynedd	17
Mid Glamorgan	133
Powys	3
South Glamorgan	19
West Glamorgan	34

These figures relate to pupils receiving education in the local authority areas under arrangements made by the authorities; they include those educated at home, at hospital (excluding hospital special schools) and at other groups (for example, assessment centres and community homes).

Information on the number of children of travelling people receiving education, either at school or otherwise, is not centrally available.

Sunday Trading

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received from bodies representing industry, local government, religious organisations, voluntary bodies or private individuals concerning the Government's proposals to abolish restrictions on Sunday trading in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Since publication of the Shops Bill on 15 November 1985 I have received 36 representations from religious organisations, 39 from private individuals and one from a shopkeeper, together with two petitions signed by 76 and 33 individuals, respectively. I have received no representations from industry, local government or voluntary bodies.

Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for Wales on what aspects of the Government's proposals for abolition of restrictions on Sunday trading he answers parliamentary questions as they affect Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Sunday trading is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary. I answer questions only on the number of representations which are sent to me or my Department.

Welsh Water Authority

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take immediate steps to write off the capital debt of the Welsh water authority, with effect for the financial year 1986-87.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No. The hon. Gentleman will appreciate from paragraphs 100 and 102 of "Privatisation of the Water Authorities in England and Wales" (Cmnd. 9734) that my right hon. Friend will be discussing with the Welsh water authority the appropriate restructuring of its balance sheet.

Teacher Training College, Bangor

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of the teacher training college at Bangor.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I am awaiting the advice of the Wales advisory board on local authority higher education.

Police Authorities

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has any plans to increase rate support grant for police authorities in the coming financial year.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Following my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary's decision to increase the rate of police specific grant to 51 per cent., I have decided to increase block grant for Welsh authorities by £1 million for 1986-87. Aggregate Exchequer grant in Wales will then increase by about £2·5 million. This recognises the priority which the Government give to improving the policing of our country. All police authorities in Wales will gain grant, as shown in the following table, and no district authority will lose grant. Ratepayers throughout Wales will therefore benefit from the increase in grant.

Effects of increasing police specific grants

£000

Authority	Increase in specific grant	Increase in block grant	Total
Clwyd	176	183	359
Dyfed	145	57	202
Gwent	211	203	414
Gwynedd	108	56	164
Mid Glamorgan	290	115	405
Powys	48	27	75
South Glamorgan	214	185	399
West Glamorgan	196	174	370

Note: The figures assume gross spending remains at the level assumed for the 1986-87 settlement, that is, that the increase in specific grant is accompanied by a reduction in expenditure for block grant purposes. Total block grant is assumed to rise by £1 million.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date he expects the Local Government Reorganisation (Staff Transfer) Order 1986 to be made.

Mr. Tracey: The Local Government Reorganisation (Designation of Staff) Order 1986 as made on 7 February and was laid before Parliament today. It designates approximately 120,000 staff of the GLC and metropolitan counties for transfer, on their existing terms and conditions, to successor authorities—mainly ILEA and the joint authorities for police and fire and civil defence. My right hon. Friend expects to make a supplementary order at the end of this month; and all successor authorities have been invited to submit requests for any further staff they wish to be transferred to them.

The future is now clear for these staff and the Government look to successor authorities to make their further decisions on recruitment as soon as possible.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the cost to date of the Mount Pleasant airport at Port Stanley.

Sir George Young: The estimated total costs of the RAF and separate Army works at Mount Pleasant airport remain unchanged from those I gave to the hon. Member in my reply to a previous question from him on 30 October 1985, at column 525.

Bathing Beaches

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance his Department has given recently to local authorities about monitoring the quality standards of public bathing beaches set by the EEC.

Mrs. Rumbold: The survey announced by my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, West (Mr. Waldegrave) on 18 December 1985, at column 223, will be carried out by water authorities in consultation with local authorities. Our officials wrote to water authorities on 18 December 1985 and on 31 January 1986 setting out the practical details of the survey and stressing that water quality was to be assessed against the standards set in the EEC "bathing water" directive (76/160/EEC).

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish his Department's proposed study of the quality of bathing beaches in England and Wales.

Mrs. Rumbold: The survey will be completed in the autumn of 1987 and a report will then be prepared for publication.

Council House Building

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of council house building in (1) England and Wales and (2) Scotland was represented by (a) direct labour departments of councils and (b) private construction companies, for each of the years 1979 to 1984.

Sir George Young: The estimated percentages based on the returns to the Department which give the value of new public sector house building put in place in each year are as follows:

(Percentages)

	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984
England and Wales
Private contractors	. .	. .	93	94	94	96
Direct labour departments	. .	. .	7	6	6	4
Scotland
Private contractors	. .	. .	99	98	99	98
Direct labour departments	. .	. .	1	2	1	2
Great Britain
Private contractors	94	94	94	94	95	96
Direct labour departments	6	6	6	6	5	4

Separate figures are not available for the individual countries in 1979 and 1980.

London Country Bus Service

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received an application from the Greater London council for his consent to a grant to the London Country bus services minibus service; what consideration he has given to the matter; and when he expects to give his consent.

Mr. Tracey: No such application has been received from the GLC.

Kenwood House

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what factors he took into account in proposing the transfer to the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission of some 112 acres surrounding Kenwood house; and what consultations were held with the boroughs of Haringey, Barnet and Camden.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend took into account the provisions of section 44 of the Local Government Act 1985, which themselves secure the transfer of some 68 acres of land, together with Kenwood house, to the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission; the effective future management and presentation of Kenwood house and its environs; and the public's enjoyment of both the house and its setting. There have been no detailed consultations with the boroughs of Haringey, Barnet and Camden about the total extent of land to be transferred to the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission.

Building Regulations

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to introduce new building regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: New building regulations came into force last November. Following the policy outlined in the White Paper "Lifting the Burden" (Cmnd. 9571) the requirement of the regulations are now being reviewed further. The aim is that the regulations should be reduced to the minimum required to secure their essential function, which is the preservation of public health and safety. The regulations also have a role in setting basic standards of cost-effective energy conservation. A consultative document will be issued later this year.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the current United Kingdom building regulations in respect of the thickness of glass required in (i) internal panelling, (ii) internal doors, (iii) internal windows and (iv) windows with an external face; and what information he has as to the comparable requirements in (a) Norway, (b) Sweden, (c) Finland, (d) Denmark, (e) West Germany, (f) the Netherlands, (g) Belgium, (h) Luxembourg, (i) France, (j) Switzerland, (k) Austria, (l) Italy and (m) Spain.

Sir George Young: There are no specific requirements governing the thickness of glass in the regulations in England and Wales, Scotland, and Northern Ireland. I am not aware of such requirements in the other countries referred to by the hon. Member.

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what are the current United Kingdom building regulations regarding roof insulation standards; and what information he has as to how these compare with (a) Denmark, (b) Sweden, (c) Finland, (d) Norway, (e) West Germany, (f) Austria and (g) France, respectively;

(2) what are the current United Kingdom building regulations regarding wall insulation standards; and what information he has as to how these compare with (a) Norway, (b) Finland, (c) Sweden, (d) Denmark, (e) France and (f) West Germany, respectively;

(3) what are the current United Kingdom building regulations regarding floor insulation standards; and what information he has as to how these compare with (a) Finland, (b) Norway, (c) Denmark, (d) Sweden, (e) West Germany, (f) Austria, (g) Eire, (h) the Netherlands, (i) Switzerland, (j) France, (k) Spain and (l) Greece, respectively.

Sir George Young: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Women's Cricket Association

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he or officials of his Department have offered advice to the Women's Cricket Association concerning the visit to South Africa by certain individual members of that association.

Mr. Tracey: No.

Greater London Enterprise Board

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 27 January, Official Report, column 424, what efforts he has made to obtain consent to reveal the name of the company.

Mr. Tracey: My officials wrote to the company concerned on 12 August 1985 requesting its permission to reveal its name.

GLC (Grants)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when he expects to have completed his consideration of the Greater London council's application for consent to a grant to the Haringey women's training and educational centre for which the Greater London council applied on 20 November 1985;

(2) when he expects to have completed his consideration of the Greater London Council's application for consent to a grant to London Country Bus Services riverbus service.

Mr. Tracey: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on Tuesday 21 January at column 141.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to have completed his consideration of the Greater London council's application for consent for a grant to the Chelsea social club.

Mr. Tracey: No such application has been received from the GLC. An application by the GLC to make a grant to the Chelsea social council was refused on 6 February.

Local Authority Expenditure

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on a possible review of the limit on spending under section 137 of the Local Government Act 1972.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received representations on this matter from a number of local government bodies, including local authority associations, individual local authorities and some other interested organisations.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Martina Anderson

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what treatment Martina Anderson currently in Her Majesty's prison, Brixton, is receiving for her migraine condition.

Mr. Mellor: Ms. Anderson is receiving appropriate treatment under the care of the medical staff at Brixton.

Theft Prevention

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has about which police forces encourage post code marking of articles as an aid to prevent theft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Details of all crime prevention implemented by police forces in England and Wales are not held centrally. We know, however, that many forces have introduced property marking schemes often as part of a neighbourhood watch package. In June 1984 Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary issued guidelines on property marking to all chief officers of police in England and Wales as an aid to forces about to launch schemes. The guidelines referred to the results of a property marking project in South Wales launched in November 1983 and carried out by the Home Office crime prevention unit in conjunction with South Wales constabulary. They showed a 40 per cent. reduction in the number of domestic burglaries in the project area during the one-year evaluation period. This successful project continues.

Durham (Car Accidents)

Mr. Merchant asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Durham as to how many car accidents there have been in the County Durham police area involving police vehicles in the last five years resulting in (a) death and (b) injury; and what is the total number of people who have died as a result.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information requested is available only for the years from 1982 onwards. This information, together with figures for the number of people seriously or slightly injured, is given in the table:

	1982	1983	1984	1985	*1986
Accidents involving police vehicles resulting in death	0	0	0	0	0
Accidents involving police vehicles resulting in injury	17	16	22	20	3
Number of people seriously injured	3	3	5	1	1
Number of people slightly injured	17	17	24	23	3

* To 7 February.

Rape

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of rape offences reported to the police in 1982, 1983, 1984, and 1985, respectively, by police force area; and if he will also list the number of offences that have been cleared up.

Mr. Mellor: The available information is on the number of rapes recorded by each police force and is published annually in "Criminal Statistics Supplementary Tables" (volume 3, table S.3.1 of the issue for 1984). Figures for 1985 are not yet available. For the clear-up rates I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Knowsley, North (Mr. Kilroy-Silk) on 16 January 1986, at column 262.

Police Complaints Authority (Report)

Miss Maynard asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the report of the Police Complaints Authority will be laid before Parliament.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend expects to receive from the Police Complaints Authority a report on the discharge of its function during 1985 by the end of March. He will arrange for it to be laid before Parliament as soon as possible thereafter.

South Yorkshire Fire Service

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if the South Yorkshire fire service is under strength; what recruitment will be required to reach the necessary establishment; and if such recruitment will be possible after 1 April;

(2) if he is satisfied that the South Yorkshire fire service will be able to maintain services which are up to national standards, to man appliances to the same standards and to ensure that fire appliances will be available as required at all times from 1 April.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The latest information available to me about the notified establishment (uniformed including control staff) of the South Yorkshire fire service was 1,218 whole-time posts at 1 January 1985, against which there were 94 vacancies at the end of 1985. The retained (that is part-time) establishment was 236, and there were 121 vacancies. Under paragraph 4 of the Fire and Civil Defence Authorities (Establishment, Support Services and Management Schemes) Regulations 1985 the South Yorkshire fire and civil defence authority will be consulted shortly about its establishment scheme for 1986-87, including its plans for recruitment.

The maximum precept for 1986-87 prescribed in accordance with section 4(1) of the Rates Act 1984 should enable the authority broadly to maintain the existing levels of service. We expect it to meet the nationally recommended standards through efficient use of the available resources.

West Yorkshire Police Authority

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what resources Her Majesty's Government are making available to the West Yorkshire police authority in 1986-87 compared with 1985-86.

Mr. Giles Shaw: If the West Yorkshire police authority's expenditure, including police grant, in 1986-87 is £126 million, the level currently implied by the maximum precept contained in the Local Government Act 1985 (Police and Fire and Civil Defence Authorities) Precepts Limitation Order 1986 which was approved by Parliament on 11 February, 51 per cent. of its expenditure will be met by the Home Office through police grant and the authority will also receive some £20 million in block grant. Thus in 1986-87, 67 per cent. of the authority's expenditure will be financed by central Government. 50 per cent. of the expenditure of the present police authority in 1985-86 is being met through police grant. It is not possible to say to what extent the authority's expenditure in 1985-86 is financed by block grant, which is paid in support of the county council's services generally.

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the West Yorkshire police authority on the maintenance of an effective and efficient police force; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Normanton (Mr. O'Brien) on 3 February, at column 2. The House has now approved the order setting a maximum precept for the West Yorkshire police authority. This maximum will allow the authority to spend at a level sufficient to fulfil its statutory duty to maintain an adequate and efficient force for its area. We look to the authority to budget at this level. By virtue of my right hon. Friend's announcement on 11 February of his intention to increase the level of police grant from 50 per cent. to 51 per cent. in 1986-87, the authority will be able to spend at the appropriate level while making a precept below the maximum he has set.

Firearms

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will review police powers in relation to the control of firearms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I share the hon. Member's concern that firearms should be more properly controlled. The Firearms Act 1968 already lays down strict controls over the possession and use of firearms. Generally these work well and we are not persuaded that more stringent controls would have a significant effect on the level of armed crime. I shall, however, keep these issues under close review. Heavy penalties, up to life imprisonment in some instances, can already be imposed on those who use firearms for criminal purposes.

Prison Disciplinary Tribunal

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to introduce legislation establishing a prison disciplinary tribunal, as recommended by the report of the committee on the prison disciplinary system (Cmnd. 9641).

Mr. Mellor: As my right hon. Friend said when announcing the publication of the report of the committee on the prison disciplinary system on 30 October 1985, he accepts the need for new adjudication arrangements. The current position is that my right hon. Friend is considering in the light of the report what these arrangements should be. We hope that there will be an early opportunity for legislation.

NATO (Civil Defence Committee)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the post, rank and responsibilities of the official who represents the United Kingdom on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation civil defence committee; how often this committee meets; and where it meets.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The United Kingdom is represented by the head of F6 Division (Emergency Planning). This is a grade 5 post. The NATO civil defence committee meets once a year alternately in Brussels or one of the member nations. There are several working groups which meet more frequently, usually in Brussels.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the expenditure by his Department in 1983 on combating illicit drug abuse.

Mr. Mellor: In the financial year 1983-84 the Home Office contributed £121,334 to international effort against drug misuse and provided £276,217 to projects for drug misusers under the aftercare accommodation scheme. It is not possible to quantify the specific contribution to action against drug misuse made by other Home Office expenditure, such as that on the police, but it would, of course, have been very considerable.

Police (Assault)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis and the chief constable of the West Midlands police as to the number of summonses wich have been issued against officers of their forces for alleged assault on private citizens and the number of cases in which each force has been required to pay compensation to the plaintiff;

(2) if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis and the chief constable of the West Midlands police as to the number of assaults which have taken place on women police constables while undertaking patrol duties during the last two years; and in how many cases compensation was gained for injuries from the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis and list in the Official Report the names of all those Metropolitan police officers present in transit vans in the Holloway road area on the night of 6 August 1983 and subsequently investigated under Police Complaints Authority procedures following an assault upon five young people in Georges road, London N7, that night; and if he will indicate which police stations they were attached to at the time.

Mr. Hurd: I shall write to the hon. Member, but it is not the practice to publicise lists of possible suspects for a criminal offence, especially if such a list would confuse the innocent with the guilty.

Alcoholic Drinks (Under-age Persons)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands police as to the nature of his plans to send plain-clothes officers into public houses and to survey discotheques, off-licences and supermarkets for the purpose of detecting purchase or consumption of alcoholic drinks by under-age youngsters.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constable of West Midlands police that the laws relating to under-age drinking are enforced as part of general police duties and that he has no plans for special arrangements.

Police Vans (Marking)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands police as to the extent of his plans to mark police vans with special numbers in line with the policy to be adopted by the Metropolitan police.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We have noted the Commissioner's plans to mark certain vehicles to allow them to be identified more easily. We intend drawing this practice to the attention of the Association of Chief Police Officers so that they may consider whether it could be of assistance in other police areas.

Miss Hilda Murrell

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent reports he has received from the West Mercia police on the death of Miss Hilda Murrell.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Miss Murrell's death remains under investigation, but I understand from the chief constable of West Mercia that there has been no recent evidence likely to lead to the identification of an offender.

Rape Crisis Centres

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the number of rape crisis centres in England and Wales, and where, specifically, they are located.

Mr. Whitney: I have been asked to reply.

I understand there are currently 37 rape crisis centres in England and Wales. This Department provides some financial support for the London rape crisis centre at PO Box 69, London WC1X 9NJ, where details of the location of other centres are held.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Building Industry

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many private building contractors were declared bankrupt in Great Britain in 1975, 1980 and 1985 or the nearest available years.

Mr. Howard: The information that is available for insolvencies in the construction industry is given in the table:

	1975	1980	1984
Bankruptcies—England and Wales	1,543	783	901
Company Liquidations—Great Britain	995	1,030	1,913

There is no industry breakdown of sequestrations in Scotland — the equivalent of bankruptcies in England and Wales. The bankruptcy figures include receiving orders and administration orders; the total is the net number of cases administered after consolidations and rescissions.

Potato Crisps

Mr. Higgins asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce a measure requiring packets of potato crisps to be marked with the weight of the contents.

Mr. Howard: Article 14(3)(h) of the Weights and Measures Act 1963 (Miscellaneous Foods) Order 1984 already requires packets of potato crisps (and other similar snack food products) weighing 1 oz (approximately 28·5g) or more to be marked with the net weight of the contents. From 1 July 1989 this lower limit is being reduced to 25g.

Clothing and Textiles

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has concerning the level of investment in the United Kingdom textile and clothing industries in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available; and if he will give the comparable figures for each month in the last five years.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The information requested is not available on a monthly basis. Quarterly estimates at 1980 prices of the direct capital expenditure of the textiles, leather and clothing industries from 1981 to the third quarter of 1985 were published in table 3, page 554 of British Business, 13 December 1985.

Men's Suits (Romania)

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to prevent the dumping of Romanian men's suits in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Alan Clark: Imports into the United Kingdom of men's suits from Romania are subject to a quota, which is strictly enforced, under the provisions of the EC/ Romania bilateral textile agreement. This agreement also contains provisions for dealing with abnormally low price levels. We have drawn the attention of the European Commission to the prices at which Romanian suits have been entering the United Kingdom, and are considering appropriate action.

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations his Department has made to the European Commission in relation to men's suits imported from Romania; and what action they proposed.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, in view of the recent availability of unemployment statistics broken down by ward, he will review the means used to determine the boundaries of assisted areas.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Travel-to-work areas are the closest available approximation to self-contained labour markets covering the whole country and are the smallest units for which nationally comparable unemployment rates are available. As such we will continue to use them as the basis for designating assisted areas.

Leeds (Regional Aid)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will extend assisted area status to the Bramley and Wortley wards of Leeds.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I have no plans to extend assisted area status to the Bramley and Wortley wards of Leeds.

Leyland Bus

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if the Government have been approached by Hestair Dennis with a view to conducting exploratory talks as to the future arrangements or ownership of Leyland Bus;

(2) if the Government have been approached by Mercedes-Benz with a view to conducting exploratory talks as to the future arrangements or ownership of Leyland Bus;

(3) if the Government have been approached by Hino with a view to conducting exploratory talks as to the future arrangements or ownership of Leyland Bus;

(4) if the Government have been approached by MAN with a view to conducting exploratory talks as to the future arrangements or ownership of Leyland Bus;

(5) if the Government have been approached by Daf with a view to conducting exploratory talks as to the future arrangements or ownership of Leyland Bus;

(6) if the Government have been approached by Scania with a view to conducting exploratory talks as to the future arrangements or ownership of Leyland Bus;

(7) if the Government have been approached by Renault with a view to conducting exploratory talks as to the future arrangements or ownership of Leyland Bus;

(8) if the Government have been approached by Iveco with a view to conducting exploratory talks as to the future arrangements or ownership of Leyland Bus.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No such approach has been made.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Government have been approached by Volvo with a view to conducting exploratory talks as to the future arrangements or ownership of Leyland Bus.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Yes; and the company is being invited to explain its interest with BL.

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the Government have been approached by Ikarus with a view to conducting exploratory talks as to the future arrangements or ownership of Leyland Bus.

Mr. Peter Morrison: A representative of Ikarus has briefly discussed with my officials possible ventures in the United Kingdom, but ownership or any other form of merger with Leyland Bus was not discussed.

NATO (Committees)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will state the post, rank and responsibilities of the official who represents the United Kingdom on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation industrial planning committee; how often this committee meets; and where it meets;

(2) if he will state the post, rank and responsibilities of the official who represents the United Kingdom on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation civil communications planning committee; how often this committee meets; and where it meets;

(3) if he will state the names, posts and employers of the non-government officials who represent the United Kingdom on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation civil communications planning committee.

Mr. Butcher: The United Kingdom is represented on the NATO industrial planning committee and civil communications planning committee by grade 7 officials responsible for defence planning in the Department. Non-Government representation on the civil communications planning committee is provided by a senior employee of British Telecommunications plc. The committees meet in plenary session twice annually, usually at NATO headquarters in Brussels.

Tobacco Industry

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish in the Official Report the grants-in-aid which have been made to companies in the tobacco industry since 1982.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Since 1982 no grant-in-aid has been made by the Department of Trade and Industry to companies in the tobacco industry. £5·5 million was paid to the tobacco industry under section 7 and section 8 of the Industrial Development Act in the period April 1979 to date.

Accident Statistics (Glass)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many accidents have been reported where injury has been caused by either (1) people falling through or (2) coming into contact with (i) glass doors, (ii) glass panelling and (iii) windows internal and external and the glass breaking, in whole or part, in the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986 to the latest date available.

Mr. Howard: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

US-UK Investment

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give his estimate for each of the last five years of the value of United Kingdom (a) manufacturing and (b) total investment in the United States of America and the value of United States (i) manufacturing and (ii) total investment in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Butcher: The latest available information, which excludes direct investment by oil companies, is published in Business Monitor MA4, 1983, (tables 3.3 and 4.3). Figures for 1984 will be published in the spring.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

NATO Food and Agriculture Planning Committee

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state the post, rank and responsibilities of the official who represents the United Kingdom on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation food and agriculture planning committee; how often this committee meets; and where it meets.

Mrs. Fenner: The United Kingdom is represented on the NATO food and agriculture planning committee by a grade 7 official who is head of the branch of emergencies division responsible for overall civil defence planning policy for food, agriculture and fisheries. The committee meets twice a year, normally in Brussels, at NATO headquarters.

Small Scale Energy Developments

Mr. Speller asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to publicise the availability to farmers of grants for small scale energy developments under the Agricultural Improvement Regulations 1985.

Mrs. Fenner: I have already taken steps to publicise the grants available for investments in energy-saving facilities.

In October 1985 my Department published an advisory leaflet (AIS4) on farm environment and energy-saving grants which has been made available at all the Departments' local offices. The leaflet deals comprehensively with grants for small-scale energy developments under the national and EC funded elements of the agriculture improvement scheme.

Additional publicity has been given in the national and local press and at farming conferences and agricultural shows.

Food Labelling

Mr. Hickmet asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is yet in a position to make an announcement about proposals for legislation on the labelling of foods with their fat content.

Mrs. Fenner: Draft proposals for legislation on the labelling of foods with their total and saturated fat contents are today being circulated for comment to organisations representative of interests which will be substantially affected by them, as required under the Food Act 1984. The proposals represent an important stage in the fulfilment of the Government's intention to implement the recommendations made in the COMA report on diet and cardiovascular disease. Comprehensive labelling of food with its fat content will enable consumers to bring their consumption of fat into line with the best medical advice available whilst still choosing a balanced and attractive diet.

Revised proposals for voluntary full nutritional labelling of food are being circulated for comment at the same time.

I have arranged for copies of both documents to be placed in the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Armed Forces (Crime Statistics)

Mr. McGuire asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many members of the armed forces convicted of crimes committed in Northern Ireland are presently serving their sentences there; how many have been transferred to serve their sentences in prisons in Great Britain; and what were the reasons for allowing them to transfer.

Mr. Scott: The information requested in the first part of the question is not available. During the 10 years ending 31 December 1985, 34 persons convicted of crimes committed when they were serving members of the armed forces were transferred to Great Britain to serve their sentences.

Any convicted prisoner in Northern Ireland can apply to serve his sentence in another part of the United Kingdom. Each application is considered on its own merits, in consultation with the prison authorities in the receiving country. Various factors are taken into account in reaching a decision, including where the prisoner normally resides, his family circumstances, his background, his behaviour in prison and his personal safety. These criteria apply to all applications.

Tobacco Industry

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total of grants in aid paid to the tobacco industry in Northern Ireland since 1980.

Dr. Boyson I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Ulster Defence Regiment and Royal Ulster Constabulary

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes have been made in the operational and other procedures of the Ulster Defence Regiment and the Royal Ulster Constabulary in the terms of paragraph 8 of the joint communiqué of the third meeting of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmetal Conference at the level of Heads of Government, Cmnd. 9657.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Allowances

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total amount paid out by his Department for (a) heating allowances, (b) laundry allowances and (c) special diet allowances in 1983, 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Newton: The information available is the yearly amount based on November 1983 rates and the number of claimants in receipt of the additions at December 1983, as follows:

	Amount £ million
a. Heating	416
b. Laundry	10
c. Special diet	56

It is regretted that similar information is not available for 1984 and 1985.

Maternity Units (Closure)

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report all maternity units for which his approval for closure has been sought, and the dates when he expects to make his decision.

Mr. Whitney: At present there are two proposals with us for decision that concern maternity units in England. Northern regional health authority proposes change of use of Thorpe maternity hospital. Yorkshire regional health authority proposes complete closure of Wharfdale hospital and transfer of services to Leeds infirmary.

We shall let our decisions be known when we have given each proposal our full consideration.

Income Support

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what income support or other benefits a British citizen receives if he is without any form of income in (i) Eire, (ii) France, (iii) West Germany and (iv) Italy if he has been in the country (a) less than three months, (b) less than 6 months and (c) less than 12 months.

Mr. Major: I refer my hon. Friend to the Department's publication, "Tables of Social Benefit Systems in the Member States of the European Communities. Portugal and Spain (position at 1 January 1985)", a copy of which is in the Library. Section IX contains information on social assistance schemes in the European Community member states.

Striking Miners (Benefits)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many miners who were on strike during the period March 1984 to March 1985 were refused benefit in each week after 6 March 1985, when they sought to claim unemployment benefit or supplementary benefit, on the grounds that the strike was not yet over; and how many miners' families continued each week since 6 March 1985 to suffer a deduction of £16 a week from benefits for their wives and children.

Mr. Major: Information is not available about the number of miners who claimed unemployment or supplementary benefit after 6 March 1985 and who were refused benefit because the stoppage of work due to the trade dispute at their place of employment had not yet ended.

The following table shows the numbers of payments made each week from 6 March 1985 to 30 April 1985 (when weekly returns ceased) to miners for their dependants, and in which the £16 statutory deduction was made.

Week ending	Number of payments made
12 March 1985	4,665
19 March 1985	519
26 March 1985	169
2 April 1985	94
9 April 1985	23
16 April 1985	39
23 April 1985	19
30 April 1985	11

National Insurance Contributions

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the revenue effect of abolishing the upper ceiling on payments to the National Insurance Fund for employee contributions.

Mr. Major: If the upper earnings limit for employee's class 1 national insurance contributions were to be abolished in 1986-87, but the ceiling retained for the contracted-out rebate, the additional receipts to the national insurance fund that year would be £610 million. This would attract an extra £55 million of Treasury supplement.

These figures are based on the same assumptions as Cmnd. 9672—the report by the Government Actuary on the draft of the Social Security (Contributions, Re-rating) Order 1985.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the data collected from all the weather stations by the office of the Chief Adjudication Officer on temperatures over the past 14 days.

Mr. Newton: I understand that the office of the Chief Adjudication Officer does not intend to publish the data on temperatures which it collects from the Meteorological Office. Following revised guidance issued by the Chief Adjudication Officer on 6 December 1985, this information is no longer necessary to determine whether there has been a period of exceptionally severe weather in any particular area. It may only be used to supplement other locally available information if appropriate.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many local offices have requested permission to begin payments of exceptionally severe weather payments over the past 14 days.

Mr. Newton: Local offices are not required to seek such permission. Following revised guidance issued by the Chief Adjudication Officer on 6 December 1985, the decision whether there has been a period of exceptionally severe weather in any particular area is one for the local adjudication officer, in the light of local weather conditions.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many local offices have contacted the office of the Chief Adjudication Officer requesting data on temperature levels in their region.

Mr. Newton: I understand that about 20 local offices have contacted the office of the Chief Adjudication Officer to request data on temperature levels recorded by the Meteorological Office.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what sum he has budgeted for during the current year for exceptionally severe weather payments.

Mr. Newton: No estimate has been made of expenditure during the current year on single payments for additional fuel used during a period of exceptionally severe weather, since there is no means of forecasting whether, when of where adjudication officers may decide that such a period has occurred.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many exceptionally severe weather payments have been made so far in the current year; and if he will give a regional breakdown.

Mr. Newton: Information is not currently available centrally on whether any single payments in respect of extra fuel used during a period of exceptionally severe weather have been made in the present year.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will review his decision not to make severe weather payments to claimants who purchase their fuel in advance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: No such decision has been taken. Guidance on single payments to help with the cost of fuel purchased in advance, but used faster than expected because of a period of exceptionally severe weather, is contained in the circular issued by the Chief Adjudication Officer on 6 December 1985, a copy of which is in the Library.

Social Security Reform

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will publish tables comparable to tables P5 and P6 of the technical annex to "Reform of Social Security", showing pension projections for widows on the assumption that their husbands die at the age of 60 years.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Girocheques (Delay)

Mr. Millan asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the reason for recent delays in issuing girocheques from his Department's computer centre at Livingston; and what steps are being taken to prevent further delays.

Mr. Major: The computer system at Livingston which deals with the assessment and payment of unemployment benefit (and the payment of supplementary benefit to unemployed claimants) is both large and complex. It deals with the payment of benefit in respect of just under 1·5 million unemployed people, issuing around 750,000 girocheques per week. The system has been in operation since 1977 and has provided a consistent and reliable service since that time.

During the week commencing 27 January there was an unprecedented fault in the system. This was detected immediately and, whilst no incorrect payments were issued, the time needed to restore the situation resulted in the delayed delivery of some 20,000 girocheques by two days, and 65,000 girocheques by one day. The balance of 658,000 girocheques due that week were delivered on time.

The particular fault has now been corrected and recurrence is not to be expected. I am bound to say, however, that some problems are inevitable in an undertaking of this dimension. When any fault does occur, all effort is then directed towards minimising the impact on claimants.

I am grateful for the wholehearted effort demonstrated by the computer centre staff to restore the service as quickly as possible and the patience and co-operation of local office staff.

Board and Lodging Payments

Mr. Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many payments, and to what value, have been made in Swansea by his Department without verification of entitlement to reimburse applicants in board and lodging accommodation for moneys illegally stopped from them; what is the nature of the evidence he has received that some of these payments may not have been justified; what was the authorisation for uncorroborated payment; how many similar payments and to what value have been made elsewhere in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Following the Court of Appeal judgment in the Cotton case, the Department took the required steps to ensure that any arrears of supplementary benefit due to claimants would be properly paid without unreasonable delay. In line with normal procedures, the instructions to local offices (circular S4/85, a copy of which is in the Library) required that arrears should be assessed in accordance with information supplied by claimants in their signed statements of claim, subject to further inquiries where this information was considered inaccurate or where the claims had ceased.

I understand that, after arrears payments in Swansea had begun, several landlords came forward and made statements to the effect that they had reduced their charges to claimants. This indicates that the claimants concerned had failed to fulfil their duty to notify the Department of their change of circumstances, either immediately after the change or when specifically reminded to do so in the notification about arrears. Further inquiries are continuing. I understand that the independent adjudication officer is currently looking at cases to determine the questions of overpayment, amounts involved and recovery. I am not aware of any reports of similar overpayments in other offices.

Smoking

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what are the total sums spent directly and indirectly by his Department on anti-cigarette smoking activities; and if he has any information concerning the amount spent by the tobacco industry for sales promotions for the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: This year the Department has provided about £3·5 million for activities designated to discourage smoking. Information on media advertising expenditure by the tobacco industry is supplied to the Department regularly on a confidential basis. We also have available the results of a continuous survey, undertaken by a commercial organisation, of press advertising on tobacco products which in 1985 was of a gross value of £55·5 million.

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost to the National Health Service of smoking related disease for the last year to a convenient date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The annual costs to the National Health Service of treating smoking-related diseases, including the cost of general practitioner consultations and out-patient attendances, is now estimated at around £370 million. Previous estimates were based on less full data.

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the total number of recorded deaths in 1983 from the drug abuse of heroin, methadone, morphine and opium; what is his estimate of the number of premature deaths in that year caused by cigarette smoking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The table shows the numbers of deaths registered in 1983 in England and Wales with an underlying cause of death stated as drug dependence on, or non-dependent abuse of, morphine-type drugs, which include heroin, methadone, opium, opium alkaloids and their derivatives, and synthetics with morphine-like effects.

Deaths from abuse of morphine-type drugs
England and Wales 1983

*ICD	Cause of death	Number of deaths
304.0	Drug dependence: morphine-type	64
304.7	Drug dependence: morphine-type with other drugs	14
305.5	Non-dependent abuse of drugs: morphine-type	1

* International Classification of Diseases 9th revision.

The Royal College of Physicians in its report "Health or Smoking?" (1983) stated that "some 100,000 of our citizens are dying prematurely" from the effects of smoking. This is based on the assumption that abolition of the hazards from cigarette smoking would lead to a reduction in the mortality of smokers and thus an increase in their expectation of life.

Stanley Royd Hospital

Mr. Fatchett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the reports which he receives from Wakefield district health authority on action taken since the publication of the inquiry into the outbreak of food poisoning at Stanley Royd hospital.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall consider what is appropriate in the light of the contents of the report.

Single Payments

Mr. Michie asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what were the number and value of single payments of supplementary benefit in the four social security offices serving Sheffield taken together in each year since November 1980, showing separately figures for maternity expenses, funeral expenses and other single payments.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have the information that is available as soon as possible.

Mr. Rooker asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if any advice has been given by the Chief Supplementary Benefits Officer in respect of single payments for house repairs to owner occupiers living in houses designated under the Housing Defects Act 1984.

Mr. Newton: Guidance on the interpretation of the law relating to supplementary benefit is given by the Chief Adjudication Officer. His guidance on single payments for essential housing repairs is in paragraphs 7296-7300 of the S manual, a copy of which is in the Library. He has issued no general guidance concerning repairs in relation to the Housing Defects Act 1984, although it is possible that advice in individual cases may have been given to local adjudication officers.

Crown Immunity

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to obtain from health authorities information on the identity of those hospitals which the Institution of Environmental Health Officers has reported would have warranted prosecution under food hygiene legislation, were it not for Crown immunity; and if he will publish such information.

Mr. Hayhoe: No. All health authorities have been reminded that they are expected to meet the standards required by food hygiene legislation, and my right hon. Friend has announced that the Government will be bringing forward legislation to make health authorities subject to the provisions of the Food Act 1984. I will, however, continue to follow up all individual cases of alleged poor food hygiene standards in hospitals which are brought to my attention.

Pensions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be (i) the gross and (ii) the net cost of paying to retirement pensioners currently in receipt of basic or supplementary pension an additional weekly pension of (a) £5, (b) £10 or (c) £15, less the sum of any additional pension, earnings or investment income accruing; and how many pensioners would no longer be entitled to supplementary pension as a result.

Mr. Major: I regret that the information requested is not available. Details are not held centrally about pensioners' earnings below the appropriate earnings limit, or about their investment income.

Abortions

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what percentage of women who applied for abortions in (a) York and (b) Newcastle had their applications granted in 1985; to what health or other factors he attributes the difference between the two figures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested. In 1984, abortions to women resident in these health districts were:

District Health Authorities of residence	Total	Percentage in NHS	Percentage outside NHS
York	487	19·9	80·1
Newcastle	697	91·4	8·6

It is for health authorities to decide the level of their provision for abortion in the light of local needs and circumstances.

Disability Premium

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many of those disabled claimants currently receiving any additional payments he estimates will be worse off in the long-term when in receipt of the proposed disability premium.

Mr. Newton: I refer the right hon. Member to the technical annex published with the White Paper "Reform of Social Security: Programme of Action" (Cmnd. 9691), which includes tables illustrating the effect on claimants' underlying entitlement to benefit of the move to income support on the basis of the assumptions explained in pages 9 to 14. These compare the illustrative rates against information on claimant's present receipt of benefit, including additional requirements.

Cash Limits

Mr. Bellingham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the cash limit for class XI, vote 3: "Miscellaneous Health Services and Personal Social Services, England", is being revised.

Mr. Hayhoe: Yes. The cash limit is being reduced by £4,759,000 in order to offset, in part, an increase which is being proposed in a spring Supplementary Estimate for the family practitioner and certain other demand-led services (class XI, vote 2).

Medical Education

Mr. Stanbrook asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to present the Government's reply to the fifth report of the Social Services Committee, 1984-85 Session, on medical education.

Mr. Hayhoe: The Government's response is being published today (Cmnd. 9701).

Cancer

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many patients have been treated for malignant neoplasm and carcinoma of the cervix in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and how many of these patients were in the following age groups in each of those years: (a) under 24 years, (b) 24 to 40 years and (c) over 40 years.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 22 January 1986, c. 235]: I am sorry I cannot give my hon. Friend all the information she seeks. Some of it is not available centrally. The available information is given in the tables.

Benefits

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will publish tables, similar to those in his Department's tax/benefit model table, showing net weekly spending power for each of a single wage married couple with two children aged four and six years and three children aged three, eight and 11 years, earning £60, £70, £80, £90, £100, £110, £120, £130, £140, £150, £160 and £170 (a) under the existing tax and benefit systems and (b) under the benefit system proposed in Cmnd. 9691, using the illustrative benefit figures in the technical annex;

(2) if he will publish figures, similar to those in his Department's tax/benefit model tables, comparing net weekly spending power for a lone mother with two children aged four and six years, under the existing tax and benefit systems and under the benefit system proposed in Cmnd. 9691, using the illustrative figures in the technical annex, and in each of the following circumstances: (a) not working, after one year on benefits, (b) earning £20 a week from part-time work, (c) earning £40 a week from part-time working and (d) working full-time and earning £60, £70, £80, £90, £100, £110 and £120 per week.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 28 January 1986, c. 508]: The information is in the tables. The assumptions are as follows:

(a) Current national insurance contribution rates are in force.
(b) The families are tenants and that rent is £16·50 a week, general rate £6·30 a week and water rate £1·65 a week.
(c) Fares to work for full-time workers are £5·95 a week or £3 a week for part-time.
(d) Under the existing system current benefit rates are in force.
(e) Under the system proposed in Cmnd. 9691 the illustrative benefit figures in the technical annex are used and a 20 per cent. rates contribution is made. Present rounding and minima rules have been applied.
(f) All other assumptions are as in the April 1985 tax/benefit model tables.

It should be noted that heads of two parent families with dependent children do not typically have weekly earnings of £100 or less. Only about 4 per cent. have earnings at these levels.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Public Expenditure White Paper

2. Dr. Godman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning the public expenditure White Paper.

Mr. MacGregor: None specifically on the White Paper.

Small Businesses

16. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from small businesses as to the effect on their cash flow of having to account each quarter for 100 per cent. of their invoiced value added tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Of the order of 150 in the past year.

Charities

18. Mr. Ashley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on the value added tax burden faced by charities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: Since April of last year my colleagues and I have received some 300 representations about the value added tax burden on charities. These have been carefully considered, but I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget statement.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

19. Mr. Baldry asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the nation's wealth is taken by the state currently; and how much was taken 30 years ago.

Mr. MacGregor: Total tax and national insurance contributions as a percentage of GDP at market prices are estimated to be 38·4 per cent. in 1985-86, as compared to 29·4 per cent. in 1955-56.

Share Ownership

20. Mr. Fallon asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on progress in the increasing individual share ownership.

Mr. Brooke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend gave earlier today to my hon. Friend, the Member for Surrey, South-West (Mrs. Bottomley).

32. Mr. Merchant asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evidence there is to show the change in the number of shareholders over the last six years.

Mr. Moore: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Surrey, South-West (Mrs. Bottomley).

45. Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individual shareholders he now estimates there to be; what the increase has been since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Surrey, South-West (Mrs. Bottomley).

Mr. Thurnham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received about encouraging wider share ownership and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The most effective representations have come from the millions of people who have bought shares in privatised companies and in the companies they work for.

Telex

21. Mr. Churchill asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what evidence he has of cases in which his Department or any organisations within his responsibility have fallen victim to fraudulent telex bills or deceptive invitations to take advertisements in international telex directories, originating from abroad; what action he proposes to take; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I am glad to say that none of my right hon. Friend's Departments have paid out money on these bills. Several have received such bills, one of which has been referred to the fraud squad.

Oil Prices

22. Mr. Cabom asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the recent impact of oil price changes on tax revenues.

Mr. Brooke: New forecasts of tax revenues will be published at Budget time.

33. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much the recent fall in oil prices will reduce the Exchequer's revenue in the current financial year.

Mr. Moore: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor) on 27 January at column 410.

36. Mr. Douglas asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his current estimates of the effect on taxation revenues arising from the fluctuations in oil prices.

Mr. Moore: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Central (Mr. Cabom).

42. Mr. Dubs asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the implications for economic growth of the recent fall in North sea oil prices.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend earlier today to the question from the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith).

Exchange Rate

23. Mr. Pendry asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about Government policy towards the exchange rate.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The exchange rate is one of a number of factors which I take into account in assessing financial conditions.

Income Tax

24. Mr. Kirkwood asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has any plans to reduce the tax burden on the low-paid.

Mr. Brooke: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget statement.

25. Mr. Sackville asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received about tax thresholds.

Mr. Brooke: We have received a wide range of representations on this subject.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total number of individuals who would be removed from income tax by the raising of personal income tax thresholds by 10 per cent. above the current rate of inflation; and if he will estimate the total loss in revenue which would accrue to the Exchequer from such a move.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 5 February 1986, c. 185]: About one million fewer individuals, including working wives, would pay tax in 1986-87 compared with an indexed income tax regime. The direct revenue cost compared with indexation would be about £2·1 billion in a full year at 1986-87 income levels.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total Exchequer revenue derived through income tax payments by self-employed persons in each of the last 15 years for which figures are available; what is this figure as a percentage of total income tax payments in each of those years; and what was the average per capita amount of income tax paid by self-employed persons in each of those years.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 11 February 1986, c. 427]: Available estimates are as follows, based on the annual sample surveys of personal incomes. The table relates to single people and married couples whose main source of income (usually the largest source) is from self-employment; and the estimates are of liabilities to tax (including liabilities in respect of other sources of income) rather than payments of tax.

Single people and married couples whose main source of income is from self-employment

Year	Number (thousands)	Income tax liabilities: Total (£ billion)	Per tax unit (£)	As percentage of income tax liabilities of all single people and married couples
1979-80	1,760	2·2	1,250	9·6
1980-81	1,820	2·6	1,430	9·8
1981-82	1,840	3·1	1,690	10·2
1982-83	1,970	3·5	1,790	10·9
1983-84	2,100	*4·1	*1,940	*11·6

* These figures are not comparable with those for the earlier years since the information for income tax liabilities in 1983-84 has been collected before basic rate relief under MIRAS. Comparable figures are not available, but the figures in the second and third column would be lower than shown and that in the final column little changed.

European Monetary System

26. Mr. Marlow asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of the European Economic Community financial mechanism.

Mr. Brooke: The new EEC financial mechanism agreed at Fontainebleau is working effectively. The 1986 Community budget contains provision for a 1,400 million ecu (c £850 million) abtatement for the United Kingdom which is in respect of its excessive net contribution in 1985. The January and February VAT payments already made have each duly been abated by about £70 million. In addition, the United Kingdom has received the 1,000 mecu (£605 million) abatement agreed separately at Fontainebleau in respect of its excessive net contribution in 1984.

Inflation

27. Mr. Portillo asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the average level of inflation since June 1983.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Between June 1983 and December 1985 the annualised increase in the retail prices index was 5·1 per cent.

43. Mr. Forth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the average rate of inflation for each Parliament since 1956, and for this Parliament to date.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The annualised rates of increase in the retail prices index between the relevant dates are as follows:

From		To		Per cent.
May	1955	September	1959	3·0
October	1959	September	1964	3·1
October	1964	March	1966	4·3
April	1966	May	1970	4·6
June	1970	February	1974	9·5
March	1974	September	1974	17·0
October	1974	April	1979	15·2
May	1979	May	1983	11·5
June	1983	December	1985	5·1

46. Mr. Andrew McKay asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the current level of inflation.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Over the 12 months to December 1985, the retail prices index increased by 5·7 per cent.

61. Mr. Boyes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the current United Kingdom levels of inflation compared with Germany, France, the United States of America and Japan.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The annual rate of consumer price inflation in November 1985 (the latest date available for international comparisons) for the United Kingdom, Germany, France, the United States of America and Japan were respectively 5·5 per cent., 1·8 per cent., 4·8 per cent., 3·6 per cent. and 1·9 per cent.

Taxation

28. Mr. Wareing asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to reduce taxation as a percentage of gross national product.

Mr. Moore: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget statement.

29. Mr. Greenway asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have ceased to pay tax as a result of Government policies since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: In 1985-86 about 1·4 million fewer individuals will pay income tax, compared with an indexed 1978-79 tax regime.

30. Mr. Pike asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated percentage of pay a married man with two children on average earnings receives in take home pay after tax and national insurance at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Moore: 77·9 per cent. taking account, in addition, of child benefit.

34. Mr. Nicholls asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received in the last six months concerning the tax burden on the lower paid.

Mr. Moore: I have received a large number of representations covering a variety of proposals.

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether, in the manner of the answer given on 18 April 1985 Official Report, column 243, he will publish and update the tax relief figures for 1985-86;

(2) whether, in the manner of the answer given on 14 February 1985, Official Report, column 288, he will publish an updated table on direct revenue effects for 1985-86.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Local Authorities (Capital Receipts)

31. Mr. Spencer asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the contribution to control of the rate of inflation arising from restrictions on local authority spending of capital receipts.

Mr. MacGregor: Steady adherence to the medium term financial strategy has been the key to the Government's success in reducing inflation. Continued restraint on all public spending and borrowing—local authorities included—is vital if further progress towards stable prices is to be made. However, it is not possible to isolate the effect of the controls on local authority spending from other controls on public expenditure.

Interest and Exchange Rates

35. Mr. Straw asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards interest rates and the exchange rate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The Government will continue to take whatever steps are necessary to maintain downward pressure on inflation.

Interest Rates

37. Mr. Clelland asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the level of interest rates.

41. Mr. Foulkes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the current level of real interest rates.

48. Mr. Soames asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on interest rates.

58. Mr. Hayes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the present level of interest rates.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer hon. Members to the answer my right hon. Friend gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Carshalton and Wallington (Mr. Forman).

40. Mr. Norman Atkinson asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the likely impact on British manufacturing industry of lower interest rates.

49. Mr. Dykes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the present relationship between the level of interest rates charged to borrowers through the banking system and the real rate of growth of the manufacturing base and the United Kingdom economy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The level of interest rates is only one of the factors which affect the economy. This year we expect both manufacturing output and GDP to continue the steady growth we have seen for the past five years.

59. Mr. Bermingham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning the level of interest rates.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend has received a number of letters from members of the public and other bodies on the subject.

Capital Expenditure

38. Mr. Craigen asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about public sector capital expenditure.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the relevant sections of the recently published 1986 public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702), copies of which are in the Library.

World Debt

39. Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has made any assessment of the cost to the United Kingdom of writing off the debts of the world's poorest countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Although our policy of commuting aid loans to grants to the poorest countries has benefited 21 countries at a cost of £987 million, we have made no assessment of the cost to the United Kingdom of writing off all the debts of such countries.

Scientific and Medical Research

44. Lord James Douglas-Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to introduce fiscal incentives to increase private sector investment in scientific and medical research in universities.

Mr. Moore: Tax relief is already available for payments to universities for research in a wide variety of circumstances.

Value Added Tax

47. Mr. Freud asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to seek to change the current incidence of levy of value added tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I regret that I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget statement.

Bingo Duty

50. Mr. Greg Knight asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current estimated cost per annum of the inspection, monitoring and collection of bingo duty from non-profit making working men's clubs.

Mr. Brooke: The cost of administering the betting and gaming duties as a whole in 1984-85 was £6·4 million, or approximately 1 per cent. of the revenue raised. I regret that the part of this cost attributable to bingo duty cannot readily be ascertained, and it would in any case not be possible to identify the costs relating to the clubs my hon. Friend has in mind.

Economic Demand

51. Mr. Knox asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of total demand in the economy.

Mr. MacGregor: Total real demand in the economy, interpreted as total final expenditure on goods and services, is provisionally estimated to have risen by 3½ per cent. in 1985 and a further 3½ per cent. rise is expected this year.

Business Expansion Scheme

52. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the funds raised by the business expansion scheme has gone to manufacturing companies.

Mr. Moore: In 1983-84 about one third of the amount of qualifying investment went to manufacturing companies. Information about 1984-85 investments is still incomplete.

Mr. Rowe asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has information on the average rate and total cost of the fees and professional and related charges levied by institutions or other financial intermediaries against funds raised under the provisions of the business expansion scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: This information is not collected.

Heritage Assets (Taxation)

53. Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will bring forward proposals to alleviate the incidence of capital taxation upon heritage assets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget statement.

Economic Improvement

54. Mr. James Lamond asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what improvement there has been in the economy of the United Kingdom in the last year.

Mr. MacGregor: Among the factors, GDP is provisionally estimated to have grown by 3½ per cent. in 1985, inflation fell to 5½ per cent. in the last quarter of 1985 and the latest employment figures show an annual rise of 220,000.

Company Profitability

55. Mr. Michael Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the level of company profitability at present compared with 10 years ago.

Mr. MacGregor: On the basis of figures for the first three quarters of the year, the profitability of all industrial and commercial companies in 1985, as measured by the net pre-tax real rate of return on capital employed, is believed to have been about three times higher than in 1975.

Johnson Matthey Bank

56. Mr. Skinner asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with the Governor of the Bank of England regarding the sale of Johnson Matthey Bank.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) on 16 January at column 649.

Macroeconomic Policy

57. Mr. Michie asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the impact of his macroeconomic policy on the level of employment.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government's macroeconomic policy, together with its supply-side measures, have led to the creation of nearly 700,000 jobs since June 1983, more than in all of the other European Community countries put together.

Building Alterations (VAT)

60. Mr. Hannam asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations have been received on the effect value added tax on building alterations is having on charities.

Mr. Brooke: Since April 1985 21 letters have been received about the effect of value added tax on the cost of building alterations incurred by charities.

Unemployment Costs

62. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the Government's estimate of the overall annual cost to the Exchequer of unemployment; and how this figure is calculated.

Mr. MacGregor: It is estimated that the overall cost to the Exchequer of benefits to the unemployed was about £6,800 million in 1985-86. It is not possible to estimate the revenue forgone.

Budget Representations

63. Mr. Parry asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from the construction industry concerning his forthcoming Budget.

Mr. Moore: I have received a number of representations covering a variety of proposals.

National Economic Development Council

Mr. Haynes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next plans to meet the National Economic Development Council.

Mr. MacGregor: Wednesday 5 March 1986.

Oil Prices (Economic Effects)

Mr. Hayward asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the overall effect in terms of jobs on the British economy arising from the fall in production costs by the recent decline in the price of crude oil; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: Industry will certainly benefit from lower production costs as oil prices fall; but the outlook for employment still depends crucially on the level of pay settlements.

Lloyd's (Reinsurance)

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what view the Inland Revenue takes on future reinsurance at Lloyd's for the purposes of the payment of tax.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Cigarettes (Taxation)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has of the effect on the revenue of increasing the tax upon cigarettes by 6p, 13p and 20p per 20 cigarettes, respectively.

Mr. Brooke: The estimated net additional revenue, at 1986-87 prices, would be:

Increase in price of 20 cigarettes (pence)	Full year revenue yield (£ million)
6	190
13	405
20	610

The larger the price increase, the greater the degree of uncertainty to which the estimates are subject.

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Dr. McDonald asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the estimated cost of providing mortgage interest tax relief in 1985-86 and 1986-87, at 1985-86 prices, showing separately the estimated cost of mortgages previously under the option mortgage scheme.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 31 January 1986, c. 647]: The total cost of mortgage interest relief is estimated to be about £4,750 million in 1985-86. It is not possible to distinguish the cost of relief for those mortgages which were previously under the option mortgage scheme. It would be premature to provide an estimate for 1986-87, since the cost will depend on the amounts of mortgage lending and interest rates as well as on the 1986-87 income tax rates and bands.

DEFENCE

Ammunition

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Defence what are the size, number and names of foreign manufacturers who have supplied 5·56 mm ammunition to the United Kingdom in the years (a) 1981-82, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1983-84 and (d) 1984-85, respectively; and what steps he has taken to satisfy himself that these tenders held no element of state subsidy.

Mr. Lee: The information is as follows:

Size	Number purchased by MOD (000)	Manufacturer
1981-82
Nil
1982-83
5·56 Blank	100	Dynamit Nobel
1983-84
5·56 Ball (M193)	2,900	Hirtenberger Patronen
5·56 Blank	600	Dynamit Nobel
1984-85
5·56 Ball (M193)	2,000	Hirtenberger Patronen
5·56 Tracer	1,000	Fabrique Nationale

When purchasing the ammunition, we had no reason to establish whether the tenders contained an element of state subsidy. Ammunition of this type was not available from a United Kingdom manufacturer at the material times and therefore foreign procurement was a necessity.

Mrs. Dunwoody asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the tender procedure for the purchase of 5·56 mm ammunition by the Government will be opened to overseas manufacturers during 1985-86.

Mr. Lee: Tenders for 5·56 mm ammunition in 1985-86 were opened to overseas manufacturers only to the extent dictated by the non-availability of suitable United Kingdom rounds.

NATO

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will state the posts, ranks and responsibilities of his officials who represent the United Kingdom on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation planning board for European inland surface transport; how often this committee meets; and where it meets.

Mr. Stanley: I shall answer shortly.

Low Flying

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many special defence exercises took place in 1985 involving low-flying training; and if he will publish in the Official Report the names of the exercises, their duration, and the extent of additional low flying undertaken.

Mr. Lee: In 1985 the defence exercises which involved unusual or an additional amount of low flying were:

Exercise	Duration
Purple Victory	20 days
Minibus	15 days
Mallet Blow (series of three exercises)	14 days total
Gryphon's Gold	10 days
Brave Defender	8 days
Priory (series of two exercises)	7 days total
Fast Buzzard	7 days
Hardy Crab	7 days
Rampant Horde	7 days
Wild Bellerophon	6 days
Black Boy	5 days
Central Enterprise	5 days
Chequered Flag	5 days
OSEX 11	5 days
Bronco	2 days
Feldom Moor/Northern Warrior	2 days
Green King	2 days
Long Hop	2 days
Polar Dawn	2 days
Swift Drop	2 days

The extent of any additional low flying undertaken during these exercises is not readily available, and could not be obtained without disproportionate effort.

Armoured Personnel Carriers

Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any proposals to purchase armoured personnel carriers for the British troops in the Berlin Brigade with money provided by the German Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Gainsborough and Horncastle (Mr. Leigh) on 24 January at columns 333-34.

British Forces (Berlin)

Mr. Hawksley asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to seek to amend the 26 May 1952 declaration on Berlin, Cmd. 8564, in so far as it relates to the purchase of armoured equipment for British forces stationed in Berlin.

Mr. Stanley: No.

Research and Development

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence what expenditure for research and development was allocated in 1983-84 to those companies listed in annex G of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates", Cmnd. 9430-I, which were paid over £100 million for equipment in 1983-84.

Mr. Lee: Research and Development expenditure totalling approximately £800 million was allocated in 1983-84 to those companies listed in annex G of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates", Cmnd. 9430-I, which were paid over £100 million for equipment in 1983-84. This represents over half of total extramural research and development expenditure with private industry and public corporations in that year. Expenditure allocated to the individual companies is commercial in confidence.

Departmental Land (Risley)

Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Defence for what purpose the 94 acres of woodland at Risely in Bedfordshire are still held by his Department; why they are not fenced off; if there is any danger of contamination from the adjoining three acres which are fenced off and contain warning signs of a poison gas area; and if he has any intention of returning the 94 acres to civilian use.

Mr. Norman Lamont: As my noble Friend the Minister of State for Defence Support confirmed in his letter of 11 November 1985 to the hon. Member, the 3-acre former storage site at Risely has to remain in MOD ownership until we have totally reliable information on the nature of the chemical contamination. This will be the subject of investigation later this year. The surrounding 94 acres is being retained as there is a greater degree of risk, should it be sold and developed for housing, that members of the public might break into the fenced area. The unfenced area is not itself contaminated.

TRANSPORT

London Country Bus Services Ltd.

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 3 February, Official Report, column 45, when he expects to make a decision on the future structure of London Country Bus Services Limited to enable the management and staff to consider putting forward purchase proposals.

Mr. Ridley: I have today given the National Bus Company directions under section 48(5) of the Transport Act 1985, requiring it to make provision in its disposal programme for the division by 1 September 1986 of the local bus operations of four of their subsidiaries. A copy of the directions has been laid before each House. The details are as follows:

Subsidiary	To be divided into:
United Automobile Services Ltd.	3 parts
Ribble Motor Services Ltd.	3 parts
Crosville Motor Services Ltd.	2 parts
London Country Bus Services Ltd.	4 parts

NCB's main objective under the 1985 Act is to promote sustained and fair competition, both between its own subsidiaries and between those operators and others. The board of NBC proposed last year the division of five of the company's subsidiaries: Bristol Omnibus, Southdown, United Counties, Alder Valley and United Automobile. They did not consider it appropriate to split up Ribble, Crosville and London Country because it would, in its view, weaken the competitive position of these companies and delay their privatisation. My view, based on a detailed analysis of local circumstances by my consultants, Price Waterhouse, is that these three very large companies could, if left intact, undermine the development of competition in large areas of the country and so deny many bus passengers the early benefits that deregulation is designed to bring.

I have concluded that the right way to proceed in order to allay the board's concern about the discharge of their duties under the Transport Act is to give directions to the NBC.

Four of the subsidiaries which the NBC itself proposed to split have already been divided. Division of United Automobile has not yet taken place and I have therefore included it in the directions for the sake of completeness. The directions allow for part of United Automobile to join NBC's East Yorkshire subsidiary and for part of Ribble to join Cumberland Motor Services, as suggested by NBC.

The directions will resolve the uncertainty about the future structure of these companies and will enable the local managers and employees to consider whether to make proposals to buy their companies. I very much hope that they decide to do so.

Road Safety

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to the answer of 3 February, Official Report, column 40, he will publish periodically the results of the Transport Road Research Laboratory monitoring of the road safety schemes referred to in the answer; and with what frequency.

Mr. Michael Spicer: These schemes are each being monitored for a period of two years after implementation and a full assessment of their effects will be made at the end of this period. It is intended that these results will be published in TRRL research reports. During the monitoring period, interim reports are being provided to local transportation committees as and when they are requested.

Roads (Maintenance)

Mr. Fry asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report for each highway authority the local road maintenance element of the rate support grant equated to the figure of £1,115 million given in the Department of Transport press notice No. 24 of 17 January and referred to in paragraph 59 of section 3.8 of Cmnd. 9702-II.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Rate support grant is paid in support of an authority's total expenditure and is not divisible between the different services it provides. One part of the calculation, the authority's grant related expenditure assessment is the sum of separate components for each service. These are calculated by applying a separate distribution formula to the total public expenditure provision for each service. The grant depends on an authority's actual total expenditure compared with its total GREA and the result of this calculation is incapable of disaggregation by service. The make-up of the GREs for each authority is set out in full in the "GRE Technical Handbook" issued in March each year. A copy is placed in the Library of the House.

Airedale Route

Mr. Waller asked the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made with the study of links between the A629-A650 Airedale route at Cottingley Bar and the Shipley eastern bypass; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are planning to consult the public this summer about improvements to the A650 between Cottingley Bar and the Shipley eastern bypass. I shall write to my hon. Friend when arrangements have been settled.

Public Service Vehicles (Tests)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report, by operator group, the numbers of public service vehicles which failed the annual test for the South Wales traffic area for each of the past five years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Public service vehicle annual test statistics are available only from 1982-83 onwards. The number of failures after rectification of minor faults is as follows:

South Wales traffic area—PSV failure rate (by operator group)

Operator	Total number of tests	Number failed	Per cent.
1982-83
National Bus Company	922	266	29
Local authority	501	105	21
Private	2,176	747	34
1983-84
National Bus Company	834	112	13
Local authority	503	44	9
Private	2,198	658	30
1984-85
National Bus Company	693	64	9
Local authority	462	34	7
Private	1,859	515	28

M25 (Service Stations)

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for Transport when the decision was taken to site a service station on the M25 at Clacket lane, Titsey Wood, Croydon; when planning permission was granted; and if he will list all other sites approved, or currently being considered, for service stations along the M25.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Proposals for the provision of four motorway service areas on the M25 were announced on 30 July 1984. The sites proposed are at Clacket lane, Iver, South Mimms and Thurrock. No planning permission has yet been given for the site at Clacket lane. Our proposals for this site has been the subject of objections from local authorities. A public local inquiry is to be held, probably in the spring. A final decision will then be taken in the light of the report of the inspector who takes the inquiry.

Light Dues

Dr. Cunningham asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he proposes any changes in light dues following the Arthur Andersen and Co. report to him in April 1985.

Mr. Ridley: The recommendations in this report attracted a large number of comments from individual and representative bodies. I am considering the issues carefully and I shall make a further statement in due course.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate by what amount British Rail's external financing limit will be increased to cover the cost of new Channel tunnel-related rolling stock, freight locomotives, international passenger facilities, track and signalling improvements and maintenance facilities.

Mr. Ridley: BR envisages that it would need to spend up to £390 million if high speed passenger services are provided, or up to about £290 million if conventional speed services are provided. The actual amounts will depend on BR's consideration of each element of the investment on its commercial merits. The expenditure will be spread over several years, largely in the period 1990-91 to 1992-93. External financing limits for these years have not yet been set. For these reasons it is not possible at this stage to estimate the exact impact on BR's requirements for external finance.

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Transport what are the estimated costs of the road improvements necessary to cope with Channel tunnel traffic as outlined in the White Paper.

Mr. Ridley: The estimated total cost of the national road improvements specified in the White Paper is £135 million, all of which would have been incurred without a fixed link being built, in order to improve road links to the ferry points. The cost of improving local roads in the area is a matter for Kent county council, which will be submitting proposals for transport supplementary grant in due course.

Tachographs

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects publication of the final version of amendments to EC 543/69 and 1463/70 on tachographs and drivers' rest periods.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The consolidated versions of the amended drivers' hours and tachograph regulations (EC 3820/85 and 3281/85) were published in the Official Journal of the European Communities of 31 December 1985.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to issue consultation papers on (a) the application of the new derogation provisions in article 13 of European Community Regulation 543/69 on tachographs and (b) other changes to United Kingdom legislation consequent upon the amendments to the European Community regulations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Consultation papers on permissible derogations and proposed changes to United Kingdom domestic legislation will be issued shortly.

NATO Committees

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will state the names, posts and employers of the non-government officials who represent the United Kingdom on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation planning board for ocean shipping;

(2) if he will state the posts, rank and responsibilities of the officials who represent the United Kingdom on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation planning board for ocean shipping; how often this committee meets; and where it meets.

Mr. Ridley: The United Kingdom is represented on this planning board by a grade 5 officer, a grade 6 officer and a grade 7 officer from the shipping policy directorate and a grade 5 officer from the directorate of economics of my Department, and by a director and a manager of the General Council of British Shipping. In addition, the director of shipping policy (grade 3) in my Department is one of the two joint chairmen of the board. The planning board meets annually in plenary session alternately in London and Washington.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will state the posts, ranks and responsibilities of his officials who represent the United Kingdom on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation planning board for European inland surface transport; how often this committee meets; and where it meets.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The United Kingdom is represented on the planning board for European Inland Surface Transport by the head of the Department's defence planning and emergencies division (grade 6) accompanied by two representatives from the Ministry of Defence. The committee meets twice a year at NATO headquarters, Brussels.

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will state the post, rank and responsibilities of the official who represents the United Kingdom on the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation civil aviation planning committee; how often this committee meets; and where it meets.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The United Kingdom is represented on this committee by the grade 7 head of branch whose responsibilities cover civil aviation aspects of defence planning. The civil aviation planning committee meets twice yearly at HQ NATO Brussels.

Boeing 747 (Safety)

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the report he has received from the Civil Aviation Authority about the structural safety of Boeing 747 aircraft.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply on 7 February 1986, at column 272, to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Yardley (Mr. Bevan). The Civil Aviation Authority has informed me that the initial inspection of the aircraft skin showed that no United Kingdom registered were cracked. Subsequently, cracks requiring repair were found in the internal structure of three aircraft as a result of additional inspections.

The CAA expects that as further aircraft are subjected to these inspections more may be found requiring repair, but the evidence does not warrant a general withdrawal of the type from service because the cracking is within the structural capability of the aircraft. The CAA has agreed a programme of inspection and repair where necessary. Each aeroplane takes three to four days for this work to be carried out and all aircraft should be completed by the end of March.

East London (River Crossing)

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the report of the public consultation undertaken in October/November 1981 on which his predecessor based his decision on the preferred east London river crossing scheme announced on 27 July 1982.

Mr. David Mitchell: The results of the public consultation exercise were made available in a public statement issued in July 1982. Copies were placed in the Library.

WALES

Members' Correspondence

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report for the latest year for which information is available for each hon. and right hon. Member representing constituencies in Wales, the arithmetic mean in days that his Department took to reply to letters.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is given in the table:

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report for the latest year for which information is available, the total numbers of letters that he has received from hon. and right hon. Members representing constituencies in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Between 1 January 1985 and 31 December 1985, the latest year for which figures are available, Ministers in my Department received 2,667 letters from hon. and right hon. Members representing constituencies in Wales, which required substantive replies.

In addition several hundred letters were received but not recorded. These included letters that required a standard reply, were copied for information or provided further information about an ongoing case.

Local Authority Budgets

Mr. Keith Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will take steps to persuade Welsh local authorities to moderate their 1986-87 budget and rating proposals.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I am disappointed that the proposals announced by the Welsh councils markedly exceed the forecast level of inflation. As the local authorities understand, spending in excess of the settlement provision brings with it penalties in the form of reduced grant entitlement and hence increased rates. I shall shortly be discussing the situation with the Welsh local authority associations and I hope that as a result the proposals so far announced will be moderated before final decisions are taken.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Church Schools, Ealing

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the proposed level of expenditure by his Department for the year 1986-87 on church schools in the London borough of Ealing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: The capital expenditure allocations announced by the Department on 18 December 1985 included £331,000 in respect of continuing work on Phase II of the redevelopment of Twyford Church of England School in Ealing. Grant of 85 per cent. will be paid by the Department on this expenditure. No other capital works project at a voluntary aided or special agreement school in Ealing could be accommodated in the capital expenditure programme. The Department's contribution to expenditure by governors on repairs to voluntary schools within an individual local authority cannot be estimated in advance.

Chiropody

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will now reconsider his decision regarding the inclusion of the study of chiropody in his mandatory list of courses.

Mr. Walden: There is no present intention to reconsider the inclusion of chiropody courses among those which attract mandatory awards.

Teachers (Pay)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were teachers' salaries in January 1979 and January 1984, respectively; and what is the difference in real terms for each of the scales.

Mr. Chris Patten: The information requested is contained in the table. Each salary scale contains a number of incremental points and scale minima and maxima have been used for illustration.

Salary scales for teachers (P + S) in operation at January 1979 and January 1984

* Scales of salaries with effect from 1 April 1979 and 1 April 1983.
† Using the April 1978 and April 1983 RPI.
‡ Scale extended by two increments for teachers classed as good honours graduates ie £4,839 and £5,010.
¶ Good honours graduate teachers receiving £3,609 on 31 March 1975 were entitled to receive a personal salary of £5,355.
‖ Scale extended by two increments for teachers classed as good honours graduates ie £8,454 and £8,754.
• Good honours graduate teachers receiving £3,609 on 31 March 1975 were entitled to receive a personal salary of £9,435.
■ Salaries of qualified Deputy Head Teachers and Heads are determined by the school group ie, the number and age distribution of the pupils. The minimum and maximum incremental points have been used, starting at "below group 4" (the lowest group for Deputies), and group 1 for Headteachers, rising to group 14 (the largest schools) for both Heads and their deputies.

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the average headmaster's salary in January 1979 and January 1986, respectively; and what is the percentage difference in real terms.

Mr. Chris Patten: The Department does not hold information in the form requested. Teachers' pay is negotiated with effect from 1 April each year, and no increases has been implemented since 1 April 1984. The average salary for head teachers in primary and secondary schools in England and Wales was £6,920 in April 1978 and £13,250 in April 1984, an increase in real terms of 6·3 per cent.

Examination Results

Mr. Merchant asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to ensure that all schools in England are publishing examination results information in accordance with the Education (School Information) Regulations 1981.

Mr. Dunn: The regulations impose a duty on local education authorities and governing bodies to publish such information. It would not be possible for the Department to monitor the discharge of this duty in all schools, but any failure that came to the Department's attention would be pursued.

DEFENCE

Information, Press and Public Relations

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total number of people employed on information, press and public relations work in his Department in each of the past five years, together with the annual costs over the same period.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The number of service personnel and civilians employed on information, press and public relations work in the Ministry of Defence in the years 1982-83 to 1985-86, together with the annual staffing costs over the same period, is as follows:

Year	Numbers	Cost £ million
1982-83	222	4·0
1983-84	290	4·8
1984-85	282½	5·3
1985-86	249½	5·1

Figures for 1981-82 are not readily available and could not be obtained without disproportionate expense. The numbers given for 1983-84 onwards include all service personnel and civilians in complemented PR posts in London and in commands and districts at home and overseas; the 1982-83 figure was not prepared on this comprehensive basis.

Armed Forces Overseas

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will indicate the numerical strength of the armed forces in West Germany, Belgium, France, Holland and Italy; and if he will estimate the percentage of each of the individual totals that is represented by conscripts.

Mr. Stanley: The information requested is a matter for the countries concerned. Unofficial information on these countries' armed forces is, however, contained in "The Military Balance 1985-1986", published by the International Institute of Strategic Studies, a copy of which is in the Library.

Royal Navy

Mr. Viggers asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the anticipated manpower in the Royal Navy for each year until 1993.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is not the practice to give detailed forward figures for the strength of the armed forces, as these are subject to change in the light of operational and other considerations. As announced, however, in the 1985 "Statement on the Defence Estimates", on current plans naval manpower numbers are expected to have declined by about 11,000 in the early 1990s from the 1981 level.

United States Base (Cyprus)

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide details of the United States forces contingent at the Akrotiri base in Cyprus, in particular (a) the number of personnel, (b) the number and type of aircraft they support, (c) the role of the contingent and (d) the agreement under which the United States contingent is stationed there; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: I shall answer shortly.

Service Pay

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for Defence what were the salaries of an air marshal, admiral and general on 1 January 1979 and 1986; and what is the percentage difference in real terms.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The salaries of these officers on the dates concerned were:

Rank	1st January 1979 £	1st January 1986 £
Admiral, General (and Air Chief Marshal)	19,947	52,750
Air Marshal	15,62°	39,250

Note: The equivalent RAF rank to admiral and general is air chief marshal.

Over this period the salaries of admirals and generals (and air chief marshals) rose by 82 per cent. in real terms as measured against the retail price index. For air marshals the figure is 68 per cent.

Hong Kong

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will provide information about all facilities the British base in Hong Kong provides for visiting warships;

(2) if he will list by country and class, the number of visiting warships to the British base in Hong Kong in the last five years.

Mr. Stanley: I shall answer shortly.

Ascension Island

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will outline the facilities the British base in Ascension Island provides for visiting warships.

Mr. Stanley: I shall answer shortly.

SCOTLAND

Bathing Beaches

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report those bathing beaches in Scotland which do not presently conform with established EEC standards.

Mr. Ancram: No beaches in Scotland are at present listed under the EC bathing water directive.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what plans he has to monitor bathing beaches in Scotland to ensure they conform to EEC quality standards;

(2) if he will undertake to carry out and publish a study of the quality of bathing beaches at all major tourist resorts in Scotland.

Mr. Ancram: At the Government's request, local river purification boards are to monitor the quality of bathing water on 20 beaches in Scotland over the next two bathing seasons. Consideration will be given to publication of the results. The list of bathing waters is:

Nairn
Aberdeen
Cullen
Fraserburgh
Arbroath
Carnoustie
St. Andrews
Aberdour
Gullane
Kinghorn
North Berwick
Yellowcraigs
Pease Bay
Sandyhills
Ayr
Girvan
Irvine-Gailes
Prestwick
Saltcoats, Ardrossan
Troon (south)

National Joint Working Party on Physical Education

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy towards the future operation of the national joint working party on physical education in the light of the decision by members representing teachers to withdraw; whether he still proposes to issue guidelines on this subject; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Allan Stewart: Following the withdrawal of the teacher members of the standard grade joint working party on physical education, the JWP proceeded to complete its report. This was approved by the joint working parties steering committee and it will be issued by the Scottish Examination Board for comment by interested bodies including the teachers' associations. Whether or not the JWP is required to do any further work will depend on the outcome of these consultations.

Conveyancing Services

Mrs. McCurley asked the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he proposes to introduce legislation to permit financial and other institutions to offer conveyancing services in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: I have no plans to do so at present. The Building Societies Bill currently before the House will give my right hon. and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor power to recognise institutions for the purpose of providing conveyancing services in respect of land in England and Wales. I have decided that it would be inappropriate for me to take similar powers in Scotland where the house purchase and conveyancing systems differ significantly from those in England and Wales. I shall be keeping the position under review to ensure that the interests of those buying and selling houses in Scotland are adequately safeguarded.

PRIME MINISTER

Top Salaries Review Body

Mr. William Powell asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement about the future of the Top Salaries Review Body.

The Prime Minister: The Top Salaries Review Body is currently working on its 1986 recommendations and is expected to report in April.

Westland plc

Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to the answer of 11 February, what action was taken in connection with the report by the then Secretary of State for Defence alleging that the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry had urged the managing director of the leading company in the European Westland consortium to withdraw in the national interest, during the period between the receipt by the private office of that report on 8 January and the discussion of Westland plc by the Cabinet on 9 January.

The Prime Minister: As is clear from the text of Sir Clive Whitmore's letter of 13 January to Sir John Cuckney, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House on 27 January, that letter was written in response to a letter from Sir John Cuckney of 10 January putting questions about Government policy.

Mr. Dobson asked the Prime Minister whether she spoke to Sir Raymond Lygo between the publication on 15 January of his verbatim notes of his meeting with the then Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, and the publication of his letter to him of 17 January.

The Prime Minister: No.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Pensions

Mr. Harvey asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if similar pension arrangements to those that will apply for Hong Kong civil servants after 1997 will be extended to other surviving former overseas colonial service employees.

Mr. Raison: Arrangements for pensions for Hong Kong civil servants are the responsibility of the Hong Kong Government and are not therefore applicable to former overseas colonial service officers elsewhere.

Aid

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the present level of aid to (a) Nicaragua, (b) El Salvador, (c) Honduras and (d) Guatemala.

Mr. Raison: I have no more recent information than I gave in the answer to the hon. Member's question on the same subject on 11 November 1985 at column 38.

Developing Countries

Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the figures for (a) current and (b) constant 1974 prices and (c) expressed as a proportion of gross national product for official, private and total flows from the United Kingdom to developing countries for each calender year since 1974.

Mr. Raison: The information requested is contained in the following tables:

HOME DEPARTMENT

Air Weapons

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to follow up the "Gun Sense is Good Sense" campaign in 1983; and what further measures he proposes to continue education about the hazards arising from misuse of air weapons.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I continue to attach great importance to ensuring that people who acquire air weapons are correctly instructed in their use. It was always our intention to continue the education process after the formal campaign had ended. The material produced in connection with the campaign is still being used, and the television films were shown about 60 times in the first nine months of 1985. In the light of our assessment of the campaign I am considering the feasibility and cost of further campaigns in those areas in which the highest number of air weapons offences have been recorded.

Mr. Cohen asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for firearms certificates relating to the possession and purchase of licensable air weapons have been (a) granted and (b) refused in each year since 1979 (i) in London and (ii) in total nationally.

Mr. Giles Shaw: This information is not available. Under the Firearms (Dangerous Air Weapons) Rules 1969 certificates are only required in respect of certain high powered air weapons. I understand from inquiries made of police firearms officers that they receive very few applications for such certificates.

Hong Kong

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many representations he has received on the nationality position of non-ethnic Chinese citizens in Hong Kong after 1997.

Mr. Waddington: About 40.

Inner City Policing

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reassess the Scarman proposals for inner city policing.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Action has been taken on the specific recommendations for the police in Lord Scarman's report on the 1981 Brixton disorders. The principles of policing upon which Lord Scarman based his proposals continue to be the underlying principles of policing in this country, and will continue to be developed to try to meet the needs of the community which the police serve.

Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis

Mr. Hayes asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Hurd: I last met the commissioner privately on 6 February when we discussed the use of firearms by the police. The commissioner and a number of his senior colleagues also attended the meeting which I held on 10 February with the London Boroughs' Association, the Association of London Authorities, and the Outer London Districts Metropolitan Police Consultative Association to discuss his recent strategy report. A wide range of subjects was discussed at that meeting, including finance, manpower, ethnic minority recruitment, the force reorganisation, co-operation between the police and local authorities, the Holloway road assault case, standards of professional conduct and traffic matters.

Styal Prison

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any proposals for increasing the staffing at Her Majesty's prison, Styal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Arrangements have been made for five additional officers to take up post at Styal with effect from 31 March.

Police (Pay)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the salaries of constables, sergeants and chief inspectors on 1 January in 1979 and 1986; and what is the percentage difference in real terms.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information requested follows:

Rank	January 1979		January 1986
	Minimum	Maximum	Minimum	Maximum
Constable	3,189	4,809	7,212	12,033
Sergeant	4,683	5,406	11,508	13,203
Chief Inspector	6,198	7,260	14,991	17,388

The cumulative increase arising from annual pay settlements since January 1979 is 148·3 per cent. Over the period January 1979 to November 1985 underlying average earnings have risen by 106 per cent. while between January 1979 and December 1985 the retail prices index rose by 82·9 per cent. and the tax and price index by 81·3 per cent.

Animals (Experiments)

Mr. Hancock asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department which laboratories have been investigated under the Cruelty to Animals Act since 1980.

Mr. Mellor: All premises registered under the Cruelty to Animals Act 1876 are visited by inspectors, mainly without notice. The numbers of these visits since 1977 are given in Cmnd. 9574, page 30, table 24 together with the numbers of registered premises concerned. It is not our practice to give details of individual premises.

Immigration

Mr. Dubs asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to seek to amend the immigration rules or the Immigration Act 1971.

Mr. Waddington: As my right hon. Friend announced on 23 January, at column 274 the Government intend to introduce legislation in the lifetime of this Parliament to the effect that an offence of overstaying is committed on the day when the overstayer first knows that his leave has expired and that it continues to be committed throughout any period during which he remains in the United Kingdom thereafter.

As my right hon. and learned Friend, the then Secretary of State told the House on 23 July 1985, at column 894 the Government intend to introduce legislation to put an end to the sexually discriminatory features of section 1(5) of the Immigration Act 1971 in a way that preserves the Government's commitment to firm immigration control.

The Government have at present no plans to amend the immigration rules, but all immigration control arrangements are kept under continuous re-examination.

Police (Offices)

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidance is issued by his Department to chief constables and police authorities on the criteria governing, and the level of expenditure which is allowed for, removal expenses and the equipping of offices for senior police officers;

(2) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of the West Midlands about the amount of expenses he has claimed in the last financial year for removal of furniture, equipping offices and installation of burglar alarms.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Police authorities are required by the Police Regulations 1979, as amended, to reimburse removal costs reasonably incurred by senior officers joining their forces. It is entirely for the police authority to determine the sum paid in any particular case. It is also for the authority alone to decide what equipement should be provided for senior officers. The Home Office issues no guidance on these matters.

El-Al Aircraft

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether employees of El-Al are permitted to remove their weapons from their aircraft at Heathrow.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Firearms which are carried on board an aircraft for security purposes are required to be surrendered to the police or customs on arrival. If the aircraft is staying only a short time, the firearms are sealed in a container on board. If the aircraft is staying longer, the firearms are kept in safe custody by the police and returned shortly before it leaves.

South Yorkshire Police

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of South Yorkshire as to the number of people prosecuted in the last 12 months for which figures are available for the alleged illegal sale or renting of firearms.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Firearms

Mr. Allen McKay asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to introduce legislation to restrict the circumstances in which licences may be obtained for firearms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given yesterday to a question from the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Meadowcroft) at column 516.

Immigrant Prisoners (Relocation)

Mrs. Roe asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for the relocation of those detained in prison in the London area under powers in the Immigration Act 1971.

Mr. Hurd: As a result of pressures on the prison system in the London area it has become necessary to use for other purposes the accommodation currently set aside for Immigration Act detainees at Ashford remand centre. After considering various alternatives I have decided that such detainees should, for the foreseeable future be accommodated in Latchmere house remand centre in Richmond-upon-Thames. One landing will be set aside for their exclusive use and it is planned that they should move there in the latter half of this month. This will not alter the present arrangements under which some immigration detainees may need to be held in other London prisons from time to time.

ENERGY

Voluntary Insulation Groups

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on his policy towards the development of voluntary insulation groups.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department's energy efficiency office will continue to provide grants for voluntary insulation projects and for the national co-ordinating charity, Neighbourhood Energy Action. The number of projects operating is expected to double by the end of 1986, Energy Efficiency Year. My Department will continue to support the expansion of this programme in collaboration with the Manpower Services Commission's community programme.

Nuclear Materials

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury of 13 December, Official Report, column 803, he will set out the reasons why it would not be in the public interest to publish details of withdrawals of nuclear materials from safeguards under the tripartite safeguards agreement, Cmnd. 6730.

Mr. Goodlad: For national security reasons.

Plutonium

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury of 10 December, Official Report, columns 589-90, he will set out the reasons why details of plutonium exported for civil end use are regarded as being commercially sensitive.

Mr. Goodlad: Because there is a confidentiality clause in the contracts.

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury of 13 December, Official Report, column 804, he will (a) list the dates on which the plutonium exports to France referred to in his reply took place and (b) specify the international safeguards agreements under which these plutonium exports took place.

Mr. Goodlad: One export licence was granted in each of the following years:

1968, 1973, 1974, 1978, 1980, 1982, 1984 and 1985.

The material in question is subject to Euratom safeguards in France under the terms of the Euratom treaty. Shipments since 1981 would also be subject to IAEA safeguards under the terms of the agreement between France, Euratom and the IAEA of 27 July 1978.

Mersey Barrage

Sir Peter Mills asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to announce a decision on the Mersey barrage project; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The report of the Mersey barrage has been received by my Department and is now under consideration. I will, of course, consider seriously any proposals for taking the work forward.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Magistrates

Mr. Meacher asked the Attorney-General if he will list each bench of magistrates in the country showing the number of supporters of each of the main political parties on each.

The Attorney-General: I regret that this information could not be provided except at disproportionate cost. In any event, the information provided by a candidate at the time of appointment depends on the candidate's own description of his views at the time of application, not always clearly expressed, and may now be up to 40 years out of date.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Sittings Statistics

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will list the dates on which the House has met on a Saturday; what was the main item of business under discussion; and what time the House met and at what time the House subsequently adjourned, for each session since 1956.

Mr. Biffen: The information is as follows:

Saturday 3 November 1956:
Adjournment: Subjects of debate: Middle East and Hungary.
The House met at 12 o'clock and adjourned at 3 o'clock.

Saturday 30 January 1965:
The House attended the funeral of right hon. Sir Winston Churchill.

Saturday 3 April 1982:
Adjournment: Subject of debate: Falkland Islands.
The House met at 11 o'clock and adjourned at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will publish in the Official Report, a list showing the dates when the House sat later than 1.30 am and at what time the House subsequently adjourned for each Session since 1959.

Mr. Biffen: The information requested is as follows:

Norman Shaw North Issue Office

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Lord Privy Seal (1) if he will consult hon. Members and their staff who have offices in the Norman Shaw buildings regarding the extension of opening hours of the Norman Shaw north issue office; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will refer the opening hours of the Norman Shaw north issue office to the Services Committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Lord Privy Seal what steps he is taking to bring into line the opening hours of the Norman Shaw north issue office with the main basement Vote Office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: I will ask the relevant Sub-Committee of the Services Committee to review this question. I am sure that the Sub-Committee will conduct consultations among those concerned before making its recommendations.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Lord Privy Seal why there is a delay of parliamentary papers being delivered to the Norman Shaw north issue office; what steps he is taking to alleviate the problem; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: I am not aware of any general problem of delay in the delivery of parliamentary papers to the Norman Shaw issue office. Documents are sent between the main Vote Office stores and Norman Shaw by van twice daily; and papers for issue during the day are taken over by hand between van deliveries. Papers of the day are avialable at 10 am when the issue office opens. If my hon. Friend has any particular complaint, I will ask the Deliverer of the Vote to investigate it.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Lord Privy Seal how many (a) temporary or part-time staff and (b) full-time staff are employed by (i) the Norman Shaw north issue office and (ii) the main basement Vote Office; and how this compares with 1974 and 1979.

Mr. Biffen: The Norman Shaw issue office is manned by two full-time staff, and has been since its inception in 1974. They are assisted from time to time by other Vote Office staff drawn from other sections based in Norman Shaw. The main basement Vote Office has a rotating pattern of duties which involve:

24 part-time staff between 7.30 am and 10 pm daily.
8 full-time staff at varying times between 7.30 am and the rising of the House.

There are never more than three or fewer than two employed in the main store on duties equivalent to those in the Norman Shaw issue office.

Overall staff complement figures for the Vote Office are as follows:

	Permanent	Temporary
1974*	16	10
1979	18	19
1986†	19	25

* Norman Shaw Issue Office opened in 1974.
† New system for early-morning delivery within three miles radius of Westminster instituted in 1985.

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Lord Privy Seal what are the opening hours during sitting days of (a) the Norman Shaw north issue office and (b) the main basement Vote Office; and how this compares with 1974 and 1979.

Mr. Biffen: The opening hours of the Norman Shaw issue office on sitting days are 10 am to 6 pm. These hours have been the same since the office opened in 1974. The opening hours of the main basement Vote Office on sitting days have remained unchanged since 1842, namely 7.30 am to the rising of the House.

Irish Parliament ("Official Report")

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Lord Privy Seal if he will seek to make available in the Vote Offices copies of the Official Report of debates in the Irish Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Biffen: The Official Report of debates in both Houses of the Irish Parliament is available to hon. Members in the Library. I do not consider that there is sufficient evidence of demand to justify regular stocks being held in the Vote Office.

"Official Report"

Mr. Garrett asked the hon. Member for Berwick upon Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, how many people are on the staff of the Official Report; how many are qualified; what is the authorised staff level; and what was the rate of staff turnover during the past 12 months.

Mr. Beith: On 10 February there were 77 staff, including two part-time, in the Department of the Official Report. Of this number 17 were under training and 2½ were on unpaid leave. The authorised staff level is 78. In the 12 months to 9 February 1986, eight staff left the Department.

EMPLOYMENT

Job Release Scheme

Mr. Harvey asked the Paymaster General what estimates he has of the gross and net cost of extending the job release scheme to (a) those aged 60 years and (b) those aged 55 years.

Mr. Lang: Estimates for lowering the job release scheme age of eligibility to 60 were published in the Employment Committee's minutes of evidence of Wednesday 3 July 1985 on special employment measures (Cmnd. 487-i, questions 3 and 8, pages 9 and 12); and also in paragraph 3.36 and table 13 of the paper attached to the memorandum submitted to the Committee by Mr. Gavyn Davies, referred to in the minutes of evidence for Wednesday 10 July (Cmnd 487-ii, page 37). I am not aware of estimates for lowering the age to 55 years.

Industrial Wages

Mr. Wigley asked the Paymaster General if he will publish his most recent figures for the average industrial wage for (a) men and (b) women.

Mr. Lang: The latest available information on the average gross weekly earnings of full-time adult employees in manufacturing industries, distinguishing males and females, relates to April 1985 and is published in Table 5.6 of Labour Market Data in the December 1985 issue of Employment Gazette, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Graduates (Earnings)

Mr. Deakins asked the Paymaster General what information he has available to him about the value of postgraduate qualifications in terms of additional earnings for those holding such qualifications.

Mr. Lang: There is very little information available on the salaries of people with postgraduate qualifications. A number of professional institutes in science and technology carry out salary surveys of their members which include a question on postgraduate qualifications. The numbers involved are small and cannot be used to draw general conclusions about the returns to postgraduate qualifications even in the disciplines concerned. The surveys show that professional institute members with master's degrees earn salaries similar to those of their colleagues with first degrees. Members with doctorates tend to earn between 10 per cent. and 40 per cent. more than those in the same age groups with first degrees. The differences are greater for members of the Institute of Biology and the Institutions of Civil Engineers and least for members of the Royal Society of Chemistry and the Institution of Geologists.

Construction Industry

Mr. Stuart Holland asked the Paymaster General if he will estimate how many construction workers were unemployed in Great Britain in 1975, 1980 and 1985 or the nearest available years.

Mr. Lang: In May 1975 there were 148,568 unemployed registrants at jobcentres in Great Britain whose previous employment had been in the construction industry, and the corresponding number in May 1980 was 189,554. Industrial analysis of unemployment has not been available since the change in the basis of the unemployment count in October 1982.

Some information on unemployment by industry continues to be available from the annual labour force survey, although these results are not directly comparable with those previously available from the monthly unemployment count. According to the 1984 labour force survey, in the spring of that year there were an estimated 233,000 persons unemployed in Great Britain whose most recent job in the last three years was in the construction industry.

Jobcentres (Registers)

Mr. Watts asked the Paymaster General, pursuant to the answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 348, if he will list in the Official Report the number of people registered at jobcentres located within the travel-to-work areas referred to.

Mr. Lang: The following table gives the numbers of jobseekers who, on 3 January 1986, were registered at jobcentres which closely relate to those travel-to-work areas with an unemployment rate of 8 per cent. or less. It is not necessary to register for employment in order to use the jobcentre, nor should it be assumed that these figures represent all the jobseekers in the areas who are actively looking for work.

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

Budget

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the EEC budget for 1986 finally agreed by the Council balances anticipated expenditure and anticipated income; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Both the draft budget, as amended by the Council at the Second Reading, and the budget as adopted by the European Parliament, were in balance.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Enterprise Ulster

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes are proposed in the structure and operations of Enterprise Ulster.

Dr. Boyson: I am currently consulting the board of Enterprise Ulster and other interested organisations about the possibility that its functions might be carried out more economically by other means. No decision about its future will be taken until I have received, and given careful consideration to, the views of those consulted.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has about the attitude adopted by representatives of the nationalist community and the Roman Catholic Church towards the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Ulster Defence Regiment, following the signing of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

Mr. Tom King [pursuant to his reply, 7 February 1986, c. 271]: When the Anglo-Irish agreement was debated in this House on 26 November the leader of the Social Democratic and Labour party, the hon. Member for Foyle (Mr. Hume) expressed full and unqualified support for the police force in impartially seeking out anybody who commits a crime in Northern Ireland. I welcome this support. I am also aware of various other statements by nationalists and Roman Catholic clergymen about the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Ulster Defence Regiment made since the signing of the Anglo-Irish agreement.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Select Committees (Reports)

Mr. Higgins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of the reports from departmental Select Committees made since 1979 are now out of print; what percentage of these are out of print because demand exceeded supply; what percentage because stocks have been destroyed; and what percentage for any other reason.

Mr. Brooke: The precise information requested could be supplied only at disproportionate cost. However, reports of departmental Select Committees are allowed to go out of print only when stocks are exhausted and current demand does not warrant a reprint.

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. Meacher asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current distribution of mortgage interest tax relief by income bands under £5,000 a year, £5,000 to £10,000, £10,000 to £15,000, £15,000 to £20,000, £20,000 to £25,000, £25,000 to £30,000, £30,000 to £40,000, £40,000 to £50,000 and over £50,000; what is the number of taxpayers in each income band receiving this relief; what is the total relief per mortgagor in pound millions and as a percentage; and what is the average relief per mortgagor in each income band.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what view the Inland Revenue takes on future reinsurance at Lloyd's for the purposes of the payment of tax.

Mr. Ian Stewart [pursuant to his reply, 13 February 1986]: Reinsurance is dealt with in accordance with the normal income tax principles which apply to payments and provisions for future liabilities of traders.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Audio Tape (Levy)

Mr. Amess asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from musicians on the proposal to put a levy on blank tape.

Mr. Pattie: A number of responses to the Green Paper "The Recording and Rental of Audio and Video Copyright Material" (Cmnd. 9445) were received from organisations whose membership includes musicians. These representations were generally in favour of a levy. In recent correspondence, the Musicians' Union has pressed the case for a levy.

Price Marking Order

Sir John Page asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether, in view of the misleading bargain offers criticised in case report 129 of the Advertising Standards Authority dated 15 January, he will make a statement on the operation of the Price Marking (Bargain Offers) Order 1979.

Mr. Howard: I recognise the limitations of this order and the Government have already declared their intention to introduce replacement legislation as soon as parliamentary time is available.

As indicated in the statement to the House by my hon. Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Central (Mr. Fletcher) on 4 March last year, the proposed legislation will include provisions for a general prohibition on misleading price indications, with the relevant supporting detail being provided in a statutory code of practice. Consultations with representatives of the trade, enforcement authorities and consumer organisations are currently taking place on the draft of a code for this purpose which includes provisions covering the type of practice on bargain offers criticised in the Advertising Standards Authority's case report 129.

Man-made Fibres

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what has been the volume and value of man-made fibre imports in each of the last five years from (a) other member countries of the European Economic Community, (b) non-European Economic Community European countries and (c) the United States of America; and how these figures compare with United Kingdom exports of such products to each of those countries in each of those years;

(2) what has been the volume and value of man-made fibre exports in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has concerning the scale of the reductions in total capacity of the United Kingdom man-made fibre industry in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has concerning the volume of man-made fibre deliveries and production which was achieved in the United Kingdom during the last year for which figures are available; and how these figures compare with those for the last 10 years.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The information is as follows:

*Man-made Fibres

Westland plc

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under what authority the former Secretary of State acted in giving authority on 6 January for the disclosure of parts of the Solicitor-General's letter of 6 January to the then Secretary of State for Defence.

Mr. Channon: The circumstances have been fully set out by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister in her statement on 23 January and in the debate on 27 January.

Chocolate Eggs (Toys)

Mr. McKay asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to prohibit the sale of small plastic toys contained in chocolate eggs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I have no plans to prohibit the supply of such products. As my predecessor the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Central (Mr. Fletcher) said on 16 July last year at column 88 in reply to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East (Mr. Ross) there are any number of small objects which could cause the death of a child by choking. I can only add that apart from featuring prominent labels warning parents to keep small toys away from young children, suppliers are investigating ways of making plastic toys detectable by X-ray if swallowed.

Cotton Textiles

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the volume and value of cotton textile imports in each of the last five years from (a) other member countries of the European Economic Community, (b) non-European European Economic Community countries and (c) the United States of America; and how these figures compare with United Kingdom exports of such products to each of those countries in each of those years.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has concerning the volume of cotton textiles deliveries and production which was achieved in the United Kingdom during the latest quarter for which figures are available; and how these figures compare with those for the same quarter in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The available information is as follows:

Accident Statistics (Glass)

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many accidents have been reported where injury has been caused by either (1) people falling through or (2) coming into contact with (i) glass doors, (ii) glass panelling and (iii) windows internal and external and the glass breaking, in whole or part, in the years 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986 to the latest date available.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 13 February 1986, c. 521]: The information is not available in exactly the form requested. The only detailed information readily available covers accidents in and around the home. The home accident surveillance system collects information on non-fatal home accidents from a rolling sample of 20 hospitals in England and Wales. Analysis of the cases reported by these 20 hospitals yields the following figures:

	Home accidents recording involving			Total non-fatal home accidents (of all types) recorded in HASS
	Glass doors*	Glass windows	Other glass panes
1980	1,045	858	123	76,245
1981	1,155	980	153	87,900
1982	901	879	98	77,071
1983	1,246	1,069	202	98,878
1984	1,431	1,171	264	110,254
1985†	Figures available shortly			115,000

* Excluding cupboards.
† Provisional.

It is not known whether all these accidents involved the glass itself, nor whether the glass actually broke. However a more detailed analysis of the data for 1984 identified 2,001 cases in the HASS sample in which glass was directly involved (1,013 doors, 728 windows and 260 other panes). This means that at least 27,000 patients were treated in hospitals nationally. Over 90 per cent. of these injuries were cuts, suggesting that the glass did actually break; 23 per cent. were the results of falls.

TRANSPORT

Bourton and Zeals Bypass

Mr. Nicholas Baker asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the detailed programme for implementation of the Bourton and Zeals bypass.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Draft orders under the provisions of the Highways Act 1980 are to be published by Easter. We then have to allow time for the submission and consideration of objections and the holding of a public inquiry should one prove to be necessary. It is unlikely that we shall be able to reach this stage before the end of the year. Assuming a successful outcome to the public inquiry it should be possible to announce a final decision about the end of 1987. Final detailed design, preparation of contract documents and procedures for obtaining tenders are expected to take a further 12 months which means that work should start either late 1988 or early 1989. These timings would be strongly dependent upon there being no modifications to the orders following the public inquiry.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Pesticides

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will allow access to records of pesticides already approved under the provisions of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985.

Mrs. Fenner: We are proposing to make available to the public a full evaluation of each pesticide as soon as it receives provisional or full approval or undergoes a review under the statutory arrangements for pesticide approvals which are to be introduced under the Act. We also propose to consider, on a case-by-case basis, requests for access to the study reports submitted under the new arrangements, and to grant access where a request is justified in scientific terms. Details of these proposals are set out in the Consultative Document "Pesticides: Implementing Part III of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985" which is in the Library.

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the operation of his Department's stated goal of re-examining every approved pesticide every 10 years.

Mrs. Fenner: We are still consulting interested parties on the implementation of part III of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985, including the suggestion that all formulated products should be subjected as a matter of course to full scientific reviews at 10-yearly intervals from the date of their first commercial approval. A 10-year interval between reviews was suggested in the consultative document in the light of the experiences of registration authorities overseas; we will be examining this, and the proposals for review generally, in the light of all the comments received during the consultation period.

Pesticide 2, 4, 5-T

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report the tonnage of the weedkiller 2, 4, 5-T imported into the United Kingdom in each month since January 1983.

Mrs. Fenner: The tonnage of 2, 4, 5-T imported into the United Kingdom in each month since January 1983 is as follows:

1983
January	123·5
February	Nil
March	54
April	18
May	54
June	Nil
July	Nil
August	7·5
September	Nil
October	25
November	Nil
December	18
1984
January - December	Nil
1985
January-November	Nil

Figures for December 1985-January 1986 are not yet available.

Food Standards Committees (Official Secrets Act)

Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will cease to require members of committees concerned with food standards to sign the Official Secrets Act.

Mrs. Fenner: Members of the Food Advisory Committee and the Committee on Toxicity are not required to sign any such declarations. In common with any person with access to official information they are subject to the provisions of the Official Secrets Act and where appropriate therefore they are reminded of the need to observe commercial confidentiality.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Mr. Raoul Wallenberg

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) oral questions and (b) written questions have been addressed to his Department about Raoul Wallenberg; how many received answers on the day for which they were set down; and how many received holding replies, for each Session since 1979.

Mr. Eggar: Details, from our own records, which have been cross-checked with the parliamentary on-line information system, are as follows:

Parliamentary Questions on Raoul Wallenberg

Session	Oral questions	Written questions	Total
1979-80 (15.5.79-13.11.80)	0	0	0
1980-81 (20.11.80-30.10.81)	1	0	1

1984-85 (6.11.84-30.10.85)	1	9	10
1985-86 (6.11.85-to date)	0	10	10

All questions were answered on the specified day. No holding replies were given.

Draft Single European Act

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to publish a White Paper or other document stating the implications of and Government response to the draft Single European Act dated 27 January 1986.

Mr. Renton: The Single European Act will be published as a Command Paper following signature by all member states. We intend subsequently to introduce a Bill to make the necessary changes to the European Communities Act 1972. There will be an opportunity for full discussion of the implications of the Single European Act during the passage of the Bill.

Elena Gurevich

Mr. White asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library as much information as is in his possession about Elena Gurevich of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: The Case of Elena Gurevich and her family is known to us although our information is sketchy. Miss Gurevich, who was born in 1964, has been among those not allowed to leave the Soviet Union since 1974 when her parents submitted their first visa application to emigrate to Israel. This was rejected on the grounds that Mrs. Gurevicha had had access to classified information as a messenger in an institute which tracked sputniks. All subsequent visa applications have been similarly turned down.

Soviet Dissidents

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the names of the Soviet dissidents whose cases his Department has raised with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics' authorities in the past 12 months; and how many of them are Jewish.

Mr. Renton: The following human rights cases were raised with the Soviet authorities at both official and ministerial level in the course of 1985:

Dr. Andrei Sakharov (and Mrs. Bonner Sakharov)
Anatoly Shcharansky
Yuri Orlov
Iosif Begun
Nikolai Baturin
Vladimir Gershuni
Father Gleb Yakunin
Dr. Anatoly Koryagin
Raoul Wallenberg

A number of these cases were raised in the margins of the CSCE Ottawa experts' meeting on human rights. Five of the individuals are Soviet Jews.

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria he uses in deciding to make representations to the Soviet Government with regard to individual Soviet dissidents.

Mr. Renton: It is not possible in contacts with the Soviet leadership to raise more than a few of the many hundreds of individual cases brought to out attention. Those we do raise are chosen both because they are compelling in themselves, and to indicate our concern about various categories of human rights abuse and in some cases, persecution of particular national and religious groups. In making any selection we also give weight to representations from hon. Members and from the general public.

ENVIRONMENT

London Borough of Newham

Mr. Thornton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will require the Audit Commission to direct an extraordinary audit of the accounts of the direct labour organisation of the London borough of Newham, as they relate to the Little Ilford youth centre and the rebuilding of the Winor primary school; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend is aware of and concerned about the situation at Newham. However, in the first instance it is for the Audit Commission to decide whether to direct the auditor to hold an extraordinary audit. I am sure that if my hon. Friend contacted the Audit Commission with details it would be pleased to look into the matter.

Wimbledon Town Centre

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about Merton council's proposed agreement with Speyhawk plc for the redevelopment of Wimbledon town centre; and what reply he has given.

Mr. Tracey: The Department has received two letters referring to an agreement between Merton London borough council and Speyhawk plc for the development of the Wimbledon town hall site. As the agreement relates to planning applications for the site, which may come before my right hon. Friend, any comment by him could be held to be prejudicial, and he has simply taken note of the representations.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what meetings he has had recently with Mr. David Lea of the Trades Union Congress committee on nuclear waste; what views were put to him there on disposal of nuclear waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall answer this question shortly.

Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sites were on the list sent to him by the Nuclear Industry Radioactive Waste Executive for possible investigation for the disposal of low level, short and intermediate level nuclear waste.

Mr. Waldegrave: The proposals that the chairman of UK NIREX Ltd. sent to my right hon. Fried on 8 January are confidential. They are currently being considered.

Liverpool (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the recent visit to Liverpool of Lord Elton, Minister of State.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My noble Friend visited Merseyside as part of a series of visits he is making to review progress on abolition implementation. He met representatives of the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Society, the voluntary sector, the county branch of NALGO, the residuary body, and the co-ordinating committee, as well as members of the media. He found the visit informative and useful.

Building Regulation Advisory Service

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received any representations concerning the issuing of letters of assessment from the Building Regulation Advisory Service; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I shall answer this question shortly

Building Regulations

Mr. Bermingham asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what are the current United Kingdom building regulations regarding roof insulation standards; and what information he has as to how these compare with (a) Denmark, (b) Sweden, (c) Finland, (d) Norway, (e) West Germany, (f) Austria and (g) France, respectively;

(2) what are the current United Kingdom building regulations regarding wall insulation standards; and what information he has as to how these compare with (a) Norway, (b) Finland, (c) Sweden, (d) Denmark, (e) France and (f) West Germany, respectively;

(3) what are the current United Kingdom building regulations regarding floor insulation standards; and what information he has as to how these compare with (a) Finland, (b) Norway, (c) Denmark, (d) Sweden, (e) West Germany, (f) Austria, (g) Eire, (h) the Netherlands, (i) Switzerland, (j) France, (k) Spain and (l) Greece, respectively.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 13 February 1986, c. 511]: Information on the thermal insulation standards for the roof, walls and floors of new dwellings in various countries is included in the following table. In comparing standards, account should be taken of the internal temperatures and external weather conditions found in different countries.

The measure of heat loss through the roof/wall/floor (Watts per metre squared degrees celcius)

Cathedrals

Mr. Cormack asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give full details of the listed building status, together with dates of listing of all the cathedrals of the Church of England.

Mr. Tracey [pursuant to his reply, 7 February 1986, c. 282]: The schedule of listed buildings is as follows. I am also placing copies of my Department's "Guide to the legislation on the listing of Historic Buildings in England" in the Library of both Houses.

Notes: The dates given are the dates when the cathedrals were statutorily listed. The grades are explained in paragraphs 1.6 and 1.7 of the enclosed leaflet.

* The Diocese of Sodor and Man has a cathedral church but is excluded because the Secretary of State is not responsible for listing on the Isle of Man. The diocese of Europe is also excluded.

† The lising applies to the ruined cathedral church.

‡ Westminster Abbey is not included as it is not a cathedral.

‖ St. George's Chapel has cathedral status but there is no diocese. The chapel is provisionally listed grade I as this is the grade given to Windsor Castle and all the buildings within the walls. Windsor Castle is not statutorily listed at present but will be when Windsor is resurveyed again in the near future.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Disabled Children

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what is the approximate number of families with a disabled child at the latest available date;

(2) what is the estimated average amount of extra money spent per week by a family with a disabled child.

Mr. Newton: The information requested is not available centrally. Information on numbers of disabled persons by sex and age receiving attendance allowance and mobility allowance at year end are published in Tables 14.30, 15.30 and 15.31 of "Social Security Statistics 1984", copies of which have been placed in the Library.

The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys is undertaking on behalf of the Department a national survey of people, including children, with significant disabilities to obtain up-to-date and comprehensive information about their numbers, circumstances and needs. The results are expected to be published in 1988.

Mr. Kevin McHugh

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make the ex gratia payment requested on behalf of Mr. Kevin McHugh, of 39 Harland road, Tranmere, Birkenhead, on the ground that the local office, although aware of his children's enemesis, had failed to consider or arrange for extra help with laundry costs and so on, which request was made in January 1984 and referred to his headquarters in December 1984.

Mr. Major: Mr. McHugh has received substantial arrears of supplementary benefit for additional requirements in respect of his children. The arrears were limited by the independent adjudication authorities to 52 weeks before the date of request for a review in accordance with the law. This is in line with the provisions for national insurance benefits. The relevant law was then regulation 4 of the Supplementary Benefit (Determination of Questions) Regulations 1980 and is now regulation 87 of the Social Security (Adjudication) Regulations 1984. I regret that the referral of Mr. McHugh's subsequent request for an ex-gratia payment for arrears beyond 52 weeks was overlooked. An ex-gratia payment, however, cannot be given because to do so in this and similar cases would undermine the decisions of the adjudication authorities and circumvent the intention of the law. However, I understand Mr. McHugh has now appealed to a social security appeal tribunal. Whether such an appeal is heard is a matter of discretion for the appeal tribunal chairman. Mr. McHugh is however entitled to compensation of over £25 on the arrears which have been paid and this will be paid to him shortly.

Roho Cushions

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many cushions of the Roho type were purchased by his Department in 1983; and what is the average cost of such a cushion;

(2) if his Department will now purchase an additional supply of cushions of the Roho type to be made available to disabled patients; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tony Newton: Efficiency savings from the wheelchair service enabled the Department exceptionally to buy 725 Roho cushions in 1983. Prices paid by the Department to individual suppliers are subject to commercial confidentiality. We are considering whether any further purchase would be justified in the context of demands on the wheelchair service as a whole.

Family Income Supplement

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to in how many two-parent families, currently receiving family income supplement, the mother is working 24 hours or more a week; and what is his estimate of the number of two-parent families who will receive family credit in which the mother will be working 24 hours or more a week.

Mr. Newton: It is estimated that of the 116,000 two-parent families receiving family income supplement at the end of October 1985, 4,000 mothers were working full-time (30 hours or more weekly) and 9,000 mothers part-time. A breakdown at 24 hours is not available. We estimate, in the basis of the illustrative assumptions in the technical annex to the White Paper (Cmnd. 9691) that the number of two-parent families who will receive family credit in which the mother will be working 24 hours or more a week would be in the range of 15,000 to 25,000.

Hypothermia

Mr. Skinner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people over the age of 65 years died of hypothermia in the first three months of 1985 and the first three months of 1984 respectively.

Mr. Whitney: The numbers of deaths with a mention of hypothermia on the death certificate, regardless of whether it appeared as the underlying cause of death, of persons aged 65 years and over, registered in England and Wales in the first three months of 1984 and 1985 were 255 and 450 respectively.

Aids

Mr. Kirkwood asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what specific guidance has been given to dentists treating patients suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome; and what steps are being taken to ensure that acquired immune deficiency syndrome sufferers are not being denied treatment.

Mr. Hayhoe: Patients known to be suffering from acquired immune deficiency syndrome will normally be referred to the hospital dental service for dental treatment. My Department is not aware of any case where such patients have been denied treatment. Dentists were provided with the report of the expert group on hepatitis in dentistry (1979 HMSO) and I am advised that the precautions recommended in that report in respect of the treatment of all patients would be effective in controlling cross infection from the AIDS virus.

The Department will shortly be issuing guidance to all dentists on the treatment of patients who are HTLV III antibody positive.

Dementia

Mr. Macfarlane asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much funding is available for research in Alzheimer's disease in 1986-87; and what funds are available for research into the problems of senile dementia.

Mr. Whitney: The main Government-funded body carrying out research in this field is the Medical Research Council from its annual grant-in-aid from the science Vote of the Department of Education and Science. Under these arrangements the council is funding research into Alzheimer's disease and senile dementia. The Department also spends some £12 million a year on research into health and social services. Research projects are chosen to meet the needs seen in the various services, though it is true that there is much competition for the funds available, from researchers with proposals which are of good quality. At present three studies are being supported into the problems of the elderly mentally infirm, including those with severe dementia, at a cost of some £140,000 a year.

Board and Lodging Charges

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many young persons have been subject to the board and lodging charges limit each month since April 1985, broken down by (a) age, (b) sex, (c) application of either two, four, or eight-week rule, and (d) exemption categories.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 29 October 1985 at columns 439-442 for the information drawn from special returns submitted by local offices on the number of claimants whose claims were assessed between April and July 1985. An age breakdown of those claimants who were aged under 26 is set out in the table. Similar special returns have not been maintained for later periods. The collected data do not distinguish cases according to sex or the category of exemption given.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the number of staff serving in social security offices each year since 1979; what has been the average work load each year in the number of cases dealt with by each of them; how many staff each undertook home visits; how many home visits they made; and how many welfare visits each member of the visiting staff made on average each year.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Health Authorities (Efficiency Savings)

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set out the efficiency savings in expenditure achieved by each district health authority for each year since 1979.

Mr. Hayhoe: The information available centrally relates only to efficiency savings made by regional health authorities from 1981-82 onwards. Details are shown in the table. Regional health authorities plan to achieve cost improvements totalling more than £150 million in 1985-86.

† In 1983-84, regional health authorities were expected to achieve the efficiency savings shown, equivalent to some 0·5 per cent. of their cash allocations, but detailed returns on their achievements were not requested.

‡ From 1984-85, regional health authorities have been required to include planned cost improvements in their short term programmes and to report on their achievements. The table shows the cost improvements achieved.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people dissatisfied with decisions on their claims for single payments of supplementary benefit for extra fuel costs arising from exceptionally severe weather prior to the October decision of the Social Security Commissioners have applied for review by adjudication officers; and how many have received payment as a result.

Mr. Newton: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Disabled Persons Bill (Consultation Paper)

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he has sent, or will be sending, copies of his Department's consultation paper on the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Bill to all Members of Parliament;

(2) to how many organisations of, and for, disabled people his Department's consultation paper on the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Bill has been sent; and what basis for selection was used;

(3) if he will be sending copies of his Department's consultation paper on the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Bill to the Greater London Association for the Disabled and the Manchester disability forum.

Mr. Hayhoe: Copies of the Department's consultation paper have been sent to 24 major national organisations concerned with disability issues, as well as to local authority associations and appropriate professional bodies. Copies have also been placed in the Library. As I made clear when the document was issued, the Department will send a copy on request to any other person or organisation who wishes to have one.

NHS (Linen and Uniforms)

Mr. Chope asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the cost incurred by the National Health Service in each of the last four years for the purchase of (a) linen and (b) uniforms.

Mr. Hayhoe: The summarised accounts of regional and district health authorities in England together with those for the special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals show expenditure as follows:

	Bedding and linen £ million	Staff uniforms and clothing £ million
1981-82	42·4	24·7
1982-83	44·6	25·1
1983-84	43·5	24·5
1984-85	47·4	26·5

Water Rates (Benefits)

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the implications for the future type and scale of benefits available to assist low income families with the payment of water rates of the proposed legislation to privatise water authorities.

Mr. Newton: The Government believe that their proposals for the privatisation of the water industry will lead to an improved and more efficient service for all consumers, including low income households. Expenditure on water rates will be taken into account in setting benefit rates for the new income support scheme proposed in the White Paper "Reform of Social Security: Programme for Action" (Cmnd 9691).

Cancer

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the average annual figure for cases of lymphatic cancer and leukaemia among people under 25 years of age in the parishes of Burghfield and Aldermaston in Berkshire expressed (a) in total and (b) as a rate of incidence; whether there are demographic or other factors which would account for any divergence from national average figures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Data from the registration of newly diagnosed cases of cancers from 1961 are not readily identifiable at the parish level. However the table shows available information for the pre-1974 local authority area of Bradfield rural district which includes Burghfield and Aldermaston.

Registrations of newly diagnosed cases of cancer; area of usual residence Bradfield RD, 1961-1980, Persons aged 0-24 years, Numbers and rates per 100,000 population

Diagnosis	Total cases 1961-1980	Average annual registration rate per 100,000 population
Leukaemia	14	4·57
Lymphatic cancer	8	2·61

Great care should be taken in trying to draw conclusions from these figures. The data are based on very few cancer registrations; the age structure of the population also has to be considered. Both these factors can lead to differences between the local and national figures. After adjustment for the age structure, the standardised registration ratios for leukaemia and lymphatic cancer for the period 1961-1980 in Bradfield RD for ages 0-24 years are 159 and 116 respectively, compared with 100 in England and Wales as a whole. These differences (ie between 159 and 100, and 116 and 100) are not as large as might be expected to arise from chance variations due to the small number of cases in Bradfield RD.

It is not possible to determine whether enhanced recognition and registration of leukaemia and lymphatic cancer in Bradfield RD, or different diagnostic terms, accounts for any of the excess.

Anti-arthritic Drugs

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when he expects to be in a position to give a substantive answer to the question from the right hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, South requesting an estimate of the number of deaths each year due to the effects of all anti-arthritic drugs, to which a holding answer was given on 30 January, Official Report, column 620.

Mr. Hayhoe: I replied to the right hon. Member on 11 February.

Disabled People (Evictions)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will introduce legislation to prohibit the repossession of houses occupied by, or eviction of, families with one or more disabled family member without prior consultation with local social services departments; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I have been asked to reply.

No. It is for the mortgagees, landlord and the courts to decide, taking account of all the circumstances, on the most appropriate course of action in cases of arrears or default.

Social Security (Reform)

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the changes in disposable income after meeting housing costs as a result of the changes proposed in housing benefit in Cmnd. 9691, by client group, on the same basis as the tables showing the effect of structural reform, including the 20 per cent. rates contribution, in the technical annex to Cmnd. 9691.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1986, c. 596]: Using the illustrative assumptions in the technical annex to the White Paper (Cmnd. 9691), including a contribution to domestic rates of 20 per cent., the estimated changes in disposable income are shown in the table. For most households on income support, diminished entitlement arising from the housing benefit changes will be wholly or partially offset by increased entitlement arising from the switch from supplementary benefit to income support; the combined effect in these cases is shown in table 10B of the technical annex but, for the reasons given in the notes to the table following, the estimates are not exactly compatible. For most working families with children, decreased entitlement arising from the housing benefit changes will be wholly or partially offset by increased entitlement arising from the switch from FIS to family credit; the combined effect in these cases is shown in table 12(ii)B of the technical annex.

Notes:

(1) These estimates are based entirely on the Family Expenditure Survey (FES) simulation model. As explained in paragraph 2.8 of the Technical Annex, estimates of the combined effects of the income support and housing benefit changes on claimants currently claiming supplementary benefit were based on a model which imputed levels of general rates using 1982 (ie pre-housing benefit) data. This was done because there is no single source which includes information on both general rates and details of supplementary benefits requirements. When the effect of the housing benefit changes alone is required, more accurate results are obtained from the FES model. The certificated caseload derived from the FES has been adjusted to match the caseload implicit in the Technical Annex; this is somewhat different from that derived from local authority subsidy claims (as published in the Public Expenditure White Paper).

(2) The estimates exclude the effects of the family credit proposals.

(3) The estimates are not adjusted for differential take-up.

(4) Some totals may not be equal to the sum of the component parts because of rounding.

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will provide estimates for November 1985 of the number of standard housing benefit recipients, in total and according to the following household types (a) pensioners, (b) working households with children, distinguishing between couples and single parents, (c) working households without children, (d) others with children, distinguishing between couples and single parents, (e) others without children:

(2) if he will provide estimates of the numbers of losers resulting from the changes to standard housing benefit proposed in the White Paper on the reform of social security, Cmnd. 9691, including the suggested 20 per cent. rate contribution; how many of these would lose entitlement to housing benefit altogether; and if he will break the above estimate down into the following categories (a) pensioners, (b) working households with children, distinguishing between couples and single parents, (c) working households without children, (d) others with children, distinguishing between couples and single parents, (e) others without children.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to the replies, 16 January 1986, c. 702 and c. 698]: Using the illustrative assumptions in the technical annex to the White Paper (Cmnd. 9691) including a contribution to domestic rates of 20 per cent., the information requested is as follows:

Standard housing benefit: caseload and numbers affected by proposals
Thousands, Great Britain

	Estimated number of recipients under present scheme	Estimated number with reduced entitlement (including, in brackets, number with no entitlement)
Pensioners	2,430	1,470	(310)
Working households with children
—couples	370	310	(110)
—lone parents	80	70	(30)
Working households without children	230	200	(100)
Others with children
—couples	100	60	(10)
—lone parents	90	80	(10)
Others without children	330	210	(50)
All households	3,630	2,410	(620)

Notes:

1. Present scheme estimates have been made on a similar basis to that outlined in paragraph 2.10 of the Technical Annex. The total is consistent with the estimated numbers claiming standard housing benefit at November 1985.
2. Estimates of numbers with reduced entitlement exclude the effects of family credit.
3. The estimates are not adjusted for differential take-up.
4. Some totals may not be equal to the sum of the component parts because of rounding.

Housing Benefit

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many households (a) in total, (b) by tenure (council tenants, home-owners and others) and (c) by household type (pensioners, families with children and others) are expected to receive (i) more and (ii) less housing benefit by up to £1 a week, £1 to £1·99 a week, £2 to £2·99 a week, £3 to £3·99 a week, £4 to £4·99 a week, £5 to £7·49 a week, £7·50 to £9·99 a week and £10 a week or more as a result of the following changes to the housing benefit scheme outlined in the White Paper (1) the requirements that all households should meet at least 20 per cent. of their rates, (2) the changes to the needs allowance and taper formulae and (3) the treatment of capital; and if he will identify the gains and losses attributable to each of these changes individually and to the cumulative impact of all three.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 20 January 1986, c. 62-3]: The information is not readily available in the precise form requested. Using the illustrative assumptions in the technical annex to the White Paper (Cmnd. 9691), estimates of the effects of the structural reform to housing benefit, with and without a 20 per cent. contribution to domestic rates, analysed by tenure and household type, are shown in the tables. As explained in paragraph 2.12 of the technical annex, estimates of capital are highly uncertain; it is not therefore possible to provide a precise analysis of the effects of the structural change to the capital rules.

For most households on income support, diminished entitlement arising from the housing benefit changes will be wholly or partially offset by increased entitlement arising from the switch from supplementary benefit to income support; the combined effect in these cases is shown in table 10B of the technical annex but, for the reasons given in the notes to the table following, the estimates are not exactly compatible. For most working families with children, decreased entitlement arising from the housing benefit changes will be wholly or partially offset by increased entitlement arising from the switch from FIS to family credit; the combined effect in these cases is shown in table 12(ii)B of the technical annex.

Notes:

(1) These estimates are based entirely on the Family Expenditure Survey (FES) simulation model. As explained in paragraph 2.8 of the Technical Annex, estimates of the combined effects of the income support and housing benefit changes on claimants currently claiming supplementary benefit were based on a model which imputed levels of general rates using 1982 (ie pre-housing benefit) data. This was done because there is no single source which includes information on both general rates and details of supplementary benefits requirements. When the effect of the housing benefit changes alone is required, more accurate results are obtained from the FES model. The certificated caseload derived from the FES has been adjusted to match the caseload implicit in the Technical Annex; this is somewhat different from that derived from local authority subsidy claims (as published in the Public Expenditure White Paper).
(2) The estimates exclude the effects of the family credit proposals.
(3) The estimates are not adjusted for differential take-up.
(4) Some totals may not be equal to the sum of the component parts because of rounding.

(1) These estimates are based entirely on the Family Expenditure Survey (FES) simulation model. As explained in paragraph 2.8 of the Technical Annex, estimates of the combined effects of the income support and housing benefit changes on claimants currently claiming supplementary benefit were based on a model which imputed levels of general rates using 1982 (ie pre-housing benefit) data. (2) The estimates exclude the effects of the family credit proposals.
(3) The estimates are not adjusted for differential take-up.
(4) Some totals may not be equal to the sum of the component parts because of rounding.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give a breakdown of the losers from the £450 million cut in housing benefit under the Social Security Bill, by category of claimant and by numbers losing less than £1 per week, £1 to £2, £2 to £3, £3 to £4, £4 to £5, £5 to £6, £6 to £7, and more than £7 per week.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 7 February 1986, c. 286]: I refer the hon. Member to my reply today to the hon. Member for Dunfermline, East (Mr. Brown) which sets out the information that is readily available. This table shows the effect of the housing benefit changes only and so excludes the effect of family credit which is likely to contribute something in the range of £25-£50 million towards the overall reduction in housing benefit expenditure, on the basis of the illustrative assumptions in the technical annex to the White Paper (Cmnd. 9691).

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of households (a) in total, (b) by tenure and (c) by household type (pensioners, families with children and others) that will cease to qualify for any housing benefit as a result of the following changes to the housing benefit scheme outlined in the White Paper; (i) the changes to the needs allowance and taper formulae, and in the assessment of income and (ii) the treatment of capital.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 20 January 1986, c. 62-3]: Using the illustrative assumptions in the technical annex to the White Paper (Cmnd. 9691), without a contribution to domestic rates of 20 per cent. the estimated numbers who will cease to be entitled to housing benefits, analysed by tenure and household type, are shown in the table. As explained in paragraph 2.12 of the technical annex, estimates of capital are highly uncertain: it is not therefore possible to provide a precise analysis of the effects of the structural change to the capital rule.

Benefits

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what he estimates he will spend on single payments in 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88; and if he will publish a table showing the real value of single payments in these years compared with 1984-85;

(2) what he estimates he will spend on heating additions in the years 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88; and if he will publish a table showing the real value of heating additions in these years compared with 1984-85.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1986, c. 310]: Estimates of supplementary benefit expenditure are made on the basis of broad claimant types and separate, reliable projections of future expenditure for specific components such as heating additions and single payments are not available. In the financial year 1984-85 expenditure on single payments was £241 million while in the current financial year expenditure until 14 January 1986 was £243 million. No equivalent information for heating additions is available and the usual detailed survey data have been delayed as the result of the Newcastle dispute but it is estimated that expenditure on heating additions in 1984-85 was about £400 million.

Sir Brandon Rhys Williams asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish a table similar to table 6A in the technical annex to the social security White Paper, Cmnd. 9691 showing, (a) the number of people in each client group who will be unaffected by his proposals, (b) the numbers gaining or losing less than £1, (c) the numbers gaining or losing between £1 and £5 and (d) the numbers gaining or losing between £5 and £10, distinguishing in each case between (i) child benefit, (ii)supplementary benefit or income support (iii) family income supplement or family credit, (iv) free school meals, (v) free welfare milk and (vi) housing benefit, assuming a minimum 20 per cent. rates contribution.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 28 January 1986, c. 507]: I regret that the information is not readily available in the precise form requested.

Information about the impact of the change from supplementary benefit to income support and from family income supplement to family credit is, respectively, in tables 1A and 3(i)A of the technical annex.

In both cases a notional cash value for free school meals and milk is included in the tables; separate reliable estimates are not available for these benefits.

The following table gives information about the impact of the changes in housing benefit, including the effects of the family credit proposals, using the illustrative assumptions in the technical annex. For the reasons given in the notes to the table, these estimates are not exactly compatible with the technical annex. Child benefit is not affected by the structural reforms.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 91

SESSION 1985–86

3rd February—14th February 1986

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There will, however, be headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one will find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc., under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speakers rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
